CLOUDY SKIES today, with indications of showers, gave promise of boosting the rainfall figures for the present season, which this morning ranged between 1.50 to 2.00 inches in different parts of the county, almost an inch having been added during the past 48 hours.

The showers which began falling Wednesday night, drenched all sections of the county, the downpour being particularly heavy in the Greenville, Talbert and the Los Alamitos sections, when the rain gauges registered more than an inch.

In every instance rain reporting centers reported the season totals today well ahead of those on the same date of last year, most of them by an inch and more. In Santa Ana the gauge at Hill and Son registered .80 for the storm, and 2.01 for the present season, as compared with but .47 for last year.

According to R. D. Flaherty, manager of the Orange County Farm bureau, the generous rain of the past few days insures good crop condition and will go far to improve business conditions for the approaching holiday trade.

WILL HAYS, BRIDE DEPART FOR WEST

BETHESDA, Md., Nov. 28.—(UP)—Will H. Hays, motion picture executive and former postmaster general, was married here last night to Mrs. Jennie Herron Stutesman, widow of a former United States minister to Bolivia. They were enroute to the west today for a honeymoon trip.

The wedding united two prominent Indiana families. The bride is the daughter of Mrs. William Parke Herron, of Crawfordsville. Her father was the late Captain William P. Herron of the 72nd regiment of Indiana Volunteers in the Civil war.

Hays' first wife, from whom he was divorced, was Helen Louise Thomas, also of Crawfordsville.

Good Music Brings Just $1.27

BOSTON, Nov. 28.—(UP)—Disguised as a blind and elderly fiddler, Jacques Gordon, Chicago violinist, stood on a street corner here yesterday and played his $40,000 Stradivarius to see whether Bostonians really appreciate good music. He collected a total of $1.27 in small change.

WITNESS SAYS MOONEY NOT AT BOMBING SCENE

Reports Seeing Foreigner Leave Suitcase at Corner

MANILA, Nov. 28.—(UP)—Major Vincente R. Barros, U. S. A., retired, told the United Press today that he saw a man place a suitcase at the corner of Market and Steuart streets, San Francisco, the day of the Preparedness day explosion and that the man was not Thomas J. Mooney or Warren K. Billings.

"I saw him running away and grappled with him on the street," Major Barros, now a planter at Davao, said. "His features and characteristics were those of a Latin. He was not of the Mooney or Billings type."

Mooney and Billings were convicted of the bombing which occurred July 22, 1916, claiming the lives of 10 persons and injuring 40. They are now serving life sentences in prison.

Asked why he had remained silent for 14 years, Major Barros explained that it was because of his rank in the army and that he did not want to become involved in a sensational criminal trial.

"I was commissioned a lieutenant in the United States army in 1912," a statement of Major Barros said. "Four years later I obtained a leave of absence to visit the United States, arriving in San Francisco from Manila July 13, 1916.

"During the Preparedness day parade (July 2, 1916,) I posted myself on Market street near Steuart. I visited a lavatory and after returning to view the parade again I saw a man 50 yards away place a suitcase on the sidewalk and then he started running at top speed toward me.

"Becoming excited, I did not know whether to give him the right or left of way and we bumped against each other. I fell and he landed on top of me. I was angry and grabbed his leg but he jerked away, cursing me in a foreign tongue.

"Getting to my feet as speedily as possible, I pursued him but he gained ground and was soon lost in a throng of people.

"While still running I heard a loud detonation and found myself stretched on the street and saw people running in all directions. Being in uniform and fearing a repetition of the unfortunate experiece with the excited man who bumped into me, I hurried home.

"I saw pictures of Mooney and Billings many times. The man who bumped into me had features and characteristics of the Latin

NEW SNOW STORMS HIT MIDDLE WEST

CHICAGO, Nov. 28.—(UP)—Snow storms swept down from western Canada today, adding to the rigors of winter's first cold wave, which already has taken 100 or more lives in the northern half of the United States.

Temperatures hovered around the zero mark in a score of states between the Missouri valley and the Atlantic seaboard. Widespread suffering, snow blocked highways and many deaths were the results of the zero wave, which started a week ago in the Rocky mountain region.

The cold channel extended southward from the Canadian northwest, where blizzards tore down telegraph lines, southward to interior Florida, which experienced its first frost of the season. Chilling winds lowered temperatures in the southwest, and only the Pacific coast states enjoyed pleasant weather.

RAILROAD LEADERS TO SEEK RELIEF FROM COMPETITION

Would Curb Power Plan Duplication

Wilbur Reports on Danger In Overlapping Projects

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—(UP)—Power development in the United States may be seriously impeded "unless the state and federal agencies find a basis whereby each may properly supplement and not duplicate the other," Secretary of Interior Wilbur said in a summary of the annual report of the federal power commission.

Wilbur said control over water was a state, not a federal question, except for safeguarding the interests of navigation and federal properties. Some state officials, he said, have complained that the federal government is encroaching on their field.

The report said the commission's business was in a satisfactory condition and that only a few applications for large projects remained to be acted upon. Secretary of Agriculture Hyde and Secretary of War Hurley are the other members of the commission, which is to be replaced by a permanent commission of five members.

Steam produced electric power increased nearly 10,000,000,000 kilowatt hours during the year, which was the first in a decade during which hydroelectric production did not increase.

The commission has licensed 449 projects, nearly half of which are in the three Pacific states and nearly one-third in California alone. Some difficulty was reported in connection with applications for power development on the Colorado river, held up because of delay on Boulder dam, but, the report said:

"Applications qualifying for favorable action are now in process of authorization and those which appear out of harmony with the present situation are being held for rejection. The latter includes not only those in physical conflict with Boulder canyon but also the proposed development which are deprived of a possible market for their output for some years in the future on account of the large amount of power to be available from the plant at Hoover dam."

Infernal Machine Trunk Is Shipped To San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 28.—(UP)—Authorities today were eagerly awaiting the arival of the rude trunk containing the infernal machine found in the Cowles Publishing company building in Spokane. It is expected here early today and Deputy District Attorney Isadore Golden believes that several important questions may be answered through this evidence.

Great significance is attached to the two labels on the trunk bearing the address of the building in Spokane. The prosecutor intends to have the handwriting on them compared with that of Henry A. Ilse, arrested here last Monday night as a suspect. The labels are virtually the only documentary evidence connected with the shipping of the trunk.

Young Flier Drops 10,000 Feet When Plane Motor Fails

SAN DIEGO, Nov. 28.—(UP)—A 10,000 foot parachute leap from his fuelless plane was related here today by Gerald Nettleton, 20-year-old Newark, N. J., flier, unsuccessful seeker of a new junior transcontinental speed record.

Young Nettleton, who was within 100 miles of his Los Angeles goal, was lost in the clouds yesterday over the Cuyamaca mountains and ran out of gasoline while seeking his bearings.

As his motor died and the ship started to drop into the heavily timbered slopes, he calmly unbuckled his safety strap and went overside, to land near Pine Valley lodge.

TWO FERRY BOAT ACCIDENTS ON SAN FRANCISCO BAY ARE CAUSED BY BLANKET OF FOG

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 28.—(UP)—Dense fog which settled like a blanket over San Francisco bay today, reducing visibility to less than 100 feet, was the cause of two minor ferryboat accidents.

The Southern Pacific ferry Santa Clara, laden with commuters on its 8 a. m. trip between Oakland and San Francisco, was grazed by the bow of the British Bank line freighter Irisbank, in tow of a tug, enroute to Oakland.

At 11 o'colck, another Southern Pacific ferry, the Oakland, shortly after leaving its San Francisco pier for Alameda, collided with the freighter Pennsylvanian.

Captain Otto Olsen was in charge of the Oakland. After the ship docked and discharged its passengers, it was towed to the shipyards for repairs.

The second crash was the more serious, aithough there were no casualties or injuries reported in either collision.

The freighter made a deep gash in the side of the Oakland, and there was a momentary panic among passengers, who sought life preservers.

When it was discovered that there was no danger, quiet was restored and the Oakland continued on its way.

The Irisbank just grazed the bow of the Santa Clara, which, under command of Captain John Souza, had sighted the freighter, and was already backing water. There was no damage to either vessel.

All four ships involved in the two accidents were traveling at greatly reduced speed.

Fear Woman Flier Forced Into Gulf Stream On Cruise

MIAMI, Fla., Nov. 28.—(UP)—Possibility arose here late today that Mrs. J. M. Keith-Miller, British aviatrix flying from Havana to Miami and long overdue, might have been forced down in the gulf stream.

Airplanes searched lower Florida without finding any traces.

Strong headwinds prevailed between Havana and Miami. The ship in which Mrs. Keith-Miller left Havana at 9:11 a. m. was supplied with six hours of gasoline. Her course from Havana was understood to have taken no account of wind drift.

If out of gas, and blown from her course, aviation observers here said they believed it possible Mrs. Keith-Miller might have been forced down at sea.

Arizona, Mexican State Seek Huge Dam Below Border

PHOENIX, Ariz., Nov. 28.—(UP)—The states of Arizona and Sonora, Mexico, will join in petitioning the United States and Mexican governments for funds to construct a huge regulation dam below the border to prevent a repetition of the disastrous Nogales flood of last summer, Governor John C. Phillips of Arizona said today.

Plans for the project were made by the Arizona executive and Governor Francisco Elias, of Sonora, at a conference at Hermosillo, Sonora, this week.

MARCH SESSION FOR SENATE IS HELD POSSIBLE

World Court Issue May Be Presented By Hoover

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—(UP)—President Hoover may call the bloc controlled new senate into a special session next March to handle the world court issue, it was learned today from a source close to the executive.

Privately Mr. Hoover decided some weeks ago that he could not risk the court at the session which opens Monday. He fears that the senate would debate it at the expense of other business and thereby disrupt all his plans for the next year.

Unless the appropriation bills are passed before March 4 a special session of both houses would be necessary and the country will be in for another summer of legislation. A special session of the senate alone, however is another matter. The senate itself, without the house, can consider no general legislation, but only treaties and executive business.

The court treaty, providing for American participation in the Hague tribunal under the Root formula, has been resting upon Mr. Hoover's desk for about eight months. Petitions have been presented to him by the world alliance of churches and other peace organizations urging him to lay it before the senate at the earliest possible moment.

Torn between the desire to press for American adherence, which he wholeheartedly advocates, and the fear of what it would do to this coming session, the executive has begun a series of conferences with Republican congressional leaders in an effort to develop the special session idea.

HUSBAND SOUGHT AS ROOMER IS STABBED

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 28.—(UP)—Nicholas Vargas, 33, roomer at the home of Luis Guerrero, 35, was stabbed to death by Guerrero today.

Police were told by Mrs. Maria Guerrero that her husband returned home unexpectedly from his work in Santa Maria and knocked at the door. Vargas, according to the wife, opened the door and was met by Guerrero with a knife.

Guerrero fled after the stabbing and officers were searching for him.

WINNERS IN BIRD COLORING CONTEST ARE GIVEN PRAISE

EVIDENCE of very excellent and painstaking work was shown on the goldfinches, the birds which were colored in the contest ending yesterday. Many very good entries were sent in, and the judges had a hard time selecting the prize winners. In several cases, the goldfinches and the dandelions in the background looked almost as giod as they did in the charts which were displayed as examples to guide the contestants.

The first place prize iwnners in each group this week will receive the cash prize of $1.00, which will be placed in the mail today, and both the first and second place, prize winners in each division will receive photographs taken by Mr. Larry Rundell, photographer, whose office is on the second floor of The Register building, room 14, Third and Sycamore streets, Santa Ana. Mr. Rundell's telephone number is 323, and these four prize winners should telephone him for an appointment.

Legislation To Be Asked In Congress

To Seek Curb on Steamers, Oil Pipe Lines, Busses

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—(UP)—With American railroads facing the most critical situation they have experienced since the transportation act of 1920, the Association of Railway Executives, representing every railroad in the United States, plan to demand powerful relief legislation in congress.

A curb on the competition of motor vehicles, coastal steamship lines and oil and gas pipe lines will be asked of congress in the legislation, according to reports. An outstanding provision is a proposal to compel the oil and gas industry to stop use of $400,000,000 oil pipe lines.

All forms of interstate transportation would be placed under the jurisdiction of the interstate commerce commission, in the plan to be proposed by the rail carriers. This would include the subjection of coastal ship lines chartering to issuance by the commission of certificates of convenience and necessity.

It was stated that the railroads will also ask permission to operate coastwise steamships and transports on the great lakes, which is now forbidden by the Panama canal act.

Overland transportation of freight by motor trucks, as well as passenger service, is to be objected to in the proposal, in the form of a request for a higher and more strict rate of license for buses and trucking lines.

ESCAPED PRISONER RETURNED TO JAIL

FRESNO, Nov. 28.—(UP)—Anthony Santos was back in Fresno county jail again today after more than five months freedom following the sensational jail break last June in which nine accused felons escaped.

Santos is the eighth to be captured. Only Lee Teutimez, the diminutive burglar who freed the others after hiding in a garbage can, still is at large. The other seven are in various western state prisons.

Santos was returned here last night after his recent capture in Oakland, where he was accused of various liquor offenses.

Santos reputedly was the "brains" of the jail break that was effected when the felony tank prisoners were released into a corridor by Teutimez and then pounded their way to freedom through an 18-inch brick wall.

DOAK APPOINTED LABOR SECRETARY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—(UP)—President Hoover today announced the appointment of William Nuckles Doak, of Virginia, as successor to Secretary of Labor James J. Davis.

Davis retires Monday after 10 years of service in the cabinet, to become U. S. senator from Pennsylvania.

Doak is a national legislative representative of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, a position he has held since 1916. His headquarters are in Washington and his home at McLean, Va., his native state.

CONDITION SAME

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—(UP)—The condition of David Belasco veteran theatrical producer, was described as "about the same" today. He passed the crisis in a pneumonia attack several days ago, but was reported as having spent a restless day yesterday.

Moody Advice To Chicago Brings Threat

AUSTIN, Tex., Nov. 28.—(UP)—Governor Dan Moody's declaration that Chicago should be put under martial law has brought an indirect threat to "put him on the spot."

The threat mailed from Houston at 3 p. m. yesterday was received by the Governor this morning. He had not decided whether to place it in the hands of postal authorities.

"It's the first one I have received in a long time," he said.

FRANK KELLOGG IS WINNER OF PEACE TROPHY

Pact to Outlaw War Basis of Nobel Prize Award

OSLO, Nov. 28.—(UP)—Frank B. Kellogg, former secretary of state of the United States and co-author with Aristide Briand of France of the Kellogg-Briand pact to outlaw war, has been awarded the Nobel peace prize for 1929.

The award gave the United States her third Nobel prize this year. Sinclair Lewis won the 1930 prize for literature and Dr. Karl Landsteiner, of the Rockefeller Institute in New York, received this year's prize for distinguished work in medicine.

The 1930 peace award was given to Archbishop I. O. J. Soderblom, primate of Sweden, member of the Swedish Academy, and author of many theological works. His most recent work was "The Church and Peace," written as a Birge memorial lecture.

It was understood that Kellogg and Archbishop Soderblom would come to Oslo to receive their prizes, which amount to between $47,000 and $48,000 each.

The award to Kellogg obviously was made for his work on the peace pact, which was signed by the great powers.

Three other Americans have won the peace prize, Elihu Root in 1912, Woodrow Wilson in 1919, and Charles G. Dawes, joint holder with Sir Austin Chamberlain of England, in 1925.

Aristide Briand of France and the late Gustav Stresemann of Germany won the prize jointly in 1926, Erdinand Buisson, of France, and Ludvig Guidde of Germany shared the award the following year. No peace prize was given in 1928.

YOUNG WILL FILL THREE VACANCIES

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 28.—(UP)—Vincent D. Kennedy, executive secretary to Governor Young, will be appointed examiner for the state railroad commission, a position paying $5000 a year, it was definitely learned by the United Press today.

Governor Young will have two vacancies to fill on the railroad commission, caused by the expiration of terms of Ezra W. Decoto, former Alameda county district attorney, and Thomas S. Louttit of Stockton, both appointees of Friend W. Richardson.

M. B. Harris of Fresno, now a member of the state highway commission, will fill one of the vacancies, and it is considered likely that William J. Carr of Pasadena will resign from his present post on the railroad commission to receive a full, six year appointment from Governor Young.

CLEVELAND FLIER REPORTED MISSING

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 28.—(UP)—Cleveland airport officials were advised today of the disappearance of William Griffin, Cleveland pilot, who took off from Hamilton, Ont., Tuesday to fly home by way of Buffalo and who has been unreported since.

Griffin was flying a small cabin monoplane.

PARTY CHIEF FROM MUNICH URGES STEP

PROTESTS RECALLED

Wire to Chancellor States Germany Should Declare Self Free to Arm Again

BERLIN, Nov. 28.—(UP)—A demand that Germany withdraw from the League of Nations because of the League's attitude on disarmament was received by Chancellor Heinrich Bruening today in a telegram sent from Munich by Dr. Alfred Hugenberg, leader of the National People's party.

Germany, which is disarmed under the Versailles treaty, had repeatedly protested the failure of the League to make greater speed toward general disarmament.

Hugenberg's telegram to the chancellor declared that Germany should "declare herself free to arm again."

GENEVA, Nov. 28. — (UP) — A proposal for an immediate check on all land armaments of all nations was made at the preparatory disarmament conference today by Count Johann Von Bernstorff, of Germany.

The proposal, made shortly after Edouard Benes, of Czecho-Slovakia, took his seat in the commission amid cheers, provided for each nation to submit immediately a detailed report to the secretariat of the League of Nations, thus permitting the general disarmament conference to meet and proceed after an exchange of information similar to the London naval conference preparations.

CONDEMNED MAN IN APPEAL TO ROLPH

FOLSOM PRISON, Nov. 28.—(UP)—Whether Albert M. Stewart, "The Squealer," last of the Folsom rioters, shall die on the gallows, will be one of the first appeals for clemency to come before James Rolph jr., California's next governor.

This became apparent here today when Stewart indicated he would file an application for commutation of sentence, as the result of encouragement given him by the state supreme court.

Although the high tribunal affirmed the death sentence for Stewart's participation in the bloody Thanksgiving riot in 1927, in which 13 persons lost their lives, it also suggested that a commutation request might be considered favorably.

American Labor For Boulder Dam Phil Swing Plan

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—(UP)—Representative Philip D. Swing, Republican, California, said today he would introduce on the opening day of congress a bill making it compulsory for contractors on Boulder dam to give preference to American citizens in hiring labor.

"There has been doubt expressed concerning the power of the president to issue such an order," Representative Swing said, "and to clear up the situation I intend to have such a stipulation by act of congress.

SIX MEN HELD AFTER PARTY THANKSGIVING

One man was shot—the tip of his little finger blown off—and six other men were arrested as the result of a Thanksgiving party held 1715 West Second street at 2 o'clock this morning.

Earl Morris, Negro, was slightly injured when he grabbed a rifle in the hands of Jim Ealey, 28, Negro car washer, and the gun was fired while the two men struggled for possession of it, according to Santa Ana police, who rounded up the party and lodged most of them in the county jail.

Police reported that an argument started between Morris and Ealey over a poker game and a $2 stake. Adam Coldwell, San Bernardino Negro, said he was dancing with a girl at the place when the shot was fired. The bullet, after taking off the end of Morris' finger, plowed up the floor. The address is Ealey's home.

Arthur Morris, of 143 East Truslow street, Negro; Dewitt Morris, of the same address; Coldwell, Oscar Spencer, 23, of 206 Halladay street, a white man; Clyde Bond, 23, white, of 504 Fruit street, and Harry Hudson, 31, white, of 315 West Seventeenth street, were all held in jail last night as material witnesses to the shooting, all having been present at the time, police reported.

Today a charge of disturbing the peace was filed against Ealey, Earl Morris and against DeWitt Morris and the others were freed. Ealey at first was booked at the jail on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon with intent to commit murder.

A .32 pistol, a rifle and a hammer, found at Ealey's home, were confiscated by police. Ealey told officers that Morris brought the pistol to the house and Morris reported that he was hit over the head with the hammer, but he did not know who hit him.

The disturbing of the peace charges will be heard in Judge J. F. Talbott's police court tomorrow at 10 a. m.

WHAT KIND?

LOS ANGELES—Whether or not Albert B. McNeely drank six bottles of whiskey, beer or wine, or whether they were pints or quarts, is problematical, but that's what he told Judge Sproul he drank every day. It ruined his married life, he told the judge. The judge figured that in 25 months of married life McNeely had consumed about 22 barrels of liquor.

Calvin Coolidge Says:

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Nov. 28.—Some years ago a prominent man attracted considerable attention by refusing to purchase some garments at a very low price because he considered that the needle women who made them were underpaid. He did not care to profit by their distress. He felt that what he might save in such a transaction was blood money wrung from the unfortunate. He was right.

There will be general satisfaction in learning that our country through the national government is adopting a like attitude. We wish to protect our own wage earners, our agriculture and industry from the results of dumping produce on our markets at a price with which they could not compete. But the policy has a deeper significance than that. We are unwilling to profit by the distress of foreign people. We do not want their blood money. Our efforts are not only to protect our own people from cheap goods, which President McKinley said meant cheap men, but we propose to set up a standard that will discourage other nations from exploiting their people by producing cheap goods. Our policy requires fair wages for both domestic and foreign production. We have no market for blood and tears.

Burglar In Raid On Two Offices

A burglar who operated in the downtown section of the city broke into two offices last night, getting loot valued at several hundreds of dollars, according to reports filed at the city police station.

A saxophone worth $150 and a violin were stolen from the offices of Lola B. Wilkinson, music teacher, at 403½ West Fourth street, by a thief who entered the office by crawling over the transom, it was reported. Nothing else in the offices was disturbed.

Ten suit patterns, of the best material in the place, a suit of clothes, an overcoat and two pairs of pants were stolen from the tailoring shop of E. Larson of 205 North Sycamore street, by a burglar who broke the glass in the front door of the place to gain entrance.

race. He wore a dark cap and heavy woolen suit. His face was haggard with big penetrating eyes. He was not the Mooney or Billings type.

"During the trial, I did not care to testify, due to my rank in the army. I feared my declaration might embarrass my organization.

"I make this statement conscious of my obligations to society and to atone so far as is possible for the suffering of two unfortunate victims behind prison bars for 14 years.

"My sincere belief is that Mooney and Billings are innocent. In my 18 years of public service I have met many persons of different nationalities and am convinced that the man who caused the bomb outrage was not of the same nationality as Mooney or Billings.

"My facts, as herewith presented, may not free Mooney and Billings from prison but if my declaration can assuage the suffering they have endured for 14 years, I am willing to make whatever sacrifices may be required of me in order to do so.

PARDON CHANCE SLIGHT

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 28.—(UP)—The United Press learned today from a usually reliable source that there is little if any, hope that Thomas J. Mooney and Warren K. Billings will be pardoned from life prison sentences imposed after their convictions on charges of complicity in the San Francisco Preparedness day bombing in July, 1916.

Commutation of sentence apparently is the most they can expect, the United Press was told.

Ten persons were killed and 40 injured in the Preparedness day explosion, which rocked downtown San Francisco on the eve of America's entry into the World war. Mooney and Billings were convicted at separate trials. They always have claimed they were innocent.

Pardon petitions by both men are being considered. The Billings appeal is before the California supreme court, while that of Mooney is in the hands of Governor C. C. Young. Early next week, probably Monday, the supreme court will deliver to Governor Young its recommendation in Billings case.

Governor Young cannot act favorably on Billings' application unless the supreme court so recommends. This is because California law requires supreme court recommendation in the petition of twice convicted men, such as Billings. Mooney, a San Quentin inmate, legally may be pardoned at any time but the governor insisted that the two cases are similar and both men will receive the same treatment.

Thus, if the supreme court flatly rejects Billing's appeal, it will mean that Governor Young will refuse Mooney's plea for a pardon. Both men have said they never would accept paroles, insisting that a parole carries with it an inference of guilt.

Commutation, like a pardon or reprieve, is part of a governor's power to exercise clemency. Unlike a parole is the fact that a convict cannot refuse a commutation of sentence.

Virtually positive information coming to the United Press is that a pardon will not be granted. That leaves two courses open—a commutation or parole, and the former, according to those who have studied the cases, seems the more likely.

A recommendation one way or other by the court will mark the end, in all probability, of Governor Young's part in the controversy. He leaves office the first of the year. James Rolph, jr., San Francisco's mayor, succeeds him.

Rolph never has committed himself in the Mooney-Billings case. His only reference to it during the Republican gubernatorial primary, in which he defeated Young, was that the case would be settled without delay should it ever come before him.

The Mooney-Billings controversy has been a stormy issue between liberals and conservatives since the men were convicted. Efforts in their behalf never have ceased and will not now, should their appeals be denied, according to Mary Gallagher, secretary to the Mooney Defense league.

Three governors have considered Mooney's petitions. William D. Stephens, who commuted Mooney's original death sentence to life, refused his pardon appeal as did Friend W. Richardson. Last June Billings, the obscure member of the pair, asked the court for a pardon recommendation. This was denied, after which Governor Young also denied Mooney's pardon petition.

Governor Young, however, left a loop hole. He suggested that John MacDonald, recanting star witness against both men, be found and returned to California to tell the supreme court his story.

MacDonald was found in Baltimore a week later and brought to California, where he told a special session of the supreme court that he testified falsely when he identified Mooney and Billings as the bombers.

The MacDonald hearing brought the case before the court again and it is evidence gathered then which is to be ruled on next week. All justices have reached conclusions, Chief Justice William H. Waste has announced. Editing the decision is all that remains, he said.

Earl Patterson, Santa Ana, reported to the police that his automobile was stolen between 6 and 8 o'clock last night from the corner of Fourth street and Broadway.

Robert Nelson, 2050 South Ross street, 10 years of age, who goes to the Edison school in Santa Ana, is the first place winner in the group from nine to twelve years, and Alice Herndon, R. R. 1, box 272, Costa Mesa, also 10 years old, won second place in this group. Other contestants who did very well were Winifred Brown of 922 South Ross street, Betty Lamberton, of Costa Mesa, and Janette Bozarth, 2028 Cypress street. All of these were between the ages of nine and 12.

In the group for children between six and nine years of age, first prize was won by Robert Duncan Hoyt, North Ross street, who goes to the Woodrow Wilson school, and is 7 years old. Gwendolyn Bozarth, eight, of 2028 Cypress avenue, took second place, and Melvin Nankervis of R. 1, box 177A, Garden Grove, sent in a very good coloring.

Robert Nelson and Robert Hoyt, the two first place winners, will therefore receive the cash prizes, and they, together with Alice Herndon and Gwendolyn Bozarth, should call Mr. Rundell and make arrangements to have their pictures taken.

Next week the bird to be colored will be the blue jay. All the children know the blue jay, the saucy bird that makes such a screeching sound, and teases the other birds. The bluejay will be much easier to color, as it sits on an oak branch with its beak open. This is a winter-time scene with just a few oak leaves left on the twigs and a few acorns to color. You should be sure to color the bluejay in the picture, which is winging its way in search of food, perhaps. The charts showing the bluejay and how it should be colored are found in the Juvenile library, in The Register window facing Sycamore street and in the window of Watkin's Bootery, Fourth and Sycamore streets. The Register will carry the picture tomorrow night.

ARMY WORK OF YEAR TOLD IN ANNUAL REPORT

WASHINGTON. — Conduct of thousands of American gold star mothers and widows to military cemeteries in France, partial completion of the Army housing program, and the restoration of Robert E. Lee's old home were mentioned as outstanding accomplishments of the Army Quartermaster's corps in its annual report today.

The report was made by Maj. Gen. J. L. Dewitt, quartermaster general, who suceeded Maj. Gen. B. F. Cheatham in that post last January.

The Quartermaster's corps was charged by the secretary of war with making all the arrangements for the gold star mothers' European pilgrimage and, Dewitt said, "the most careful consideration was given to this duty."

All work under the 1927 Army housing program, providing 660 new hospital beds, housing accommodations for 7983 enlisted men, 92 non-commissioned officers and 18 officers families, has been carried out, Dewitt reported. In addition the 1928 program has been finished except for commissioned officers' quarters at Selfridge Field, Mich.

Thus far congress has appropriated $40,000,000 for the Army housing program. When the 1930 work is done quarters for 4801 enlisted men, 437 non-commissioned officers' families, 373 officers' families and 29 nurses will have been finished.

There still will need to be provided, Dewitt said, quarters for 14,600 enlisted men, 3286 officers and 2463 non-commissioned officers, envisioned in the permanent housing program.

Restoration of the Robert E. Lee mansion at Arlington, Va., was completed during the last year, the quartermaster general said. Also, more than a third of the furniture needed to give the interior its original appearance has been obtained. More than 85,000 persons have visited the place since last March, when it was opened.

The present strength of the quartermaster's corps is 767 officers and 7457 enlisted men, Dewitt reported.

Cruel Treatment Charged By Wife In Divorce Plea

A divorce complaint alleging cruel and inhuman treatment has been filed in superior court by Eva M. Griset against William Griset, of rural route four. They were married July 6, 1905, and have seven children.

The plaintiff charges that the defendant is also cruel to the children and does not want them to have an education, demanding that they work and insisting that they go to work as soon as they get home from school, leaving them no time to study. It is also alleged that he struck a daughter with a broomstick in May, 1929, fracturing the bone. Mrs. Griset asks the custody of the children and $75 per month for support.

SCHOOL PUPILS GIVE BASKETS TO NEEDY HERE

Despite the heavy showers which swept the city just before the time of the service, there was a large crowd present at the United Presbyterian church yesterday morning to participate in the union Thanksgiving service, under the auspices of the Santa Ana Ministerial association.

A spirit of sincerity marked the entire service, in which may of the leading pastors of the city participated. The sermon of the morning was delivered by the Rev. Walter S. Buchanan, pastor of the First Christian church.

Another phase of the observance of the day which was of great interest to many, was the distribution of food and supplies to many families by churches and welfare organizations, and the serving of dinners to a number of unemployed by the Salvation Army.

The Goodwill Industries reported today that 80 families in the city had been enabled to better enjoy the day through the distribution of 210 pounds of fresh prime beef roast, fresh vegetables, canned fruits and vegetables, which were donated by Santa Ana schools and friends of the Goodwill industry branch here, which is under the direction of J. Winterbourne.

The Salvation Army made distribution of a number of baskets to needy families and served 45 men in the hall. Thanks to the public for its gifts which made this possible, and especially to the Register and members of the Mickey Mouse club of the Fox West Coast theater, were expressed today by Ensign Edwards in charge of the Army work in Santa Ana.

The Goodwill Industries distributed 65 baskets last year, Winterbourne reported, but did not include meat at that time. Winterbourne also reported that a hearty response to the woodyard appeal made several days ago through the Register has resulted in the payment within the past 10 days, of over $150 in wages, which has gone to local men with dependents.

BAND ARRANGES FOR CONCERT AT SCHOOL DEC. 9

A special feature of the colorful Christmas concert program to be presented free to the public by Santa Ana Municipal band in Santa Ana high school auditorium the evening of December 9, under the direction of D. C. Cianfoni, will be the presentation of the entire "Nutcracker Suite" by Peter Tschaikowsky.

This charming fantasy, which is a favorite of first rank with music lovers the world over, is appropriately chosen, since it is founded on a Christmas story taken from a collection of German fairy tales. Composed of several equally graceful movements, the work throughout is characterized by interesting and novel orchestration.

A brief synopsis of the story on which the suite is founded, follows:

During a Christmas party, the children are gathered about the illuminated tree, receiving their toys. Little Marie receives a nutcracker, coveted by the others. At bedtime, she leaves it beneath the Christmas tree, stealing downstairs for another peep at it at midnight while the rest sleep.

Suddenly mice invade the room, and the toys, also the nutcracker, come to life. During ensuing commotion the nutcracker leads a charge against the mice. Marie throws her shoe at the general of the mice and puts his army to rout.

Changing to a handsome prince, the nutcracker and Marie fly away to the magic kingdom of the Sugar Plum fairy, a dance being given by the sweetmeats in their honor.

Movements composing the suite include Marche, Danse Arabe, Danse de la Fee Dragee, Danse Russian Trepak, Danse Chinoise, Danse of the Mirlitons and Valse des Fleurs.

The opening march is indicative of festive holiday fun. Danse Arabe is an exotic movement, tambourine and oboe lending characteristic oriental color. Danse de la Fee Dragee is dainty and graceful, sombre bass clarinet adding a rich color note.

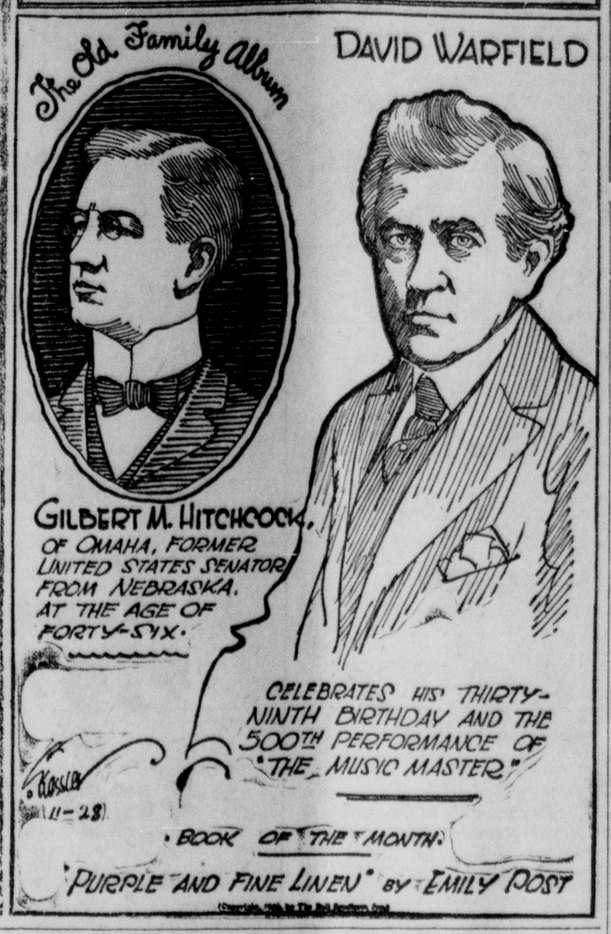

Danse Russe Trepak is a national dance form of Russia, a stormy, rapid movement vitalized by whistling flute, explosive chords and rap of tambourine, tempo never slackening. Danse Chinoise is brief and grotesque, piccolo and flute outlining a quaint Oriental theme, answered by pizzicato of strings, bells, and woodwinds.

The effective Danse des Mirlitons is novel, in that mirlitons are a form of toy instrument, emitting a sound similar to singing on a comb. Flutes and clarinets outline the melody against a droning bass background. The final movement, "Valse des Fleurs" suggests the delicate beauty of the flowers with graceful, swinging rhythms.

SERVICE CLUB CAMPAIGN GETS C. OF C. BACKING

Endorsement of the "buy at home" campaign launched by the Santa Ana Lions club, acceptance of a committee report on a proposal to increase first class postage, discussion of the present unemployment situation and consideration of routine matters, were among matters brought up today at a directors' meeting of the Santa Ana Chamber of Commerce held at the board rooms. President William C. Jerome presided over the session, which was attended by several business men who had come to lay matters before the directors.

In endorsing the "buy at home" campaign launched by the Lions club, the directors recommended that the civic affairs committee be requested that it co-operate in every possible way with the luncheon club organization.

George Raymer, secretary of the chamber, reported that the unemployment situation is being taken care of by a special organization which expects to be functioning within a few days. Some of the directors present discussed policies adopted by large corporations in dealing with the situation, reference being made to employment of married women having husbands supporting them.

Opposition to a proposed increase in postal rates on first class mail from 2 to 2 1-2 cents, as has been proposed to meet the deficit in the post-office department, was voiced in a committee report brought in this morning by Clyde C. Downing, chairman of the committee. In its report, the committee recommended that deficits be eliminated by raising rates on such mail matters as are now causing the condition complained of.

Bringing home the slogan, "Observance and enforcement, not repeal," Mrs. Elizabeth Warren, of Santa Ana, and Mrs. Clara Jones and Mrs. Pearl Kendall Hess, of Orange, have returned from the national Women's Christian Temperance union convention at Houston, Texas. For the next year they will lead local forces in a nation-wide educational campaign for total abstinence and support of prohibition.

At the convention resolutions were adopted favoring dry planks in the platforms of the major political parties, emphasizing the value of total abstinence, condemning state control, or government sale of liquor, favoring a continuance of educational methods of temeperance, and denouncing as dangerous to good government the activities of the opponents of prohibition.

The convention displayed a revival of the old crusade spirit, it is reported, and sent a message to the women of 53 countries asking the women of the world to unite in prayer at noon on January 8, 1931, for the protection of the home from the drink habit and drink traffic and the obolition of war. Greetings were also exchanged with President Hoover, expressing appreciation of the efforts and ideals of each other. The educational work of the organization is now operating on a wider front than ever before, it was shown, and the signatures of 350,000 young people were presented who had signed for total absteinence and support of teh Eighteenth amendment.

The Canadian government system of control, which it is reported is resulting in an increase of alcoholism, crime, demoralization of youth and other evils, was brought to the convention by Ben H. Spence, Washington correspondent of a Canadian newspaper.

There will be 20 great regional conferences throughout the United States next year, according to plans of the national W. C. T. U. and a national executive committee meeting at Niagara Falls following the world W. C. T. U. convention in Toronto, Canada, next June.

4 NOT GUILTY PLEAS ENTERED IN COURT TODAY

Judge G. K. Scovel disposed of four matters in a session of criminal court today, when pleas of not guilty were entered by the four prisoners and trial dates were set.

C. Huarte answered not guilty to a charge of issuing a fictitious check in the amount of $5 when arraigned. He will be tried January 8.

He is to be tried January 6 on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon.

An information was filed with the court charging S. B. Calvert and Marie Calvert with grand theft. The woman entered a plea of not guilty and her trial was set for January 14. Calvert is to be arraigned this afternoon. The information charges the couple with the theft of an auto from E. F. Wallen.

Arraignment of C. T. Gill, on a statutory charge, following the filing of an information by the office of District Attorney Z. B. West, resulted in a plea of not guilty. Judge Scovel set the trial for December 16.

FRANCE PLANS HUGE PROGRAM FOR COLONIES

BY RALPH HEINZEN
United Press Staff Correspondent

PARIS, Nov. 27—(UP)—The Tardieu government has a gigantic scheme for aiding suffering French industries, already beginning to feel the pinch of general world depression. If Parliament votes this project of colonial development, French industry will receive the largest single order ever granted in the world.

Credits totaling 4,650,000,000 francs will be spent in France on materials, by a system of loans, consented to the colonies by the French government. This is believed sufficient to keep a million workers busy for a year. The colonies will repay the loans in 50 years.

Under terms of the building bill, all the material used in the building of ports, canals, railroads, chools, wireless plants, bridges and roads mut be of French or colonial origin. The United States, Britain and Germany will share only to a small extent, for such machinery as France does not manufacture. Evon then it must be bought through a French agent.

Colonies Grouped

The scheme calls for the improvement of Indo-China, Madagascar, French West Africa, Togo and Cameroun. In a second group to be undertaken as soon as the contracts are awarded for the first scheme, improvements will be undertaken in New Caledonia, Martinique, French Equatorial Africa, Somali Coast, Reunion, India and Oceania.

Under the scheme which came before Parliament today, the improvements are shared as follows:

	Francs
West Africa	2,073,000,000
Indo China	1,752,000,000
Madagascar	700,000,000
Togo	110,000,000
Cameroun	15,000,000

To make such an undertaking possible, Parliament must first authorize the colonies and mandated territories to seek loans both in Paris and abroad, pledging state revenues for 50 years. These loans will total three-fourths of the amount to be spent, and will de divided as follows:

	Francs
West Africa	1,570,000,000
Indo-China	1,250,000,000
Madagascar	700,000,000
Togo	65,000,000
Cameroun	15,000,000

Railroads Lead

The principal improvement in West Africa will be the building of railroads to open up the rich Niger valley and in cutting into the virgin swamps and forests of Senegal, Ivory Coast, Dahomey, Volta and Nigeria.

The ports of Dakar, Abidjan and Conakry are to be built at a total cost of 554 million francs. Fourteen millions will be spent in buying road-making machinery, and when everything is concluded this great group of states will have 8,000 miles of railroad. Canals will be built to drain the swamps and wells dug to end fevers, and ten millions will be spent on forts and barracks.

The work in Madagascar will be divided between building of railroads and ports, including the electrification of many of the railways by using natural waterpower. These same mountain waterfalls will furnish power for the rich agricultural regions. The ports to be improved include Tamatave, Majunga, Menekara, Tuelar and Diego Suarez.

The work in Togo and Cameroun will be entirely railroad building and widening to full gauge of existing narrow gauge lines. The same program is planned for Indo-China.

EXPERIMENTS REVEAL NEED FOR VITAMINS

CHICAGO. — Diets deficient in vitamin B make "dumbbells," Dr. Siegfried Maurer, assistant professor of pathology at the University of Chicago, has found after completing a series of experiments.

Nursing mothers whose diets lack such foods as whole grain cereals, milk, legumes, vegetables and egg yolk rear children almost certain to be less than half as intelligent as youngsters normally supplied with vitamin B, the professor announced.

Experiments of Dr. Maurer and Dr. Loh Seng Tsai, assistant professor of psychology, definitely indicate that an individual deprived of the vitamin during early infancy will be mentally handicapped, they announced.

Before the tests were undertaken, vitamin B was assumed to be an important factor, Dr. Maurer said, because "vitamin B deficiency is associated with such nerve diseases as beriberi, pellagra and polyneuritis."

"It was therefore interesting," he continued, "to study the effect of the deficiency of this so-called antineurotic vitamin upon learning ability, since it has been universally accepted that learning ability is primarily a function of the nervous system."

THE KING IS RIDING BY

SOVIET FIGHTS 'WANDERLUST' IN JOB SEARCH

MOSCOW (UP)—People who leave their jobs in search of higher pay or better living conditions are described as "deserting the economic front," according to Soviet standard.

Every effort is made by the Communists to make this form of "desertion" as shameful in the eyes of the public as would be desertion of a military front in a moment of danger.

In addition more practical methods are adopted in industrial centers to prevent workers and technicians from wandering off. The contract system, binding the signer to remain at his post for a definite period, is widely used in relation to engineers and specialists. In some factories it is being extended to skilled workers and ordinary labor.

Factories and mines have been calling special conferences where thousands of workers have voluntarily declared themselves "tied" to their jobs until the end of the Five-Year plan.

These managers are part of a desperate effort to prevent the enormous losses occasioned by workers abandoning their jobs.

The speeding up of production, coupled with a sharp decline in food provisions, has caused unrest and consequently "economic desertions." The great demand for labor power, moreover, has removed the fear of unemployment.

The tendency throughout Soviet industry now is to attach workers as strongly as possible to their jobs, if possible until the end of the Five-Year plan.

SAIL OCEANS IN CANOE

Twice given up for lost at sea and twice the object of intensive search by the coast guard when they were long overdue, these two intrepid Germans who are trying to sail a canoe from San Francisco to Uruguay have reached Los Angeles with 500 miles of water behind them. They were in several storms and only escaped perishing by a hair's breadth. With their canoe in "drydock," as shown here, they are resting preparatory to starting the next leg of their long journey to Uruguay. The man in the dark suit is Max Reik; the one attired in white is Frederick Pohl. The may shows their route.

EVERY DAY WORTH LIVING

There is no illness so oppressive as an imperfectly functioning stomach—perhaps not serious enough in many cases to be confining, still severe enough to prevent the fullest enjoyment of every day life and the pleasure of performing ones daily duties. To those persons who have habitual or occasional stomach trouble, such as gastric hyperacidity, sour stomach, gas disturbances, bloating, belching, heart burn, bad breath (halitosis), loss of appetite, we unhesitatingly say "Try Pfunder's Tablets." To our personal knowledge, this remedy has relieved and corrected hundreds of such cases of stomach trouble, many of which were of a long standing nature. We shall be glad to give further information, and, of course, without obligation.

JOINT CHURCH SERVICE HELD THANKSGIVING

ORANGE, Nov. 28.—"Forgetting to be Thankful" was the subject of the sermon given at the union services Thanksgiving at 10 o'clock held in the Presbyterian church. The Ministerial association sponsored the union service. Present on the platform were the Rev. Franklin H. Minck, of the Christian church; the Rev. Robert McAulay, of the Presbyterian church; the Dr. Walter M. Tripple, of Villa Park Congregational church; the Dr. S. M. Eidsath, of the Menonite Brethren church; the Rev. J. H. Britain, of the Free Methodist church; the Rev. H. F. Sheerer, of the First Baptist church.

The Rev. Mr. Minck read President Hoover's Thanksgiving proclamation. J. B. Wilbur, Y. M. C. A. secretary, read the scripture, Psalm 103. The congregation sang "Give Thanks." The Rev. Mr. Eidsath led in prayer. The Rev. Mr. Tripple spoke from 1 John 3:17 in taking the offering, which will be used for the Mexican work in Orange.

"Harvesting and Thanksgiving" was sung by the congregation. The anthem by the choir was "The Wilderness," by Goss. Mrs. Carl Pister sang "Praise Ye the Lord."

The Rev. Mr. Sheerer said in part: "'When thou shalt have eaten and be full; then beware lest thou forget the Lord.' As a nation we were founded on our faith on God's holy word, which has been recognized as authoritative, although subject to many interruptions. It is honored by the president, who presses it to his lips when he takes the oath of office. It is recognized in every court of justice and every witness must swear with uplifted hand that with God's help he will tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth.

"Thanksgiving day has been a memorable day in recognition of God's gracious goodness to us, and every loyal citizen should recognize that fact when he reads the president's proclamation. Thousands will do this, and many churches will be open where people will gather in the name of Jesus Christ and voice their anthems and songs of praise. He who sitteth upon the throne will rejoice in every breath of true acknowledgment of His loving kindness and tender mercies.

"Thanksgiving day was no doubt ordained of God for America, and has had its influence in the past, but as the years have rolled along it has become less and less of a holy day and more of a holiday. We forget to give attention to the important things in life. The value of Christ in this Christian land will be lost if we forget to give thanks for the many blessings of life, if we become unmindful of God. Remember the 10 lepers, only one returned to give thanks. Perhaps the other nine were promptly engaged in their own pursuits of life, possibly in a vain endeavor to retrieve what they had lost while in isolation, inasmuch that they forget to return to give thanks and praise.

"The practice of grumbling is not hard to acquire, but because of our selfish hearts, an attitude of praise is more difficult to maintain. How often we forget to be thankful. God may be waiting for you and me to be thankful to move from grumbling avenue to thanksgiving avenue. It is a duty, a command.

"As a nation we have much we are guilty of. It is not lack of money in America but we have lost our sense of God. God wants our hearts filled with thanksgiving. In the early church they daily gave thanks.

"Try to count your many blessings. Indeed, God has provided the very best in the presence of His Son. God has called us to a definite duty and privilege in bearing a real testimony for Him."

ORANGE CHURCH SERVICES ARE WELL ATTENDED

ORANGE, Nov. 28.—With yesterday's rain as one of the many causes for Thanksgiving among residents of this vicinity, the holiday passed uneventfully in this city, family dinners, theater parties, attendance at church services and at football games forming the principal ways of spending the day.

Church services in the morning were well attended, a union service at the First Presbyterian church drawing a large congregation of worshippers. The First Methodist, the First Baptist, the First Christian, the First Presbyterian, the Free Methodist and the Mennonite churches joined in the services.

The Free Methodist church held a special Thanksgiving service in the evening which took the form of a love feast with special music.

A morning service was held at the Christian Science church with the subject of the lesson-sermon, "Thanksgiving."

The Rev. E. H. Kreidt, pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran church at Olive conducted services at the Olive church in the morning at 9:30 o'clock and another service at the Orange Immanuel Lutheran church at 11 o'clock. At the latter service the children of the parochial school gave a song service.

The Rev. A. C. Bode of the St. John's Lutheran church was in charge of the services at that church, preaching twice in the morning, at 9:30 o'clock and again at 11 o'clock.

Stores and offices as well as all departments at the city hall were closed.

PREHISTORIC TOOTH

LAVELETTE, N. J.—A tooth of a giant monster thought to have lived thousands of years ago was brought to light here in the drilling of an artesian well. At a depth of 1200 feet the drill encountered the tooth. It was brought to the surface and found to be 12 inches long and 5 inches in diameter.

Bride Is Honoree At Shower Held In Orange Home

ORANGE, Nov. 28.—Mrs. Ralph Goddard, of South Parker street, gave a shower this week honoring Mrs. Harold Nudd, a recent bride. The home was decorated with button chrysanthemums. Cards were enjoyed during the evening. Mrs. Nudd was given a chain, each link of which disclosed the place of a gift. Many beautiful gifts were given by the group of girl friends gathered in honor of the bride.

Those present were Mesdames Thelma Parker, of Chino; Euleta Kilgore, Zenia Ess, Hazel Caldwell, Ruth Williamson, Hazel Wayne, Cullan Spencer, of Anaheim; Dorothy Melvin, Lillian Seavy, Isabelle Garland, Lucile Wayne, of Anaheim; Ralph Goddard, Estelle Campbell, Quilla Pike and Miss Alve McGill.

A two-course luncheon was served. The bride's table had a bride as centerpiece.

Book Exhibit In Public Library Draws Visitors

ORANGE, Nov. 28.—The display in the junior department of the Orange public library was visited by hundreds of persons during children's Book week, according to Mrs. Mabel Faulkner, librarian.

The exhibit which represented a fleet of ships bearing famous book characters sailing into the Port of Happy Hours, was designed by Mrs. Alpha Cave, in charge of the children's department, who was assisted in making it by Mrs. Estelle Campbell.

Visitors included groups of children and teachers from Whittier, Fullerton, El Modena residents, and the entire kindergarten of a Buena Park school with the teacher.

Mrs. Faulkner declares that newspaper stories written about the display were responsible for the wide interest taken in it.

Lounging Luxury

LOUNGING in luxurious ladylikeness is the thing to do this winter.

You will find all kinds of accessories for that boudoir feeling. Velvet pajamas, satin ones, brocaded negligees. All sorts of funny and sweet little caps to keep your hair fixed right and to give you a little bit of color to your make-up.

The newest touch in the way of pajama trim is illustrated on a lovely pink velvet pajama suit. It has a gleaming little bolero of opalescent bangles, with a little gold among them. The pajamas are one-piece and the little bolero fastens up on one shoulder, like a bathing suit.

The pajama trousers are very full from below the hips down, so that they look quite like a skirt, but are so much more comfortable for lounging. There is a three-quarters straight coat of the velvet, in a deeper tone, to slip on if your room cools off too much. The pajamas tie with a narrow sash belt that makes a bow and has long streamer ends.

To hold the hair properly, a golden boudoir cap brocaded in pink roses, has a little bow under one ear, in quite the approved chapeau manner. It is featherweight and yet so colorful and lovely as to be quite a beauty aid. And if you can manage to be beautiful while lounging, then the rest does you 10 times more good.

The strands of shaded chenille, with a button decoration of the deepest tone, are the newest things in the way of boudoir necklaces. Bracelets match and may be worn both on one arm, or to decorate each wrist.

The newest mules are very open. Some of them are merely strapped, like clogs, and let your toes stick through. Others have toe tips and then straps of material across, leaving most of your foot out to the comfort of the open fireplace. A very pretty new pair is made of white crepe de chine, with gold-striped brocade for the diamond-shaped motif on the toe and then a couple of gold straps taking the place of the rest of the mule.

Two Ways to Fry That Chicken

By MISSIS PHYLLIS

TAKE for your text today, "Fried Chicken What Am Fried Chicken."

If you have reached maturity without ever eating a piece of half-fried chicken, you have done exceedingly well. In fact, there exists today one woman who does no cooking herself and who alleges that there is no such thing as really tender, thoroughly cooked and well-flavored fried chicken.

And there is a little boy who went to a restaurant and saw "Half Fried Chicken" on the menu card. Being fond of chicken, he ordered it. But when it was served he said in disgust that he didn't know that it meant half-fried. He'd rather have it done.

There is no excuse for such things if you do the frying at home. And if you are having a family reunion picnic this fall, there is nothing that will so remind the older folk of their younger days on a farm than to take along some fried chicken.

GET as large a fryer as your meat man has. There are some seasons of the year when he has only quite small ones. These are excellent in flavor and beautifully tender. But, alas, there is only a little meat, even if everyone has a half chicken.

At other times you will be able to get tender fryers that weigh three and a half and four pounds. This may sound like a very big chicken to fry, but if your meat cutter is thoroughly versed in the art of chicken-selling, you may trust him when he says that they are tender enough to fry. And the beauty of it is that you have plenty of meat.

Have the chicken cut into pieces for frying. A good-sized chicken will cut into about six pieces, not counting the wings and neck, which are rather useless fried, as there is so little meat on them. It's better to keep these pieces cut and make some chicken broth for the children. Or some chicken gravy to serve on rice for luncheon, perhaps. A two to two and a half pound chicken will cut into four good pieces.

NOW there are two splendid ways to fry the chicken, and you may take a look at them both and consider their merits.

If you are preparing fried chicken with gravy, wash each piece of chicken. Sprinkle with salt and paprika and dredge with flour. Have ready a hot skillet in which has been melted two tablespoons of shortening and two tablespoons of butter. Although bacon fat is an excellent fat to use for frying, it is just as well not to use it this time because you want the gravy to be flavored with nothing but honest-to-goodness chicken. Save the bacon for another time.

Brown each piece of chicken well. Add a half cup of water, lower the flame, cover tightly and let cook slowly for 35 minutes. Move the pieces about and watch to keep from scorching as they cook. If the gravy is cooking down too much, add a little more water. The flour from the meat thickens the gravy and the gravy keeps the meat splendidly moist. You may add up to a cup of water to prevent scorching, but don't add too much water at a time or you'll be boiling the meat instead of frying it. And that would rather ruin the flavor of your favorite dish.

Serve on a platter with the gravy poured over the pieces of chicken, or serve the gravy separately. Garnish the platter with parsley plumes and radish roses. Small corn fritters or squares of yellow cornbread around the edge of the platter will make another good touch.

BREADED fried chicken requires a little more elaborate preparation.

Wash each piece of chicken and sprinkle with salt and paprika. Roll in flour, dip in beaten egg to which a little water has been added, roll in cracker or bread crumbs, dip in egg again and roll in crumbs. Have every part of the piece of meat covered well with the crumbs.

Have ready a skillet filled with fat for deep-fat frying. The fat should be very hot, but never smoking. Fry each piece in the fat until a golden brown—or darker brown if you like it that way. Have ready another skillet in which has been melted a little butter and a little water. Put the pieces of chicken in this, cover tightly, and fry slowly for 35 minutes.

The result is a very tender, pretty piece of meat which is not so moist as the other, and there isn't any greasy gravy on your fingers.

A Moth-Proof Chest

YOU can be insured against the weather, matrimony and twins—and now you can be insured against moths. These insidious pests annually destroy $200,000,000 worth of American property and if your nice downy blankets or your best fur coat—which you will soon be taking out again—contributed to that $200,000,000 figure you are probably one of the many who will hail with joy some means of protection.

The cedar chest with the mothproof guarantee—in the form of an insurance policy against moth damage—is the one thing which will make life mighty uncomfortable for Mr. and Mrs. Moth. They don't like the cedar-scented air of the chest, but if they do decide to ignore the less attractive features of the premises and move in anyway, you have the insurance against the damage they would like to do, bringing up a large family on your best woolens.

(Illustration courtesy American Furniture Mart, Chicago)
A new cedar chest . . . not only adds to the attraction of a room . . . but also comes with an insurance policy.

A cousin of the moth, and an equally annoying pest to the home manager, is the tobacco beetle. This old gormandizer has a perfect passion for the upholstery stuffing of your davenport and upholstered chairs. He really prefers tobacco, in any of its cured and manufactured forms, but he does not care where his calories come from. If he can get bed and board in your davenport, he'll move right in and go on a jag on whatever form of vegetable matter it may be upholstered with.

THERE are a number of preparations on the market which are claimed by their manufacturers to render upholstered furniture, furs and woolens mothproof. Tests made by the government indicate that a really hungry moth or tobacco beetle will go in strong for material literally soaked with some of these so-called mothproofing solutions. The bugs may not like the flavor, and if offered a choice will select something on which the solution has not been used, but when severely put to it for something to eat, insects can and do thrive, prosper and multiply on a diet of "mothproofed" material.

The woman who knows or suspects that moths or tobacco beetles are making themselves at home in her upholstered furniture, had better send it to some dealer or manufacturer who will fumigate it for her.

While there are solutions on the market which will make upholstered furniture a highly unpleasant diet for moths and beetles, to be at all effective, they must be applied with a power spray. Putting them on with a hand spray is not always as effective as you might hope for.

Stand Up For Beauty

By CHARLOTTE C. WEST, M. D.

THE posture that will enable you to touch the walls with heels, shoulders and head is the correct standing posture. The toes point straight forward, not turned out, as was at one time considered correct. You should practice this erect standing posture until no strain upon any muscle is felt.

In order to cultivate bodily poise you must straighten out your spine, hold your shoulders properly, head erect, chin out. This poise assumed, the internal organs fall naturally into their true positions, and deep breathing may be acquired.

Learn to breathe slowly, deeply, regularly. With deep inhalations comes better blood, which brightens the color of the skin and gives sparkle and brilliancy to the eyes.

For everyday breathing exercises take your position standing erect, with both feet firmly planted on the floor, palms of hands turned in, and resting at the sides of the legs.

Empty the lungs and then slowly and deeply inhale, rising gradually on the toes and raising the arms, meanwhile stretching them as far as possible over the head. Hold the breath several seconds; then, while exhaling, lower the arms until they have assumed the first position, and at the same time lower the body to the floor.

Alternate this exercise with one which carries the arms outstretched horizontally.

ANOTHER exercise, without the toe raising, is to allow the arms to hang from the shoulders with the hands together, palms inward, with thumbs interlaced in front of you.

Raise the arms directly overhead, at the same time filling the lungs to their full capacity. When you can control perfectly the poise of the body, and the shoulder and chest muscles are flexible, you can raise the arms without difficulty. Hold the arms overhead a minute, then slowly exhale, while lowering them.

EVILS resulting from a "debutante slouch," are, first, a wretched carriage, causing round shoulders and cramped lungs; second, improper and imperfect breathing; third, digestive troubles, owing to lack of oxygen; fourth, the forward and downward droop of the head resulted in broken-down tissues of the neck and throat.

While the debutante slouch has to a certain extent died out, it has been supplanted by a posture which is just as ridiculous, affected and harmful. This is known as the "collegiate." The upper chest is carried forward by humping up the shoulders, while the body is twisted from side to side from the hips with each step taken.

Needless to say, this is but a fad.

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

"JUST wait till your father comes home." Bob had heard it so often the remark didn't register. He went out on the porch and looked for Red. The two cookies he had "swiped" had given his stomach something to do now, and his courage rose. Yes, the cookies had been taken without permission. That was why he got the reminder that he was to wait for the return of the head of the family. It meant a whipping sure.

Red appeared.

"Gosh, ain't it hot!"

"You bet."

"Let's go out to the old quarry."

"All right."

The boys found their favorite spot in a few minutes—a spot forbidden to both of them. It was a deep hole, an abandoned stone quarry now filled with water. A man drove to its edge one time to wash his buggy, and man, horse, buggy and all had disappeared, never to be found. Natives said it was 50 feet deep.

"GOSH, I'd catch it if my old man knew I was here," said Red.

"Huh, I wouldn't," said Bob.

"Your old man's nice, ain't he?"

"Yep."

"Don't he ever lick you?"

"Nope."

"Aw, go on! I don't believe it. Your mother's always sayin' 'Wait till your father comes home,' same as mine."

"She doesn't mean anything. He doesn't care what I do."

"Wish't mine didn't."

"I won't get whipped. Not even for this," declared Bob.

"Gosh!"

Bob dove in and swam out a way. Pretty soon he was over the horse and buggy, wherever they were. The water was pretty cold there and he started back. But what was that? A sharp pain in his stomach that doubled him up in a cramp. He got a noseful of water, panic seized him, and he screamed.

Red called to him, and then Bobby, kicking arms and legs violently, made the shore, where he collapsed.

It was several minutes before he came to.

In a few more minutes Bobby was able to sit up and later to walk around.

"Gee, Red, I almost croaked, I guess. Say, that was a lie I told you. My father does lick me! Wouldn't I 'a' been a nice one to pipe out after me gettin' off such a big one? Guess I'd better tell the truth after this."

IT was Red's turn to be puzzled. "Why wouldn't you tell?"

"I don't know. Guess I want folks to think my father's fine. He is, too!—don't you ever dare to think he ain't. And don't you ever dare tell anyone I get licked, either."

Red pondered this. "Fathers is funny," he remarked. "I guess if they knew their boys liked to be proud of them they'd not be so—oh, you know. I guess some day you'll get to feel like I do, though, and just bust out with it to folks. You ain't goin' to tell you nearly got drowned?"

"I guess maybe I'd better."

"Huh! You'd tell a fib because you don't want folks to know about you gettin' whipped just so they'll think your old man's kind, but you won't tell one to keep from gettin' one!"

"Oh, come on—let's go. I'm tired," said Bob wearily.

The boys trudged homeward silently.

If parents would only take time to understand the loyalty and pride which children take in them, they would very often be astounded. A wise parent, knowing and appreciating this hero-worship in a child, will make an appeal to it.

Discipline thus administered will become not only much simpler, but much more enjoyable. Give children reason to be proud of you.

ALABAMA ACCEPTS CONTEST WITH WASHINGTON STATE

¶ When you read The Register you get the best service on local, county, state and national sports, the field being entirely covered by competent writers and well-trained staff correspondents.

COUGARS MEET 'BAMA ELEVEN ON JANUARY 1

PASADENA, Nov. 28.—(UP)—The University of Alabama today accepted an invitation to meet Washington State in the annual intersectional football game at the Tournament of Roses here New Year's Day.

Announcement that the strong, undefeated Southern team will meet the champions of the Pacific Coast conference was made by Earl Foster, graduate manager of Washington State.

Foster said that he met with C. Hal Reynolds, president of the Rose Bowl tournament, after Alabama defeated Georgia yesterday and it was decided that the Crimson Tide was the team desired for the historic East-West game.

Efforts to locate Wallace Wade, Alabama coach, by telephone were without result as Wade had left for Philadelphia to scout tomorrow's Washington State-Villanova game.

Jess Coleman, business manager of Alabama, was reached, however, and said he had the authority to accept the New Year's offer on behalf of the southern institution.

Foster said that the following official invitation was wired to Dr. George H. Denny, president of Alabama, shortly after the conversation with Coleman:

"On behalf of the Tournament of Roses and State College of Washington I extend an official invitation to you to represent the East and the South at the annual New Year's East-West football game at Pasadena. We sincerely request your acceptance.'

The game will be the third appearance for Alabama and the second for Washington State in Rose Bowl contest. Alabama defeated Washington university and tied Stanford while Washington State beat Brown, 15 to 0, in the first tournament game in 1916.

UTAH IS MOUNTAIN CHAMP; WANTS TROY

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah. Nov. 28.—With another Rocky Mountain conference championship stowed away—their third in as many years—Utah university's undefeated and untied eleven today eagerly awaited developments in the prospective post-season charity game with the University of Southern California December 20.

The Utes came out of the bruising tussle with Utah Agricultural college yesterday without an injury and on the long end of a 41-0 score.

U.S.C. has been seriously considering inviting Utah to play a charity game. The latter is one of the four undefeated and untied teams in the country and is rated as the best team in the history of the Rocky Mountain conference.

SUNDAY GOLF BANNED

CONCORD, N. H., Nov. 28. — Sunday golf has been banned in New Hampshire. The ruling applies to both real golf and the Tom Thumb game. The action was taken because of complaints from miniature course operators that while they were forced to close on Sunday, real golf was permitted.

DONS BATTLE FULLERTON TOMORROW

Postpone Saint-Indian Tilt To Next Friday

STORM CAUSES RIVAL ELEVENS TO DELAY FRAY

Something the natives won't write back to Iowa—the postponement of a football game in Santa Ana because of rain—had been written, nevertheless, into the Santa Ana high school football records today.

The Saints' "Big Game" with Fullerton, reestablishing long severed relations between the one time bitter rivals of Orange county, was called off yesterday on account of inclement weather conditions.

It will be played here next Friday afternoon, one week from today.

Perfect Grid Weather

This action was taken at 11:45 a. m.

Fifteen minutes later the rain stopped.

Half an hour later the sun tried to peep through the clouds.

By 1 o'clock it was fairly clear.

The cool, crisp, dry afternoon proved perfect for football—and all concerned, coaches, players and fans, wished the contest hadn't been called off.

Although announcement that the game had been cancelled was made at Orange county newspaper agencies and over KREG, Santa Ana radio station, hundreds of disappointed fans made their way to Poly field before they learned there was no game. Some scurried to Long Beach for the Long Beach-San Diego game for the Coast Preparatory league championship, won by Long Beach, while others hustled to Los Angeles for the U. S. C.-Washington set-to. Still others returned to Thanksgiving Day tables that had been left too hurriedly anyway.

Cripple Get "Break"

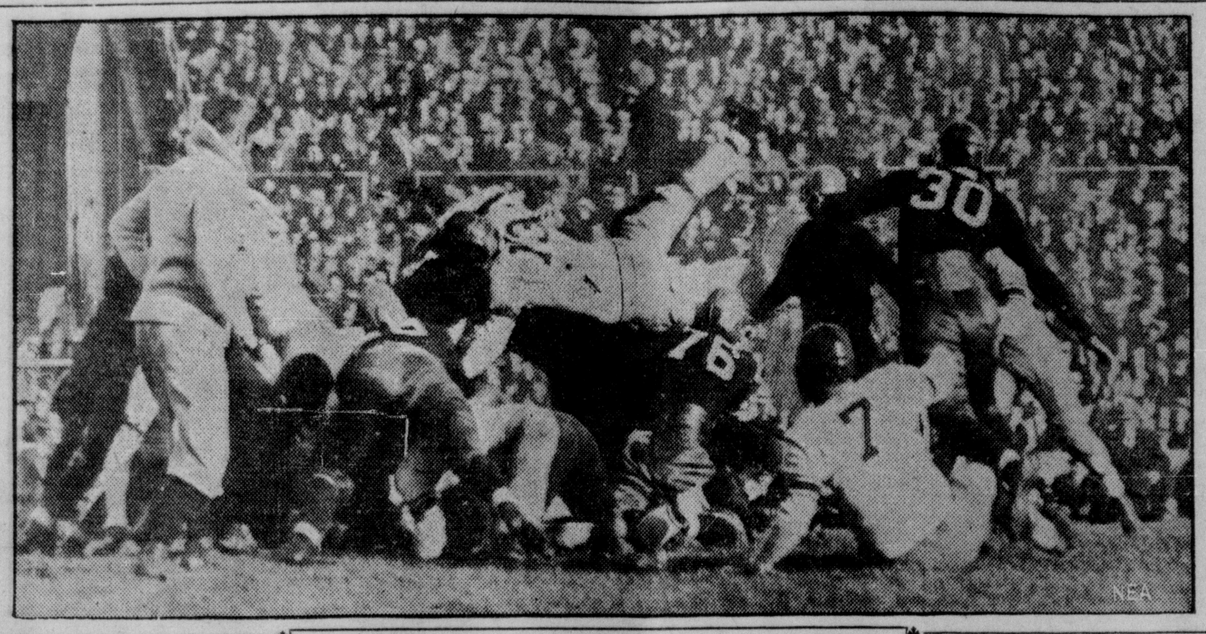

The Friday date next week was set by mutual agreement of the contesting schools. Officials did not schedule the game tomorrow because it would have conflicted with the junior college battle between the cities.

Tickets for reserved seats that were purchased in advance will be good at the game next week, it was announced. Purchasers were cautioned to retain these pasteboards.

The week's delay in proceedings is expected to allow the cripples on the squads of both teams to recover. This will give Coach "Tex" Oliver, of Santa Ana, three first stringers—Lawrence Lutz, left tackle, who has an elbow injury; Garth Olsen, running guard who has been laid up with a bad ankle, and "Gib" Meisinger, a center who has a dislocated elbow.

COLLISION HALTS NORTHWESTERN MACHINE AT GOAL LINE

Here is graphically pictured the climax of Northwestern's magnificent march against Notre Dame in the early moments of the game, and the tragic end of Hank Bruder's hard luck career as a football player. With the ball on Notre Dame's three-yard line, Bruder (Number 13) tore into the line. There was a terrific crash as the linesmen met, Bruder flying through the air from the force of the impact, and dropping the ball. Yarr, the Notre Dame center, is pictured (Number 76) braced against the onslaught. Under the pile, close to Yarr, is little Bert Metzger, the tiny guard who helped to mess up the operation. After Bruder fumbled, Notre Dame recovered and kicked out of danger.

LONG BEACH IS COAST LEAGUE GRID CHAMPION

Undefeated champion of the Coast Preparatory league for the second successive season, Long Beach Poly high tomorrow will dispatch its scouts to Whittier to watch the Orange and Whittier preps play their Southern California titular playoff game. Long Beach will meet the winner of the Whittier game at Long Beach a week from Friday.

Coach Orian Landreth's alert Jackrabbits completed a successful defense of their conference championship at home yesterday, defeating San Diego, previously unbeaten, by a score of 14 to 8 before an assemblage of more than 10,000.

Long Beach's proverbial good fortune and "following of the breaks" followed the Polyites to the very end of the trail. Long Beach won despite the fact that it did not make a single first down while San Diego was accumulating 16, and totaled only 72 yards from scrimmage to San Diego's 238. "Red" Franklin, Long Beach backfield ace, made a total of one yard for his entire afternoon's efforts.

Long Beach scored a touchdown in the first six minutes of play when Carlton, a tackle, intercepted a lateral pass on his own 16-yard line and ran 84 yards to the Hilltoppers' goal. A few minutes later, Peterson, the other Long Beach tackle, blocked a punt and recovered it in the end zone for a safety and two points more. A long pass, Morrow to B. Smith, was completed for another touchdown late in the second quarter.

Trailing 14 points, San Diego attacked vigorously in the last half but couldn't quite overtake the Hares. The Hilltoppers got a touchdown when McElvain grabbed one of Franklin's fumbles before it hit the ground and ran 23 yards to the goal. A blocked punt that also went into the end zone gave San Diego a safety a few minutes later.

The lineup:

Long Beach (14)		San Diego (8)
G. Taylor	LER	Wallace
Carlton	LTR	Moore
Abraham	LGR	Riveroll

MARSHALL'S PUBLICITY GAG FAILS WHEN BEAR OPPONENT WANTS 'WINNER TAKE ALL'

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 28.—(UP)—A wrestling match between a man and a bear in Swope park zoo here went by default when the event gave indications of becoming a Thanksgiving Day feast for the animal.

The wrestler, Everette Marshall, of La Junta, Colo., brought his black bear to Kansas City and donated it to the zoo. It was the same bear that used to be his opponent in training bouts, he explained.

Without any thought of publicity, Everett decided to meet the bear in one more match on Thanksgiving day. Someway Everett's manager let the word out in an unguarded moment.

A crowd of 1500 was on hand when the Coloradoan appeared. Men with movietone apparatus happened along and decided to tarry.

At last a referee was selected, a man who was getting old anyway. He climbed in with Everette and the bear was turned in from an adjoining cage.

It made a haymaker pass at Everette. The referee climbed halfway up the side bars of the cage to get a better view.

The bear came at Everette again. "How about the old airplane spin, Everette, yelled a boxing fan.

But Everette went into a slide slip and glided out through the door of the cage as an attendant opened it.

Two other attendants drove the bear back with blows from shovels seized for the emergency.

By this time the referee had climbed the bars of the cage until the roof prevented him from gaining more altitude.

When the relief expedition arrived he made a three-point landing, picked himself up, and hastily joined Everette outside.

FIVE TROJANS IN HOSPITAL AFTER WASHINGTON BATTLE

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 28.—Five University of Southern California football players were in hospitals today from injuries sustained in the Trojan-University of Washington game, declared to have been the roughest game ever played in the Coliseum.

Southern California won, 32 to 0, with the Huskies threatening to score throughout the contest.

Heading the injured list was Ray Sparling, first string end, who had a badly twisted knee. Sparling definitely is out of the Notre Dame game December 6.

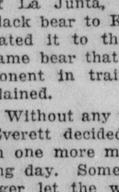

Ernest Pinckert, rated one of the best backs on the Pacific coast, probably will not see action against the Irish. Pinckert has a bad bruise.

Bob Hall, tackle, was carried from the field after a crack on the head.

Orv Mohler, halfback, also considered of All-American calibre, was badly mauled.

Byron Gentry, sub guard, had a deep gash in his leg, but probably will recover before the Ramblers' arrival.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

The life of a football player is a vacation compared with that of a student manager . . . on the home practice field he sees that helmets, footballs and line chains are handy . . . and on trips he's responsible for each player's equipment being properly marked and packed . . . transportation of baggage, purchase of railroad tickets, assignment of Pullman berths, hotel accommodations, unpacking of equipment and team transportation to the playing field are his next worries . . . he orders meals and sees that each player's pillow is smoothed before tucking him in bed . . . before game time he's supposed to arrange for the team's water supply, chewing gum, cube sugar, coffee or whatever they need. . . . And for all this they vote him a monogrammed sweater and put his picture in the annual at the end of the year.

NEWS? OH, YEAH?

When James Joseph Tunney filed a report on his 1927 earnings during the recent $500,000 suit brought by Tim Mara, there was found this item, "News—$32,809."

It is very confusing. If you were to hop right up and ask me what one of Colonel Tunney's "news" stories was about, I believe I'd have to blush and leave the room. Maybe my memory has played me false.

Surely it has. There were other great contemporaneous news reporters—such as that American Shakespeare, George Herman Ruth—and for the life of me I cannot tell you what a single one of his "news" stories was about. The same goes for those other literary lights, Bennah Leonard and Jack Dempsey.

ENGINE STALLED?

I can recall sports news stories that broke quite a while back, too. There are circumstances and phases of conduct of the Jeffries-Johnson fight at Reno in 1910 that readily respond to the summons of memory. Jim Thorpe's deeds are still fresh in this rusty old brain pan.

But I must have slipped a cog

Dick Hanley Rejects U. C. Post, Report

BERKELEY, Nov. 28.—(UP)—Dick Hanley, football coach at Northwestern, was the subject today of persistent campus gossip to the effect that he had turned down an offer to coach at University of California for money reasons.

Absolutely no confirmation of the report could be obtained. The gossip centered around a statement of William Monahan, graduate manager of California.

"While we want a coach with a reputation," Monahan was quoted as saying, "we don't intend to pay a fancy salary."

Monahan is due to start two weeks hence on an eastern trip for the announced purpose of looking over the coaching field.

ORANGE ELEVEN IN TITLE TILT WITH WHITTIER

Orange county's standard-bearer in the divisional playoff for the Southern California intercholastic football crown will get its first dose of championship medicine tomorrow afternoon at Whittier.

Coach Stewart White's crack Orange high school eleven, undefeated winner of the Orange County league race, plays the Whittier Poets, unbeaten champion of the Foothill league.

Rain or shine, the prepsters will so battle at 2:15. The game will be played at Hadley field, home gridiron of Whittier college, which accommodates close to 10,000 persons.

Orange holds victories over San Bernardino, Fullerton, Huntington Beach, Excelsior, Anaheim, Garden Grove, Tustin and Brea-Olinda. Whittier has taken the measure of Covina, Brea-Olinda, Alhambra, Monrovia, Burbank, Herbert Hoover, Muir Tech, Pomona and South Pasadena. Orange also tied but outplayed Santa Ana, one of the strongest non-champion outfits in the south.

The Whitemen will depend for victory on their brilliant backfield combination of Captain Harold Peters, Harold Welty, Ray Todd and Flippen. Peters, Welty and Todd, all triple-threat men, are just about the equal of any prep backs in the state. Orange's line, aside from its ends, is not as strong as it might be but the Panthers have such an advantage in the backfield that they are conceded an even chance with the Poet machine.

Whittier, coached by Don Douglas, former Whittier college star, has a running attack which is fashioned around Captain Arrambide, 175-pound fullback. Arrambide passes, kicks and runs and does them all well.

The probable lineup:

(No.) Whittier		Orange (No.)
(30) Dahlitz	LER	Amling (13)
(13) Harris	LTR	Spennetta (28)
(10) McWilliams	LGR	Wood (27)

(17) Jones	REL	Krueger (15)

COOKMEN HARD HIT BY HURTS, INELIGIBILITY

Rain or shine, the Santa Ana-Fullerton junior college football game will be played at Fullerton tomorrow, officials announced today. The kickoff will be at 2 p. m.

BY "SKY" DUNLAP

Despite a rain-soaked field, postponements, injuries and ineligibilities, .football .teams .representing Santa Ana and Fullerton junior colleges will renew their ancient rivalry tomorrow afternoon at Fullerton and at the same time, climax the jaysee football careers of at least eleven Dons who are completing their second season in the familiar red and black Don jersies.

Even though the Santa Anans defeat the Hornets and end their long season in victory, the departure of the two-year lettermen will leave regret in the minds of Coach Bill Cook and the many followers of the Padres. These same 11 veterans were big factors last year when the Cookmen won the Southern California title by defeating the Fullertonians in that now historic game at Poly field.

No Bearing On Title Race

The Fullerton game will have little or no bearing on the conference standings except to decide the championship of Orange county and see which team will be tied with Pasadena for second place in the final dopesheet. Fullerton has won three games and lost two while Santa Ana has won two, lost two and tied Compton, the conference winners.

The Dons would likely have been in the thick of the pennant fight row except for the injury of Wayne Garlock, star quarterback and "sparkplug" of the Don offense. Garlock has been out for three weeks, during which time the Dons lost conference tussles to Glendale and Los Angeles, two of the weakest teams in the circuit.

The outlook for the Fullerton game is very disheartening from a Santa Ana viewpoint ineligibility and injuries having taken a heavy toll among the Padres. "Toby" Groenow, giant end, was lopped off by the faculty ax. His understudy, Scion Beall has a cracked rib, and the third reserve, Lorry Walbridge, has dropped from the team. Elmore Lord, halfback, has turned in his suit too, and it is extremely unlikely that Clarence Hapes, the big fullback, will be able to see action because of an injured neck and lack of practice.

Don Offense Handicapped

With Garlock also on the shelf, Santa Ana's powerful offense will go glimmering if Hapes is unable to play. The 220-pound Garden Grove battering ram has been about the most consistent ground gainer all season. He was only able to indulge in one practice since the Los Angeles game. His place will be taken by Kiyoshi Shigekawa, aggressive Japanese from Anaheim while Bert Wilkins and Howard Rose may also see action.

Orv Schuchardt is taking Garlock's post at quarter although "Shorty" Privett has been used at this post a good deal during practice and may get to play. Both are very fast and shifty. At halfbacks, Emmett Seacord and Franklin Van Meter are slated to start with Melvin Beatty, Ervin Watkins and Vernon Schauppner listed for reserve duty.

WARNER WEEPS AGAIN: FEARS CARDS DOOMED

STANFORD UNIVERSITY, Nov. 28.—(UP)—"Pop" Warner repeated today that he is "honestly afraid" that his Cardinal football team will not be powerful enough tomorrow to repel the invasion of Jackson Cannel's Big Green Team from Dartmouth.

Warner points to a fast, heavy Dartmouth line as the place where his famous plays are likely to come 200-pound croppers in the shape of Captain Andres, center, Barber, giant tackle, and two fine ends in Branch and Connelly.

As to the Green offense, Warner has heard much of "Airmail" Morton, a halfback who has been running circles around eastern opposition, and a young man named "Wild Bill" McCall, a fleet six-footer who can do everything with a football.

The success of the Warner deception plays, "Pop" took care to point out, depends on airtight support from the line.

As to what can happen when the line buckles, Stanford adherents lugubriously recall the day when the Thundering Herd from Southern California outcharged them all afternoon and the Cardinal yardage from running plays looked like Howard Ehmke's batting average.

All indications were that the game would draw one of the record crowds of the year. Weather forecasts favored a personally clear day, and both schools' allotment of receipts to the unemployed should furnish the crowning inducement to thousands.

LA BARBA, TAYLOR MEET IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Fidel La Barba and Bud Taylor meet in a featherweight bout tonight at Madison Square Garden.

La Barba is a 2 to 1 favorite but the favorites of late, have been the ones defeated.

It was La Barba, incidentally, who started the procession of short-end victories. He defeated Kid Chocolate in a bout some weeks ago. Chocolate had been a 4 to 1 favorite to win.

Caltech Champion Of S. C. Conference

SAN DIEGO, Nov. 28.—The California Institute of Technology won the Southern California conference title here yesterday by defeating San Diego State college 20 to 0. The Engineers were undefeated during 10 conference games.

ROCKNE VERSATILE AS PUPIL: VAULTED HIGH, PLAYED FLUTE

By WILLIAM BRAUCHER
(NEA Service Sports Editor)

In the "Dome" of 1913, the Notre Dame yearbook, is a picture of a young man dressed as "Mrs. Smith," one of the roles in the play "David Garrick." That introduces your friend, Knute Rockne, the Bald Eagle of South Bend, in a brand-new role—female impersonator.

If you can figure that one out, also spent a lot of time in the lab-Notre Dame was a piccolo player!

Old friends of the coach of what apparently has now proved one of the two best teams in the country, confided a few chapters from the student life of Rockne. It was just after the Northwestern game, in which his team's resourcefulness scored a victory after being outplayed during the first half.

Rockne Was Track Star

"We first knew Rockne as a pole vaulter, and he was not the best known boy on the campus in those days. In chemistry he was a wizard. He became known as a good elocutionist and took part in many of the plays.

"The trait that always marked Rockne as we knew him in those days was tenacity. When he set about to do something he clung to his task like a bulldog. He had quiet confidence in his ability to accomplish anything he undertook.

"He was a great pole vaulter. In those days 12 feet was a sensational mark. Knute finally attained it after long hours of practice. He here's another: Knute Rockne at oratory, experimenting with this and that. He had a lively imagination and always was bobbing up with something new. Teachers became interested in him.

Became Science Assistant

"Even before Rockne graduated, he was assistant professor of chemistry.

"The 17-year-old copy of the 'Dome' shows Rockne as a player in the band. The following verse, by one of the student writers, concerns the musical young chemistry prof:

"'While lively-going Knute,
Who sometimes plays the piccolo,
Received applause from all
For recovering the pigskin'."

Glancing through the year-book of Rockne's day reveals other interesting notes about the young man. Such as: "May 4—Track team goes to Columbus minus Rockne and Ohio State gets us, 59 to 58."

It seems that Knute, however, finally met his master at Notre Dame in one form of endeavor. In the "Dome" there is a note, dated April 13: "Herricks claims marble championship of university. Defeats Rockne."

Well, it's interesting to know he can lose something, anyway.

FOUR TEAMS IN RACE FOR U. S. GRIDIRON TITLE

By COPELAND C. BURG
(I. N. S. Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Football's fading season settled low on the horizon today, silhouetting like towers of stone four undefeated, untied teams. They are Notre Dame, Alabama, Washington State and Utah.

Alabama came through with a smashing 13 to 0 win over the well-drilled Georgia team yesterday and Utah took all the flavor out of the turkey dinners of the Utah Aggies, drum-sticking them to the tune of 41 to 0.

The big upset in yesterday's games was the defeat of Penn by Cornell. The old master, Gil Dobie, showed up with one Bart Vivanio, a young man from Plainfield, N. J., and a couple of variations of the old off-tackle play. The combination was too much for Penn and the Red and Blue folded up 13 to 7.

Colgate was too powerful for Brown and won, 27 to 0. Syracuse smashed Columbia 19 to 7. Pitt took Penn State 19 to 12, Oregon State beat West Virginia 12 to 0 at Chicago. Marquette, undefeated but tied once this season, romped 27 to 0 over Butler, and Tennessee flipped Kentucky, 8 to 0.

Oregon was better than unexpected in holding St. Mary's to a 7 to 6 triumph and not a soul told us Missouri would tie Oklahoma 0 to 0 or Kansas Aggies beat Nebraska 10 to 9. Florida rose higher than the Chrysler building to wallop Georgia Tech 55 to 7.

For tomorrow we like Notre Dame over Army at Chicago, Southern Methodist over T. C. U. at Dallas, Georgetown over Detroit at Detroit, Washington State over Villanova at Philadelphia, Holy Cross over Boston college at Boston, Temple over Drake at Philadelphia, and Stanford over Dartmouth at Palo Alto.

DONS END FOOTBALL SEASON TOMORROW

ter while Harry Clayton and Mike Santa Cruz should repeat their stellar performance at tackle. Kluthe, Clayton, Santa Cruz and Hal Dunham at end have played virtually every minute of every conference game and are leading candidates for all-conference honors.

Six Guards Available

Cook has six guards to choose from with little choice between them. Philip Martin and Gene Olsen have seen the most service so far but Curt and Kermit McCoy from Orange and Wayne Bartholomew and Harry Lake are all on an equal footing. Bill Harkleroad, a Don equally capable at halfback or end, is slated to fill Groenow's end position but Kiyoshi Higashi, Charles Andres, and Gene Edwards will break into the lineup.

Tickets will be on sale today and Saturday morning at the Vic Walker sporting goods store. Santa Ana fans will sit on the south side of the field while Don students will have a special rooting section. Game time is at 2 p. m.

HOOKS and SLIDES

somewhere. I ought to remember news that our great American editors thought enough enough of to buy for $32,809 per annum. Really now, that is almost as much as a sports writer makes, even without experience in the ring.

There comes to me dimly some recollection of having seen "By Gene Tunney, Heavyweight Champion of the World," at the top of a newspaper column. But the important kernels of truth and wisdom that he dispensed at the rate of $32,809 per annum have escaped my humble dome somehow.

Guess I'll have to quit those hamburger sandwiches with onion after 10 p. m. Eventually they'll get you, I have been told, and this is probably the proof.

IMPROVE EACH SHINING HOUR!

Memory is a peculiar function. I can recite whole paragraphs from Kirkie Simpson's splendid story of the Unknown Soldier's return to his native heath. Well written, imaginative news stories somehow leave an impression. I can remember a story more than 10 years old, written by a $30-a-week reporter, concerning as prosaic a subject as a gang war in Chicago.

I feel that I should remember Colonel Tunney's pieces, too. Didn't he lecture at Yale? And marry into the Social Register? If that weren't enough, hasn't he a brother who is a cop in New York? These things, even without the heavyweight championship of the world, add no little to a man's prestige.

I must hurry over to the library and brush up on that $32,809 worth of valuable information dispensed as "news" by Colonel Tunney in 1927. A fellow should try to improve himself every chance he gets.

ROCKNE CONSIDERS

You probably read the other day that K. K. Rockne was considering an offer to become head coach at the University of California. You probably read the same thing in 1925. And maybe you'll read it again in 1940, who knows?

THAT'S FUNNY!

Northwestern beat Tulane by two touchdowns. Tulane knocked Georgia loose after Georgia had beaten both Yale and New York U. It almost makes you wonder what kind of football teams they have at Yale and New York U. Likewise, at Northwestern.

MOHLER SPEAKS UP

During the game with California, Ory Mohler, Trojan quarterback, caught a pass, told a couple of his interferers which California men to take out, and ran 74 yards for a touchdown. If he expects to repeat that when U. S. C. plays Notre Dame, he will have to tell 'em the night before the game.

BUILDING A TEAM

Last year Karl Davis left the University of Pittsburgh, where he had served as graduate manager during the successful upbuilding of the Panther's prowess, to take up a similar post at Western Reserve, Cleveland.

Davis started out by scheduling good teams. Reserve took it on the chin regularly. This year he kept right on, scheduling topliners such as Pitt and Carnegie Tech. In seven games, Reserve scored 39 points against 267 by the enemy.

Next year? The doctor prescribes the same medicine, the season's opener being with Purdue, and games with Pitt and Syracuse following. What's it all about? You'll have to watch the team's scores during the next two years to find out.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

Bill Roper's successor at Princeton, Al Wittmer, has been line coach of the Tigers for three years. . . . he has a four-year contract. . . . Ted Coy says that isn't a backfield at Notre Dame this year . . . Brill, Carideo, Mullins, Schwartz and the others he calls "chorus boys" because of their remarkable timing, precision and rhythm. . . . The unemployment situation wasn't so bad in Chicago that Tom Jones, colored boy who acted as sparring mate for King Levinsky, was enamored of that sort of toil . . . at $10 a day . . . Jones asked for $25 a day and was shown the portals . . . of course, lots of people are crazy about that kind of work, if you get what I mean. . . . Arnie Horween's rather 40 years ago came to America from Russia, got a job as a tanner in Chicago and is now owner of a large leather factory.

Walker Favorite Over Christner

CHICAGO, Nov. 28.—Mickey Walker, world middleweight champion, will concede Kayo Christner of Akron, O., 39 pounds in their 10-round bout at Chicago Coliseum tonight. Walker, making his second start in the heavyweight class, is quoted as an 8 to 5 favorite. Christner expects to enter the ring weighing 197 pounds while Walker scaled 166 after yesterday's workout.

SPECTATOR'S TOE BROKEN

AKRON, O., Nov. 28. — Enthusiasm for the sport led City Health Inspector J. R. Fontaine to the sidelines during a recent high school football game here. An out-of-bounds play converged upon him and when he was extricated he was moaning over four broken toes.

BASKETBALL SQUAD OUT

LAWRENCE, Kan., Nov. 28.—Forty freshmen have turned out for pre-season practice in basketball at the University of Kansas. Dr. F. C. Allen, director of athletics, and basketball coach, will organize a handball tournament as an early conditioner.

NAMED FOR HORSE

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 28. —Marchmont Schwartz, Notre Dame halfback, derived his name from a race horse who was making track history when "Marchy" was born. The Notre Dame star has lived up to any ideal of speed the horse may have had.

WHY NOT the TRUTH

Why don't retail clothiers admit they are still charging enormous profits to feed their gigantic overhead expenses. Why don't they admit that it's a mistake under present business conditions, with woolen prices and production costs 20% to 30% lower. WHY NOT THE TRUTH ABOUT CLOTHING PRICES?

We've slashed our overhead down to the bone. We are giving our customers every single advantage of all possible savings, still better values thru our powerful ONE PRICE PLAN. We are producing the greatest clothing values in America today REGARDLESS OF PRICE. And we challenge anyone to equal them.

The Scarab Murder Case

CHAPTER II

The Vengeance of Sakhmet

(Friday, July 13; 11:30 a. m.)

Markham greeted Vance with a look of sour reproach.

"What's the meaning of this?" he demanded tartly. "I was in the midst of an important committee meeting—"

"The meaning is still to be ascertained," Vance interrupted lightly, stepping into the car. "The cause of your ungracious presence, however, is a most fascinatin' murder."

Markham shot him a shrewd look, and gave orders to the chauffeur to drive with all possible haste to the Bliss Museum. He recognized the symptoms of Vance's perturbation: a frivolous outward attitude on Vance's part was always indicative of an inner seriousness.

Markham and he had been friends for fifteen years, and Vance had aided him in many of his investigations. In fact, he had come to depend on Vance's assistance in the more complicated criminal cases that came under his jurisdiction.

It would be difficult to find two men so diametrically opposed to each other temperamentally. Markham was stern, aggressive, straightforward, grave, and a trifle ponderous. Vance was debonair, whimsical, and superficially cynical—an amateur of the arts, and with only an impersonal concern in serious social and moral problems. But this very disparateness in their natures seemed to bind them together.

On our way to the museum, a few blocks distant, Scarlett recounted briefly to the District Attorney the details of his macabre discovery.

Markham listened attentively. Then he turned to Vance.

"Of course, it may be just an act of thuggery—some one from the street...."

"Oh, my aunt!" Vance sighed and shook his head lugubriously. "Really, y' know, thugs don't enter conspicuous private houses in broad daylight and rap persons over the head with statues. They at least bring their own weapons and choose mises-enscene which offer some degree of safety."

"Well, anyway," Markham grumbled, "I've notified Sergeant Heath. He'll be along presently."

At the corner of Twentieth street and Fourth Avenue he halted the car. A uniformed patrolman stood before a call-box, who, on recognizing the District Attorney, came to attention and saluted.

"Hop in the front seat, officer," Markham ordered. "We may need you."

When we reached the museum Markham stationed the officer at the foot of the steps leading to the double front door; and we at once ascended to the vestibule.

I made a casual mental note of the two houses, which Scarlett had already briefly described to us. Each had a twenty-five-foot frontage, and was constructed of large flat blocks of brownstone. The house on the right had no entrance—it had obviously been walled up. Nor were there any windows on the areaway level. The house on the left, however, had not been altered. It was three stories high; and a broad light of stone stairs, with high stone banisters, led to the first floor. The "basement," as was usual in such structures, was a little below the street level. The two houses had at one time been exactly alike, and now, with the alterations and the one entrance, gave the impression of being a single establishment.

As we entered the shallow vestibule—a characteristic of all the old brownstone mansions along the street—I noticed that the heavy oak entrance door, which Scarlett had said was ajar earlier in the morning, was now closed. Vance, too, remarked the fact, for he at once turned to Scarlett and asked:

Scarlett looked seriously at the massive panels, as if trying to recall his actions.

"Really, old man, I can't remember," he answered. "I was devilishly upset. I may have shut the door.."

Vance tried the knob, and the door opened.

"Well, well. The latch has been set anyway. Very careless on some one's part..Is that usual?"

Scarlett looked astonished.

"Never knew it to be unlatched."

Vance held up his hand, indicating that we were to remain in the vestibule, and stepped quietly inside to the steel door on the right leading into the museum. We could see him open it gingerly but could not distinguish what was beyond. He disappeared for a moment.

"Oh, Kyle's quite dead," he announced sombrely on his return. "And apparently no one has discovered him yet." He cautiously reclosed the front door. "We sha'n't take advantage of the latch being set," he added. "We'll abide by the conventions and see who answers." Then he pressed the bell-button.

A few moments later the door was opened by a cadaverous, chlorotic man in butler's livery. He bowed perfunctorily to Scarlett, and coldly inspected the rest of us.

"Brush, I believe." It was Vance who spoke.

"Is Doctor Bliss in?" Vance asked.

Brush shifted his gaze interrogatingly to Scarlett. Receiving an [illegible] nod, he opened the door a little wider.

"Yes, sir," he answered. "He's in his study. Who shall I say is calling?"

"You needn't disturb him, Brush." Vance stepped into the entrance hall, and we followed him. "Has the doctor been in his study all morning?"

Vance smiled, not unkindly.

"Your manner is quite correct, Brush. But we're not wanting lessons in etiquette. This is Mr. Markham, the District Attorney of New York; and we're here for information. Do you care to give it voluntarily?"

The man had caught sight of the uniformed officer at the foot of the stone steps, and his face paled.

"You'll be doing the doctor a favor by answering," Scarlett put in.

"Doctor Bliss has been in his study since nine o'clock," the butler replied, in a tone of injured dignity.

"How can you be sure of that fact?" Vance asked.

"I brought him his breakfast there; and I've been on this floor ever since."

"Doctor Bliss's study," interjected Scarlett, "is at the rear of this hall." He pointed to a curtained door at the end of the wide corridor.

"He should be able to hear us now," remarked Markham.

"No, the door is padded," Scarlett explained. "The study is his sanctum sanctorum; and no sounds can reach him from the house."

The butler, his eyes like two glittering pin-points, had started to move away.

"Just a moment, Brush." Vance's voice halted him. "Who else is in the house at this time?"

The man turned, and when he answered it seemed to me that his voice quavered slightly.

"Mr. Hani is up-stairs. He has been indisposed—"

"Oh, has he, now?" Vance took out his cigarette-case. "And the other members of the household?"

"And Dingle?"

"She's in the kitchen below, sir."

Vance studied the butler appraisingly.

"You need a tonic, Brush. A combination of iron, arsenic and strychnine would build you up."

"Yes, sir, I've been thinking of consulting a doctor..It's lack of fresh air, sir."

"Just so." Vance had selected one of his beloved Regies, and was lighting it with meticulous care. "By the by, Brush; what about Mr. Kyle? He called here this morning, I understand."

"He's in the museum now..I'd forgotten, sir. Doctor Bliss may be with him."

"Indeed! And what time did Mr. Kyle arrive?"

"About ten o'clock."

"Did you admit him?"

"Yes, sir."

"And did you notify Doctor Bliss of his arrival?"

"No, sir. Mr. Kyle told me not to disturb the doctor. He explained that he was early for his appointment, and wished to look over some curios in the museum for an hour or so. He said he'd knock on the doctor's study door later."

"And he went direct into the museum?"

"Yes, sir—in fact, I opened the door for him."

Vance drew luxuriously on his cigarette for a moment.

"One more thing, Brush. I note that the latch on the front door has been set, so that any one from the outside could enter the house without ringing.."

The man gave a slight start and, going quickly to the door, bent over and inspected the lock.

"So it is, sir..Very strange."

Vance watched him closely.

"Why strange?"

"Well, sir, it wasn't unlatched when Mr. Kyle came at ten o'clock. I looked at it specially when I let him in. He said he wished to be left alone in the museum, and as members of the house sometimes leave the door on the latch when they go out for a short time, I made sure that no one had done so this morning. Otherwise they might have come in and disturbed Mr. Kyle without my warning them."

"But, Brush," interjected Scarlett excitedly; "when I got here at half past ten the door was open—"

Vance made an admonitory gesture.

"That all right, Scarlett." Then he turned back to the butler. "Where did you go after admitting Mr. Kyle?"

"In the drawing-room." The man pointed to a large sliding door halfway down the hall on the left, at the foot of the stairs.

"And remained there till when?"

"Till ten minute ago."

"Did you hear Mr. Scarlett come in and go out of the front door?"

"No, sir..But then, I was using the vacuum cleaner. The noise of the motor—"

"Quite so. But if the vacuum cleaner's motor was hummin', how do you know that Doctor Bliss did not leave his study?"

"The drawing-room door was open, sir. I'd have seen him if he came out.

"But he might have gone into the museum and left the house by the front door without your hearing him. Y' know, you didn't hear Mr. Scarlett enter."

"That would have been out of the question, sir. Doctor Bliss wore only a light dressing-gown over his pyjamas. His clothes are all up-stairs."

"Very good, Brush..And now, one more question. Has the front door-bell rung since Mr. Kyle's arrival?"

"No, sir."

"Maybe it rang and Dingle answered it..That motor hum, don't y' know."

"She would have come up and told me, sir. She never answers the door in the morning. She's not in in presentable habiliments till afternoon.

"Quite characteristically feminine," Vance murmured.."That will be all for the present, Brush. You may go down-stairs and wait for our call. An accident has happened to Mr. Kyle, and we are going to look into it. You are to say nothing..understand?" His voice had suddenly become stern and ominous.

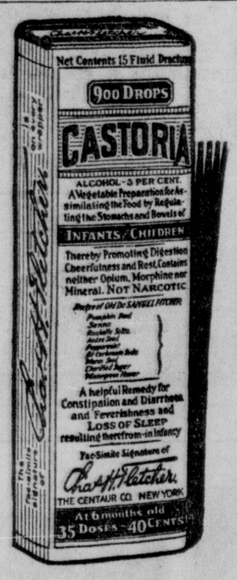

Brush drew himself up with a quick intake of breath; he appeared positively ill, and I almost expected him to faint. His face was like chalk.

"Certainly, sir—I understand." His words were articulated with great effort. Then he walked away unsteadily and disappeared down the rear stairs to the left of Doctor Bliss's study door.

Spirit of St. Louis
Across that ocean wide
"Foolish undertaking"
Everybody sighed
Think how madly sure
Young and all alone
But ne'er can he endure
Yes, all in vain, they groan!

Soon glad tidings came
O'er the air to me.
But no, grownups insisted, "For Rations poor has he."
Into that vast beyond
E'er on and on sped he.
Tasting only water
Yet on to victory.

Chauffeur Wanted

Young Man: I have come to apply for a position as chauffeur, which I saw advertised in the morning paper.

Mr. Preston: (eyeing the shabbily dressed young man suspiciously), having already talked with seven others this morning who desired this position, I think it will not be worthwhile, young man.

Young man: But it hardly seems fair, sir, for you not to give me more of a chance. I am not as old as I look, but you see—and of course my clothes——

Mr. Preston: That has very little to do with it. The fact is I have a family whom I love more than all the world, and I cannot trust their lives to any but the most trustworthy. Of all of these other seven, not one of them could be trusted with the lives of my dear ones.

Young man: What a shame! But how could you tell, sir? you tell, sir?

Mr. Preston: When I asked them the last, but most important question, "Do you use intoxicants?" each and every one answered "Not very much, just a little."

Young man: (Joyfully) Oh! is that all? Poor fellows! Perhaps they have never made a study of the life of, I think, our greatest hero, Lindbergh. Ever since his wonderful flight, sir, water has been good enough for me. Maybe going without liquor will never make a hero aviator out of me, but I am convinced that it will make me dependable and trustworthy by giving me a strong body, clear mind and perfect nerve control.

Mr. Preston: My boy I believe you are the very one I want, for any one who has Lindbergh for his example is good enough for me. You may go to work at once.

Page 6—Purported letter from Lindbergh to his mother on his arrival in France, May 23, 1927:

Dearest Mother:

No doubt you have heard over the radio that I made my trip safely, but I want to write you with my own hand tonight to tell you that it is really so. You know, mother, I never doubted but what I would succeed and I am of course very happy and grateful to have accomplished this. I was sure my plane was O. K. and I never feared for myself, for my body was in good condition, my mind was clear, my muscles active, my vision good and my nerves in perfect control, and all because of the careful health habits you taught me.

If water was good enough for me on land, why risk alcoholic drinks on my flight? That is why I was so satisfied to bring nothing to drink with me, but water. When the people of France crowd around praising me, I feel that you are the one who deserves all the praise for teaching me the evils of drinking liquors.

We will talk it all over together when we meet, but until then many, many thanks for advising me for the good.

Lovingly, your son, Charles.

Sensible sailors of the seas stay sober.

Able aviators always abstain.

Firemen for cities find water their best friend for drinking as well as for fighting fire.

Efficient engineers insure safety to railroad passengers by using no alcoholic drinks.

Thoughtful tourists use no intoxicants while traveling.

"Workers"

Of all the many kinds of workers in the world, I can think of one that is less liable to accidents if he drinks. The doctor or surgeon needs a strong body to stand the long hours and it is very dangerous for him to drive if his eyesight is blurred and his muscles are not active He needs a clear mind to tell what is the matter with his patients and to give them the right medicine. A surgeon needs not only good eyesight and a clear mind, but good muscle action and a steady hand for his operations. He cannot have these if he uses intoxicating drinks.

Although electricity is very useful it is also very dangerous. Therefore an electrician must be level headed, accurate, and dependable and must have good eyesight and perfect control or his life is in danger and he may cause great property damage. He cannot be or have these things if his brain is muddled with liquor.

A miner's work is very dangerous, too. If he drinks and is careless there is danger of his causing a mine explosion, or fire, which would trap many workers, making it impossible for them to escape, as well as losing his own life.

Any kind of a builder needs to abstain from the use of liquor in any form, for each and every part of what he is building or planning must be done to exact measurements or there is danger of the building collapsing and causing injury to someone.

He must be quick, level headed (for he works at all heights), steady, dependable and very accurate. Intoxicants keep him from being any of these.

As liquor muddles the brain, weakens the muscles, blurs the sight and affects the nerves, every worker is in danger of injuring himself as well as others, if he does not abstain.

"The Man At The Wheel"

With such rapid increase in traffic and passengers, greater care than ever before must be taken for safety. No matter where one goes, especially in California, there is an almost constant stream

JUNIOR LIONS INITIATE TWO NEW MEMBERS

Having served five weeks of pledgeship, Richard Robbins and Paul Wright were initiated into the Junior Lions club of the Santa Ana junior college following the giant football rally sponsored by the Lions Wednesday night.

For three days preceding the rally, pledges and members of the club worked day and night filling the two-story house south of Santa Ana with trash, boxes, trees and rubbish. The final initiation rites were given to the pledges around the smoking ashes of the house by Ray Glesener, club president.

The interclass events at the rally ended in a tie with the freshmen winning the sackrush, the sophomores the tug-of-war and the flagpole rush ending in a tie. Picked teams of 25 men from each class battled in the three events before a crowd of about 1000 students and townspeople who were attracted to the scene by the flaming house. After the battles, Coach Bill Cook and Captain Al Kluthe of the football team talked about the Fullerton football game Saturday. Howard Barnes, Don yell leader, led school yells and a sepentine was held around the blazing house. A parade through the business section preceded the rally.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

Thanksgiving day services were held Thursday in Christian Science churches, branches of the Mother Church, the First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston, Mass. "Thanksgiving" was the subject of the lesson-sermon.

The golden text was from Psalms 97:12, "Rejoice in the Lord, ye righteous; and give thanks at the remembrance of his holiness."

One of the scripture selections in the lesson-sermon included the following words of Paul to the Corinthians: "But this I say, He which seweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly; and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully...And God is able to make all grace abound toward you; that ye, always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work:...Being enriched in every thing to all bountifulness, which causeth through us thanksgiving to God."

A correlative passage from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy, stated: "Christians rejoice in secret beauty and bounty, hidden from the world, but known to God. Self-forgetfulness, purity, and affection are constant prayers. Practice not profession, understanding not belief, gain the ear and right hand of omnipotence and they assuredly call down infinite blessings."

Testimonies of gratitude appropriate for the occasion were given by Christian Scientists.

SEND MILLIONS OF CHRISTMAS SEALS IN MAIL

During the coming week nearly a million homes in California will receive Christmas seals, the symbol of the fight against tuberculosis, it was announced today by Mrs. Amelia Meagher, executive secretary of the Orange County Tuberculosis association.

"These seals are being sent out by the 61 city and county tuberculosis associations throughout the state. This year marks the 24th seal sale of the National Tuberculosis association and the use of these seals has become an established custom among millions of people throughout the United States, she said.

"In announcing the Christmas seal sale, the California Tuberculosis association said, 'Health is not an accident. Science has shown us that certain diseases are unnecessary, among these is tuberculosis, taking a toll 20 years ago of more than 200 lives out of each 100,000, since reduced to 107.'

"An organized army is devoted to drive out this disease entirely from society. The attack is centered on tuberculosis because of its insidious character as well as the extent of its onslaught.

"There is another great reason why the forces arrayed under the banner of the double-barred cross, financed by the annual Christmas seal sale, concentrate on tuberculosis. This is because of the measures that prevent tuberculosis also prevent many other diseases. Destroy tuberculosis and the danger of other diseases is reduced proportionately.

SHERMAN BEATS GRANT

ALLOTMENT IS BASED ON SIX MONTH PERIOD

Orange county will receive $154,641 as its share of the $18,781,419 collected by the state from the three cent tax on gasoline for the six months from April 1 to September 30, it was announced today by State Controller Ray L. Riley.

The total to be distributed among the 58 counties of the state will be $6,260,473, according to the announcement. The apportionment for the 58 counties represents a gain of $886,446 over the amount collected during the previous six months.

Under the new law adopted in 1929, no county will receive less than $5000. The remainder of the motor vehicle fuel fund is distributed among the larger counties on the basis of their registration of motor vehicles.

These larger counties included: Los Angeles, $2,639,931; San Francisco, $493,732; Alameda, $456,372, San Diego, $240,073; Fresno $184,999; Santa Cruz, $176,266; Sacramento, $156,792; Orange, $154,641; San Bernardino, $145,109; San Joaquin, $120,625, and Kern, $112,854.

U. S. Bureau of Dairy Industry estimates that about $40,000,000 is lost each year through producing milk and cream of poor quality on the country's dairy farms.

Country Club Members Will Enjoy Holiday Dance Tonight

The genial holiday spirit promises to make tonight's monthly dance at Santa Ana Country club, an unusually pleasant affair, and the presence in the city of so many young people, home from colleges and universities for the Thanksgiving vacation, bids fair to make the crowd an unusually large one.

Dancing will begin at 9 o'clock, and the Alton Redd orchestra, a favorite with Country club members, has been engaged for the music. Dr. and Mrs. William A. Flood and Dr. and Mrs. Karl Loerch jr will be hosts for the occasion. The dance will bring November club festivities to a close, and then the members will turn their attention to the special gayeties and charms of the Christmas month.

Editorial Staff Women Assemble For Bridge Evening

An evening of bridge, in which the usual rules for scoring were observed, only to be changed by new and amazing rules, provided a pleasant evening Wednesday, for feminine members of The Register editorial staff and a few special guests, when Miss Virginia Viau, Miss Audrey Teel and Mrs. Emmett Elliott entertained in the home of the latter on Riverine avenue.

Bridge prizes in the contest, were presented Mrs. J. Frank Burke and Miss Maysel Spicer. Refreshments were served late in the evening at the small tables, each centered with a scarlet candle whose brass candlestick flaunted a flaring tulle bow to vie with the flaming poinsettias that lent cheer and color to the Little Gray House.

Asked to share the evening with the three hostesses, were Mrs. Loyal K. King, Mrs. Harry Azus, Mrs. Carl Thrasher, Mrs. J. F. Adams, Miss Miriam Samuelson, Miss Emma Wall, and a little group of special guests, Mrs. J. Frank Burke, Mrs. J. U. Viau, Mrs. S. D. Teel, Miss Maysel Spicer and Miss Veneta Viau.

Phi Sigma Fraternity Presents Holiday Dancing Party

One of the most enjoyable affairs of the Thanksgiving season was the semi-formal dance with which members of the Alpha Alpha chapter, Phi Sigma fraternity, added to the holiday gaiety, entertaining Wednesday night in the handsome new San Clemente Country clubhouse in the Spanish village. S

Holiday appointments, excellent music furnished by Norman Morgan and his Moderne Musicians of this city, and the lovely dance frocks worn by the girls all contributed to the charm of this annual festivity of the Alpha Alphas. A friendly gesture on the part of the hosts, was the presentation to each feminine guest of a gardenia in corsage arrangement, to complete her effective costume.

The dance was the eighth in the series of annual functions given at this season by the fraternity men and equaled its predecessors in charm and enjoyment.

Among those present were Messrs. and Mesdames R. E. Chapman, A. V. Smith, Ted Roper, P. D. Cook, Don Wasser, Frank Briggs, Wilbur Conrad of Los Angeles; Newton Richards, Elwood Kirkpatrick, of Anaheim; Roy Shipp, of Orange; Oscar Preston, the Misses Elizabeth Gillmour, Jane Fenwick, Elizabeth Roehm, Frances Merrill, Georgia Allender, Cleo West, Louise Rurup, Ruth Owens, Helen Stauffer, Jeannette Peacock, Phyllis Pope, Velma Smith, Helen Bower, Julia Thorndike, Peggy Warburton, Dorothy Kern of Orange, Lenoer Fernandez, Nettie Jones, Elpha Thorndike, Berenice Gohres, Marie Carothers, Mary Santel of Los Angeles, Lolita Mead, Helen Sawdey, Wilma Silver, Nelle Bales, Anne Santel of Los Angeles Virginia Berry, Alice Majors, Riva Mentoe, Barbara Rurup, Edna Laughlin of Long Beach, and Georgia Grant of Whittier.

Tones of Yellow Were Used In Luncheon Appointments

A charming bridge luncheon of Tuesday was given in the home of Mrs. Daisy McGee of 519 West Second street when she was hostess to members of the S. O. A. club.

The dining table was a study in varying tones of yellow. Yellow paper chrysanthemums, made by the hostess formed the centerpiece, while graceful tapers and nut baskets were in the chosen color theme. Following the delicious menu, the afternoon was passed at cards. When tallies were checked, it was revealed that Mrs. S. A. Sissons held high score, Mrs. George Merriman second and Mrs. S. M. Higgins, low. Each received a desirable prize.

Mrs. R. L. Ballard was a guest, while members sharing the afternoon with Mrs. McGee were Mesdames S. A. Sissons, B. H. Bauman, of Anaheim, William Batt, George Merriman and S. M. Higgins, and Mrs. D. H. Thompson of Santa Ana.

Mr. and Mrs. Thatcher Were Dinner Hosts

A delightfully informal dinner was enjoyed Wednesday night at the C. G. Thatcher home at 806 West Pine street, when Mr. and Mrs. Thatcher were hosts to a group of friends. Quantities of holly were used to provide an attractive floral setting for the delicious menu served at 6:30, following which bridge was played. High scores were held by Mrs. A. A. Hardy and C. G. Thatcher.

Those enjoying the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Thatcher included Messrs. and Mesdames Ray Wyckoff, T. S. Hunter, Robert Sandon, A. A. Hardy and Elmo Hurlburt.

Birthday Celebration Was Special Event In De Wolfe Home

Because the birthday anniversary which they share, always falls on or close to the national observance of Thanksgiving, Mrs. Emrys D. White and William H. De Wolfe, have claimed for themselves, the title of "Thanksgiving children," and each year, rejoice in the title at the delightfully intimate little dinner which Mrs. De Wolfe plans in celebration of the joint anniversary.

This year, the date did indeed coincide with the holiday, but because Mr. and Mrs. De Wolfe could not miss the Caltech-San Diego State game, where their nephew, De Wolfe Murdock, was playing guard on the Caltech lineup, the annual birthday party was held instead on Tuesday evening in their home at 2014 North Broadway.

It was a pleasant family gathering, with covers laid for the hosts, Mr. and Mrs. De Wolfe, Mr. and Mrs. White, Miss Nancy White, Emrys White jr., and John Murdock, one of the three nephews who share the De Wolfe home.

A second nephew, Wilson Murdock, a freshman at California Institute of Technology, Pasadena, arrived yesterday to spend his vacation and accompany Mr. and Mrs. De Wolfe to San Diego for the game. De Wolfe Murdock, a senior at Caltech, will arrive today to spend the remainder of the Thanksgiving recess. His team now holds the championship of the league, having scored yesterday over the San Diego players at 20 to 0.

Many Diners Choose Country Club For Festivities

Thanksgiving was made a quietly delightful day at Santa Ana Country club, where many members chose to stage their intimate family gatherings, rather than celebrate the feast day in their homes. Flaggs entertained for four, as did Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Rutan. Mrs. J. F. Burke was hostess at a small family party, choosing to entertain in the clubhouse because of Mr. Burke's absence. He is at present recuperating from an operation in St. Joseph's hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. J. LaMont McFadden had a group of four at their table, as did the C. P. Kinyons. Mr. and Mrs. J. K. McDonald had five guests, while the E. O. Fulsoms of Garden Grove had three in their party. Others joining in friendly small groups for either a mid-day or an evening dinner, included Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Trickey, Mr. and Mrs. Claude Van Antwerp, Judge and Mrs. George Kenneth Scovel, and many others.

The MIXING BOWL by ANN MEREDITH

Sausage Makes Nourishing Breakfast

I am indebted to a former cooking "columnist" for the following paragraph which she so kindly sent me with a line saying at was written for publication several years ago, but was still good cooking logic. I agree with her.

"A very wholesome breakfast dish is made by cooking one-half pound of sausage (bulk pork sausage) in one quart of water. Stir in enough corn meal to make a thick mush. When done, put in a pan and let stand over night. Slice and fry for breakfast. Any chopped meat may be used in this way.

"At this time of the year we all feel the need of food that is really strength giving. Mushrooms are said to contain more calories than any food. It may not be possible to obtain fresh ones but there are always dried mushrooms in the market....put a few pieces in a frying pan with one cupful of water and one teaspoonful of butter. Just as they boil dry drop on the eggs you are going to fry, and cover them until they are cooked as desired. Season to taste."

Theories about calories change almost overnight and it is now known that mushrooms have small value as a source of energy foods, but do carry some valuable mineral elements and add greatly to the delectability of the food they are used with. The sausage loaf is a fine way of stretching a small amount of meat and at the same time providing a nourishing hot breakfast.

TODAY'S RECIPE

Tamale Loaf

1 1-2 pounds boiling beef
3 cups broth
3 cups strained canned tomatoes
1 large onion, minced
1 teaspoon chili powder
1-8 teaspoon cayenne
1 teaspoon paprika
1 cup ripe olives
1 1-4 cups cornmeal
Salt and pepper to taste

This recipe is splendid for making the table budget go as far as it should, but seldom does. Of course, the recipe is generous as to size, so let me suggest dividing and baking it in two small loaves Serve one for dinner with a good brown gravy, and the other one for some later occasion, but in different fashion.

Broil a few slices of bacon, and in the fat brown slices of the tamale loaf, dipping in egg and breaded. Serve with a rich savory cream gravy, made after the slices have been browned.

Use a cheap cut of beef but one that is almost all solid meat. Simmer tender in water enough to make about five cups of broth when done. Take out the meat and chop fine. Combine with the meat, the three cups of broth, the strained tomato, minced onion and all the seasoning. When the mixture boils hard, sift in the cornmeal, stir till it thickens, then cook slowly for one hour, at which time the stoned, chopped olives are added and the mixture poured into small oiled bread tins and baked 30 minutes in a medium oven.

It would be difficult to compute the individual portions in this recipe, so I can but give you the total for the two loaves: 3225. Everything is here for a filling meal but it must be offset by serving with it, not potatoes, but something like cabbage, sauerkraut, spinach, or any of the leafy vegetables you prefer.

'MEN WITHOUT LAW' PLAYING AT STATE

A western star who is on the crest of the wave of popularity is Buck Jones. His latest film is "Men Without Law," a Columbia production coming to Walker's State today. Buck is probably the most expert rider before the public today. He never employs a double. What would mean death to the average rider, is merely child's play to him. He has had many years of experience at the game and as a result has developed a sureness of technique that places him in a class all by himself. Add to this the fact that he does not know what the word fear means, and it is easy to see why he not only excels at his specialty but practically dominates the field of daredevil stunt riding.

SPIRIT WAS WILLING—

SUGAR CREEK, Ohio.—But the fire engine was weak. Called out to a fire recently, the local company loaded into the antiquated fire engine and started out. On the way three tires blew out and the crew had to stop to fix them. When they arrived at the fire it had nearly burned itself out. Now citizens want a new fire truck.

STARS IN "SCOTLAND YARD"

Joan Bennett, Beautiful blonde star, who has the feminine lead in "Scotland Yard," Fox Movietone production, seen at the Fox Broadway theater here. As Lady Lasher, she thinks another man is her husband until "Scotland Yard" proves he is a crook with a re-made face that resembles the man she married.

NEW STARS SEEN IN WEST COAST FILM

A pair of sweethearts never before seen together on stage or screen lead the merry-making in Paramount's production, "Fast and Loose," taken from the successful stage play of last season, "The Best People," by David Gray and Avery Hopwood. They are Miriam Hopkins, blond, petit and lively; Charles Starrett, tall, handsome, dark-eyed.

Both Miss Hopkins and Starrett come to the movies directly from exceptionally successful stage careers. In fact the charming heroine of this flighty-frothy entertainment was carrying the ingenue lead in Broadway's most popular show, "Lysistrata," while making the picture. "Fast and Loose," the Fox West Coast theater feature for today is her first moving picture.

Starrett has played in two moving pictures previously, for independent producers, but his greatest work has been done on the stage. His acting in one of these moving pictures attracted the favorable attention of Paramount talent seekers, and resulted in a long-term contract. His part in "Fast and Loose" is his first undertaking under the new contract.

EDMUND LOWE STARS IN 'SCOTLAND YARD'

Make-up, as an art in characterization, is brought to its highest perfection by Edmund Lowe in the dual role he portrays in "Scotland Yard," Fox Movietone drama of the efficiency of the world's greatest criminal hunters, directed by William K. Howard, which is now playing at the Fox Broadway theater.

As Sir John Lasher, in the picture, Lowe portrays his usual polished gentleman of the world. But as "Dakin Barrolles," England's most feared bank robber, he must assume the facial disguise and the subtle character nuances of the underworld.

The intensely human story involves the struggle of an underworld character to resume his place in decent society. Through the mistake of a plastic surgeon who rebuilds his face after it had been mangled in battle, Barrolles, the criminal, is made to appear exactly like Sir John Lasher, English gentleman.

At first it seems that he is to be accepted by society in his new character without having to pay the penalty of his former crimes. But his own sense of honor prevents him from keeping up the pose when he finds that the wife of the man whom he is representing to be loves him and he in turn loves her.

That is the dramatic climax of the situation in which he finds himself. He must choose, and choose quickly, whether he shall take the love that is freely offered him and escape the prison bars that are waiting, or confess, and earn the right to that love.

THE WEEKLY PANTRY SHELF

NEWS OF THE SCHOOLS

Lowell School

The school news this week is being written by the sixth grade.

Last week we had pasture week. The king of the pasture was Albert Wright, the queen Helen Warner. They went to Lathrop junior high school to compete with contestants from other schools.

Loyd Franke.

The different classes of Lowell school are engaged in making Indian instruments and different articles that would be used by them. We have had some very interesting things brought in. Miss Lazare says that every one should bring in an instrument before Indian study is up.

Vera Lee Bellows

A very interesting moving picture was given in the kindergarten auditorium for the pupils of Lowell last Wednesday. Almost every pupil was present. The title was " Primitive Indians of the Painted Desert." It showed the primitive way of the Indian.

Neal Gammel.

Last Thursday, November 20th, Miss Wagner, of Spurgeon school, and Miss Mead changed schools for the day. Miss Mead, our principal, went to Spurgeon. Miss Wagner came over and was our principal.

Beryl O. Bates.

Mary Grace Tomlinson and Una Lee Bellows made a signature chart for the fifth and sixth grades. We all wrote our names our very best on a slip of paper. We pasted them on the chart and sent it to Miss Wherry.

Wayne Harlin.

One week from Friday we are going to bring in the Indian instruments we have made at home. We have two Indian war songs on the phonograph. Indian study is certainly interesting, but I don't think the white people appreciate what the Indians have done for them.

Jeneviv Campbell.

In Mrs. Duke's room every Monday we have a spelling test to see who can get in the honor row. Those in the sixth grade who haven't missed since school started are Helen Warner, Helen Meyers and Wayne Parsons.

Mamie Mathews.

On Fathers' night the 5th and 6th grade girls sang two songs, "Juanita" and "Merry Life." We had a nice program. Then the fathers and mothers played two games. Some of the mothers served refreshments.

Norma Lundak.

Russell Haney and Charles Glotzback made a big map of Italy in Miss Stull's room. She gave the pupils names of cities and we put the products on. Charles outlined it in India ink and Russell in pencil.

Sam Lockhart.

November 25 was donation day for the poor people so they could have a happy Thanksgiving. Lowell school has held the record for bringing the most donations.

Mary Hill.

The 6th grade studied Italy and made a product map. On the most important cities we put silver stars and on the capital we put a gold star. Different pupils brought products for different places. We also put the islands of Sicily, Corsica and Sardinia.

Dorothy Skinner.

The 5B grade had 100 per cent of their class going to the movie on "Indians of the Painted Desert." Miss Mead gave them a treat. They also have 100 per cent P.-T. A. membership so they will get a treat from Miss Mead for that and also one from the P.-T. A.

Charles Nielsen.

In Miss Bell's room we have new arithmetic books. Everyone in the 6th grade gets a new book. We all hope the book will be better than the brown book.

Upton Pett.

The pupils brought in interesting pictures from magazines. These were pasted on cards. We use them on board-days. Some children write very interesting sentences about them. I wrote about linen last time.

Helen Meyer.

For book week the sixth grade dressed up like some character in a book. Helen B. Andrews, "Tom Sawyer;" Jeneviv Campbell, "Huckleberry Finn;" Una Lee Bellows, "The Pirate in Light Foot;" Mary Grace Tomlinson, "Old Fashioned Girl;" Wayne Parsons and Billy Ryel were two pilots in "Hunniwell Boys in the Longest Flight;" Russell Haney and Charles Nielsen, "Huckleberry Finn;" Charles Gotzback as the Prince in "Cinderella;" Wanda Norman and Lucia Nielsen as "Lovely Mary;" Mary Hill, "Nobody's Girl;" Norma Lundak, "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch;" Marcelle Shanafelt, "Rusty of the Tall Pines;" Virginia Kastroff, "Heide;" Dorothy Skinner as Godmother in "Cinderella;" Hugh Neighbor, Joel Well of "Wells Bros;" Victor Alleman, "Jargon, Battling the Clouds;" Helen Myer and Mamie Mathews, "Mary and Marcia." We all paraded to the different rooms and announced who we were and from what book.

Helen Warner.

The sixth grade gave the play "Cinderella." Helen B. Andrew wrote the invitations to the 6A grade. The characters were "Cinderella," Helen Warner; the Two Sisters, Jeneviv Campbell and Marcelle Shanafelt; Fairy Grandmother, Dorothy Skinner; Pages, Russell Haney, Dorothy Skinner; Prince, Charles Glotzbach. The fifth grade liked the play very well.

Charles Glotzbach.

Frances Willard

Seniors Superior?

The high 9 class members are like their predecessors in the dim past being most anxious to demonstrate their superiority over other classes in school. This longing became an actuality when Lyle Mitchell agreed to their plan. They have challenged the rest of the school to a football game—a real one in which lower class teams will strive valiantly to humble the mighty seniors. E. D. Froeschly, H9 home room teacher, is coaching the H9 warriors while Coach Arnold Lund is choosing a team from the rest of the school.

This interesting game was to be played on Lincoln field Wednesday, November 26. The H9 anticipated at least a 29-0 but are secretly confident of even doubling this score.

Girls' Volley Ball

Amidst a great deal of excitement, with an unusually large crowd of spestators, Jean Reuter led her H8 girls to victory over the L9 girls' volley ball team. The game was closely contested with the H8 girls winning the first game. the L9 girls winning the second game and the H8 girls winning the third game which until the last four points were scored was practically anyone's game. Both teams played exceptionally well and both were conceded equally good players. Juanita Pinnix, H9, refereed the game while Pauline Morgan H9, Helen Illingworth H9, Bertha Murillo H7, Jean Munro L7, acted as linesmen. Eula Hull H9, was official scorekeeper.

"Varsity" Chosen

Last Tuesday all first team volley ball captains met and chose a "varsity volley ball team." This is an honorary organization which is chosen at the conclusion of each sport and consists of the outstanding players of the entire school. Those girls chosen were: Rita Mercado, Naomi Sullivan, Ruth McBurney, Alice Cummings, Barbara Dunton, Jeanette Brown, Twila Heath, Malvina Stranski, Juanita Pinnix.

Fathers' Night

Fathers of the Frances E. Willard junior high school had their "say" Tuesday night when they had charge of the P.-T. A. meeting held at the Y.W.C.A. at Fifth and Main streets. Dr. Margarete Baker opened the meeting introducing Lyle Anderson, chairman. Lyle Mitchell welcomed the fathers after which Mr. Anderson introduced Dr. Percy R. Davis, assistant superintendent, who gave a most interesting talk.

Dr. Davis pointed out that our present social system made more complex our educational problem. For this reason the present curriculum revision in the city schools is necessary and definite general objectives are to be set up.

The Rev. Harry Owings in his talk urged fathers to become the pals of their girls and boys and to be interested in the things they are doing.

Following the close of his address announcements were made and the meeting concluded with the serving of delightful refreshments.

Art Designs

Miss Marian K. Libby's art classes are doing some interesting work in all-over geometric designs. Some very clever designs are being displayed in the art room at Francis E. Willard junior high school. Unusually attractive are several of the black and white designs. These designs may be practically applied in a number of different ways such as fabrics, cloth, linings, for envelopes, wall paper, fancy wrapping paper and linoleum.

Annual Banquet

The Every Girls' club of Willard is looking forward to the annual Mothers and Daughters banquet. The banquet is to be held in the Methodist church on Sixth and Spurgeon streets and committees are working to make this one of the most successful Mothers and Daughters banquets ever held.

This club, one of the most unusual in school, includes every girl attending Willard and invites her to participate in its activities. The officers are Barbara Dunton, president; Helen Illingsworth, vice president; Roberta Tuthill, secretary; Evelyn Brannan, treasurer; Louise Sexton, reporter.

Senior Class Emblems

The H9 class at Willard caused a good deal of excitement among lower classmen last Wednesday. When they appeared on the grounds, class members were wearing Willard blue felt ties on which the name Willard and their class numeral was printed in blue and gold. These attractive emblems were chosen by a vote of the class with the aid of their home-room advisers, Mrs. Maurine Scott and Miss Evelyn Bennett.

Award Given

Ruth Plies, L9, has achieved an honor won by few girls at Willard, for she has won a Willard sweater with the emblem awarded by the girls' physical education department. Girls who are wearing sweaters at the present time are Naomi Sullivan H8 and Mary Wallace L9.

Book Week

Another special week follows American Education week at Willard. This month Book week is being emphasized in all sections under the direction of Mrs. Esther Oliver, librarian. Book week is an educational movement which seeks to encourage a love of books among boys and girls. It was originated in 1919 by the American Library association, the Boy Scouts of America and associated publishers, and was first called "Children's Book Week" but later changed to "Book Week." It was organized to stimulate the cultivation in children of the most precious of all gifts—the reading habit, and to offer guidance in the selection of books.

Attractive posters decorate the library at Willard while a number of new books are on display. Mrs. Esther Oliver has outlined various interesting projects to be carried on. Children are bringing their favorite books and are giving oral and written reviews while some are taking a 'round-the-world-book-tour. Advertisements, designs for book marks, book plates, posters, lists of titles, correct pronunciation of authors' names and titles are only a few of the projects being taken up.

Red Cross Work a Success

Service to others has been the slogan of the various home-rooms the past week. The Red Cross campaign under the direction of Mrs. Maurine Scott was brought to a successful conclusion this week when 24 boxes were sent out. Especially attractive were the boxes sent out by L9-1 section under the direction of Miss Ruth Muelles, the L7-4 under the direction of Miss Maurine Mathas and the H7-2 class under the direction of Miss Lillian Fitz.

Mrs. Maurine Scott was most ably assisted by the H9-1 section who presented the matter to the home-rooms.

Julia Lathrop

Banquet Served

The series of three banquets given at Julia Lathrop through activities of the P.-T. A., Every Girl's club and Boys' I. X. L. club, ended with the father's and son's banquet on Friday, November 21. These affairs were given in the new cafeteria and were very well attended by both students and parents.

Special Programs

Home room programs have been following the trend of Education Week, Book Week and holidays, with programs prepared by the students to celebrate these occasions. During Book week the English classes especially have emphasized the value of books and of worth while reading through contests, pictures and references to the subject.

New Quarter

With the beginning of the new quarter on Monday, November 17, classes are taking a new hold on their work and attempting to make the last quarter even better than the first quarter of the semester. Very little change was made in courses with the exception of the tryout courses for the seventh and eighth grades.

New Students

Several new students have come to Lathrop from other schools. Catalina Riviera comes from Costa Mesa; Lawrence Garland, from Nebraska; Roger Strench, from Alaska; Mildred Ekwall, from Pasadena; Dorothy Woodsmall, from Adienda; Milo Richards, from Los Angeles, and Audrey Rabitzky, from Whittier. We hope that these people will feel at home in Lathrop, and that they will have as much to give Lathrop as Lathrop gives to them.

MADE BY THE WESSON OIL PEOPLE

Wesson Oil

Coming to your table as the crisp brown crust on foods you fry-

Snowdrift

made of oil as good to eat as a

and nothing else

WHAT you use for frying makes the crust. The crispness and flavor of the crust determines the goodness of fried food.

That's why it is nice to know that the Wesson Oil people make Snowdrift of an oil as pure and delicious as a choice salad oil . . . and nothing else.

Snowdrift helps you follow the good advice "fry not to fry well" because you can heat Snowdrift to the correct frying temperature and even above, without having it burn.

And Snowdrift stays sweet and pure. It comes to you sealed in an air-tight pail that keeps it as fresh as the day it was made.

Assembly

The high fourth and high fifth grades had charge of the interesting assembly given Thursday afternoon under the direction of Mrs. Cain, their class teacher. After several readings, the play, "Why We Celebrate," was given. The program ended with an Indian dance by seven boys.

Geography

In Mrs. Cain's room the low six and high 6 are making calendars. Each pupil wrote an original poem to put on his calendar. The children used bright colored paper. Some of the calendars are very lovely. The poems are nice, too.

Geraldine Jenks.

Nature Study

For nature study the kindergarten children planted some bulbs in a bowl. Each day they look at them to see how the green leaves grow.

Hazel Ladd.

White Bunnies

Our class teacher brought two baby rabbits to school. The rabbits are four weeks old. They are white with pink eyes. They are very cute and sometimes climb on top of the card board box in their cage. We are trying to get two names for them. Each child is going to have a turn to take them home and play with them.

Beulah Cady.

Girls' Basketball

The senior girls' basketball team of Roosevelt and the senior team of Edison are to have a game tonight. The captain of the Roosevelt team is Louisiana Chavez. Miss Lindsay will help referee the game and act as coach. The game will be held at the Roosevelt grounds. The players are Almetta Carpenter, Beulah Cady, Geraldine Jenks, Eileen Gibbs, Gloria Kirchner, Clarabelle Lumley, Ruth Maxwell, Dorothy Gardener, Dorothy Bass Louisiana Chavez, Virginia King and several others for substitutes.

Eileen Gibbs.

Joy Monday

Miss Knudson and Miss Wells have arranged for the sixth grades to have Joy Monday. The boys have workshop where we are making different articles, such as magazine racks, footstools, clock stands and tables. This is supervised by Miss Wells. The girls, with Miss Knudson, make beads, sewing and art work. This lasts one hour on Monday only. We are very glad to have this again.

WHAT A CALAMITY

MECCA.—The advisory council of the kingdom of Hedjaz is in a quandary. A bill was recently introduced proposing to make it compulsory for every person past 15 years of age to be married. Now the council doesn't know whether the bill, if passed, will meet the approval of those wishing married bliss, or those blissfully unmarried.

A LAUGH FOR EVERYBODY

THE TINYMITES

STORY by HAL COCHRAN — PICTURES by KNICK

REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

The oxen tugged and tugged some more but moved but very little for the road was simply terrible. The coach man sure was stumped. Said Clowny, "When we were inside your coach and on our merry ride, I felt that something had gone wrong, the way the old coach bumped.

"It's too bad that our trip is marred, but let's keep pulling good and hard. If we all pull together, we may have a little luck. I'll count to three and then we all will try. Be careful, do not fall. At least this won't do any harm, as long as we are stuck."

Then, "One, two, three," he loudly cried. The Tinies tugged and tugged and sighed. So did the kind coach driver. Shortly Coppy yelled, "Hurray! The coach is moving slowly out. We've turned the trick, without a doubt." And, sure enough, they pulled it free and traveled on their way.

The turn of things made all feel glad and little Carpy shortly had a hunch to sing a merry song. The others joined right in. "We're riding in a lovely coach and some nice town we'll soon approach. Whatever we start out to do, it seems we always win."

The Travel Man broke in and said, 'That lovely town is just ahead. Yes, sir, there's old Gibraltar and we'll shortly stop to eat. In just a little bit they stopped and to the ground the Tinies hopped. "Oh, gee, I like this place," said one. "It's going to be a treat."

Another cried, "Oh, look out there at what is towering in the air. The big Rock of Gibraltar seems to almost reach the sky. I've read of it in lots of books, and gee, how wonderful it looks. I'd hate to have to climb to the top. It's much too high."

Missing Letter Links

RULES:

1. In playing golf on the Missing Letter Links the object is to change one word to another in a given number of strokes which is par. For example, to go from TEE to PIN in three strokes sounds hard but isn't: TEE-TIE-PIE-PIN. It's probably more difficult on a real course.

2. Change but one letter at a time and be sure the word you have used is one in good usage.

3. The order of the letters cannot be changed.

PUSH to CART—It only took us four strokes to hole our putt into this PUSH CART. See if you can do it in less.

of automobiles and trucks whizzing by. Huge motor busses, street cars, motorcycles and bicycles add to the heavy traffic. Trains chug oftentimes through some of the traffic crowded streets and scarcely a day passes now without the hum of airplane motors overhead. In every one of these means of transportation is a man or woman at the wheel. Most of them we hope are careful, dependable drivers, but sad to say, some are reckless and unfit to drive anything, anywhere, for their brains are often muddled with alcohol. If so, their eyesight is poor, their hearing defective, their muscles weakened and the nervous system is not able to act quickly and accurately, for as we know, the brain controls all these and other parts of the body.

In this condition, what man or woman is fit to drive any one of the kinds of vehicles mentioned above? Any driver must be quick, alert, clear minded and dependable or he endangers the lives and property of others as well as himself.

Henry Ford is quoted as saying, "If prohibition were to be repealed, I shall have to stop making automobiles, for with the traffic situation as it is, no prohibition would mean ruin to the lives of the people of the country."

Another quotation from "The Man at the Wheel" by Cora Frances Stoddard says: "Sooner or later the fact will surely strike in that there is no place for drink at the wheel, with 17,000,000 motor vehicles on the roads."

CHICAGO BD. OF TRADE

CHICAGO, Nov. 28.—(UP)—Wheat declined sharply on the Board of Trade today when Winnipeg turned weak toward the close and on the extreme weakness in corn. There was scatered selling most of the session and the market averaged lower owing to the weaknes in foreign market yesterday, though they were somewhat firmer today. Steady selling ran corn into stop loss orders and the market broke sharply. Oats met the general liquidation and was off with the major grains.

At the close wheat was 1⅛ to 2¾c lower, July being the weakest, corn was 1⅜ to 1½c lower and oats were 1¼ to 1⅝c lower. Provisions were weak to 20 points lower.

Section 1. That the public interest and necessity require and it is the intention of the City Council of the City of Santa Ana, California, to order the following improvements made and work done, to-wit:

That a partial separation of grades be made on East Fourth Street between Poinsettia Street and Santa Fe Street, as said two last named streets exist northerly from Fourth Street, by the construction of an Underpass under the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Company's and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company's railroad tracks, respectively, said Underpass to be approximately 745 feet long and being 27 feet between sidewalls, with a minimum clearance of 12 feet, and shall be equipped with all necessary lights, drainage facilities, railroad and street bridging, and all other necessary appurtenances thereto; and the construction of surface pavement, sidewalks, curbs, culverts, driveways, relocation of Ornamental Street Lights, sanitary sewers, storm drains and all other necessary appurtenances thereto, necessary to accomplish said purpose.

Also the improvement of Santa Fe Street between First Street and Fourth Street by the construction of a concrete pipe storm drain thereon, together with all necessary appurtenances thereto, necessary to accomplish said partial separation of grades on East Fourth Street as aforesaid.

Excepting however from the above described Streets any portions thereof which are already improved to the official grade, as shown on the plans.

No Wind
5 to 25 acre Valencia grove, large crop, $3500 per acre. Look Up Hill, 1212 Maple St.

Orange Groves
TWENTY ACRES—Valencias just swinging into good production with the cream of productivity still ahead. Good crop on trees for 1931 market, first class improvements and interest in irrigation plant. This grove is located in one of the best citrus districts of the Anaheim area and will, we advisedly predict, rate as one of the consistent income producers of the district. A fairly-priced, clear residence will be considered as part of down payment or to buyer qualifying with not less than $15,000 cash, a favorable crop payment plan can be arranged on this excellent property.

TO GROVE BUYERS
With eighteen years of specialization in the selling and appraising of groves in the Anaheim district, and Orange county generally, we have not, at this time, the temerity to freely quote crop estimates on the groves we offer for sale. Our experience makes us certain that no real, satisfactory estimate of the growing citrus crop can be made until the fruit is fully colored and further matured and the element of fruit sizing more fully determined. We therefore decline, at this period of the citrus season, to freely furnish liberal crop estimates as an inducement to purchase. We will state, however, that there is a very good, well-distributed crop throughout the Anaheim district and this set of fruit is characteristic of most groves in this locality. The above advertised grove is but one of many of our grove listings of any of which you may procure, at this office, accurate and reliable information at any time.

SHERLOCK HOLMES—The Reigate Puzzle

The Missing Paper

By SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE

"We then saw the murdered men's mother," continued Sherlock Holmes, relating the results of his investigations with Inspector Forrester at the Cunningham house, "but she is very old and could tell us nothing. However, the Inspector and I are agreed that the crime is a very peculiar one . . .

"The fragment of paper found in the dead man's hand, bearing, as it does, the very hour of his death written upon it, is of extreme importance. Whoever wrote that note was the man who brought William Kirwan out of his bed in the middle of the night . . .

© 1930 By Sir Arthur Conan Doyle

"The Inspector has found that the note was delivered to William by the postman yesterday afternoon. Of course it is obvious the message must have been sent in some fashion, and not carried by the writer; he would have delivered his message by word-of-mouth. The envelope cannot be found, so Kirwan probably destroyed it . . .

"But where is the rest of that sheet of paper?" Holmes demanded, as we reached the avenue leading to the Cunningham house. "It was torn out of the dead man's hand. Someone was anxious to get possession of it because it incriminated him. And what would he do with it? Probably thrust it into his pocket, not noticing a corner was missing. If we could only get the rest of that sheet . . ."

EVENING SALUTATION

The good men do is not always interred with their bones.

—ELIZABETH McCAUSLAND.

MORE HONORS TO ORANGE COUNTY

Orange County, through its young people, receives a great many honors of one character or another in the course of the year, among those coming to mind being the success of the Santa Ana high school representatives in track and field last spring, the invasion of the East by George Munro, of Santa Ana, to capture first place honors in the national Presbyterian oratorical contest, but now Orange comes to the front with a national champion of last year repeating his victory, with Tustin contributing an additional national champion.

The scientific temperance instruction department of the W. C. T. U. of the United States each year conducts an essay contest. One year ago Cyril Nichols of Orange won first place in the nation for the essays submitted by students of the fifth grade. Competing in the sixth grade class this year, he has again taken first place, the topic of his essay being, 'Safety by Sobriety." For this honor he received a prize of $10. Helen Marshall of Tustin carried off first place, and a prize of $15, for sending in the winning essay in the seventh grade. Her subject was: "Why Flier and Driver Should Keep Free From Alcoholic Liquors."

These national champions are to be congratulated. Orange County is proud of them, the work they have done, and the honor they have brought to us. It is indeed a wonderful achievement, a reward of hard work, and a deed which should challenge the best efforts of the young people of Orange County in the years to come.

The piece of work these young people did, and the work of others who were eliminated before they could compete with national contestants, is of immeasurable moral effect. As they developed their essays they were learning an important lesson through logic. Lessons learned in that way, it is said, are not as well learned as those learned by actual experience. But Heaven forbid that our boys and girls should have to learn the wisdom of temperance through the evils of intemperance. The other good way for them to learn is by logically determining between two plans of action or living or principles. The advantages of learning this lesson at this time in their lives cannot be overestimated.

THE NOBEL PEACE AWARD

Former Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg has been chosen the recipient of the Nobel peace prize for 1929. The peace prize previously has been awarded to four other Americans—Theodore Roosevelt, Elihu Root, Woodrow Wilson and Ambassador Charles G. Dawes.

The award signalizes Mr. Kellogg's labor in behalf of the "Kellogg Peace pact," in which approximately fifty nations agreed to abandon warfare as an instrument of national policy. Mr. Kellogg was Secretary of State in the Coolidge administration when he negotiated the pact through international discussion and signed it on behalf of the United States.

The Kellogg treaty reads as follows:

"Article 1. The high contracting parties solemnly declare in the names of their respective peoples that they condemn recourse to war for the solution of international controversies, and renounce it as an instrument of national policy in their relations with one another.

"Article 2. The high contracting parties agree that the settlement of all disputes and conflicts, of whatever nature or of whatever origin they may be, which may arise among them shall never be sought except by pacific means."

In all probability history will record that the plainly worded and concise Kellogg Anti-War Pact, free from threat of force, prevented more wars and went further toward preserving the peace of the world than any other treaty in the history of the world, including the Covenant of the League of Nations, bristling as the latter is with awful penalties for violation.

It takes much of the sting from the Nobel award in literature to Sinclair Lewis that the United States can credit itself with another great stride toward the goal of world peace.

CHILD WELFARE STANDARDS

All of us should direct attention to the standard of child welfare agreed upon at the White House Conference on Child Health and Protection. The standards represent more than a year of study by 1,200 experts on child care.

They follow:

"1. Every child is entitled to be understood, and all dealing with him should be based on the fullest understanding of the child.

"2. Every prospective mother should have suitable information, medical supervision during the prenatal period, competent care at confinement. Every mother should have post-natal medical supervision for herself and child.

"3. Every child should receive periodic health examinations before and during the school period, including adolescence, by the family physician, or the school or other public physician, and such examination by specialists and such hospital care as its special needs may require.

"4. Every child should have regular dental examination and care.

"5. Every child should have instruction in the schools in health and in safety from accidents, and every teacher should be trained in health programs.

"6. Every child should be protected from communicable diseases to which he might be exposed at home, in school or at play, and protected from impure milk and food.

"7. Every child should have proper sleeping rooms, diet, hours of sleep and play, and parents should receive expert information as to the needs of children of various ages as to these questions.

"8. Every child should attend a school which has proper seating, lighting, ventilation and sanitation. For younger children, kindergartens and nursery schools should be provided to supplement home care.

"9. The school should be so organized as to discover and develop the special abilities of each child, and should assist in vocational guidance; for children, like men, succeed by the use of strongest qualities and special interests.

"10. Every child should have some form of religious, moral and character training.

"11. Every child has a right to a place to play, with adequate facilities therefore.

"12. With the expanding domain of the community's responsibility for children, there should be proper provision for and supervision of recreation and entertainment.

"13. Every child should be protected against labor that stunts growth, either physical or mental; that limits education; that deprives children of the right of comradeship, of joy and play.

"14. Every child who is blind, deaf, crippled, or otherwise physically handicapped should be given expert study and corrective treatment where there is the possibility of relief, and appropriate development or training. Children with subnormal or abnormal mental conditions should receive adequate study, protection, training, and care. Where the child does not have these services, due to inadequate income of the family, then such services must be provided to him by the community. Obviously the primary necessity in protection and development of children where poverty is an element in the problem is an adequate standard of living and security for the family within such groups.

"15. Every waif and orphan in need must be supported.

"16. Every child is entitled to the feeling that he has a home. The extension of the services in the community should supplement and not supplant parents.

"17. Children who habitually fail to meet normal standards of human behavior should be provided special care under the guidance of the school, the community health or welfare center or other agency for continued supervision or, if necessary, control.

"18. The rural child should have as satisfactory schooling, health protection and welfare facilities as the city child.

"19. In order that these minimum protections of the health and welfare of children may be everywhere available, there should be a district, county or community organization for health education and welfare, with full-time officials, co-ordinating with a state-wide program which will be responsive to a nation-wide service of general information, statistics and scientific research. This would include:

"(a) Trained, full-time public health officials with public health nurses, sanitary inspection and laboratory workers.

"(b) Available hospital beds.

"(c) Full-time public welfare services for the relief and aid of children in special need from poverty or misfortune, for the protection of children from abuse, neglect, exploitation or moral hazard.

"(d) The development of voluntary organizations of children for purposes of instruction, health and recreation through private effort and benefaction. When possible, existing agencies should be co-ordinated.

Children have never in the history of the world had so much care lavished upon them. It will be interesting thirty or forty years from now to see the response. If their ethical standards and the development of their responsibility toward society is as well cared for as their bodies and their happiness we should have a nation of super-men and women, incapable of wrong, intolerant of injustice, creative.

PLAN TO ENJOY THE HOLIDAY

Now with Thanksgiving over we are full steam ahead for Christmas. Thousands have already caught the spirit and have purchased their Christmas cards or bought Christmas wrappings, or a gift or two, thus actually "doing their Christmas shopping early." The way to put joy in Christmas is to begin to plan and buy right now, if you haven't already done so. Those who are forced to spend the last few days before Christmas providing Christmas remembrances for those closest to them will be forced to overlook the little extras and thoughtful deeds for those they forget when they are too pressed for time. And it is those little extras and thoughts directed to those we like and love but are not under obligation to which put the joy in the Christmas season.

This year particularly, attention is being called to the advantages of trading in Santa Ana, in every case where it is possible so to do. Spending our Christmas money in Santa Ana will help our neighbor and our neighbor's children have a fine Christmas. It will keep bitterness from his heart. The merchants of Santa Ana have been decorating their shops and stocking their shelves so that we can "run in" and shop conveniently. Goods are less handled; clerks are less tired than those who are waiting upon many times the number of shoppers in the large cities.

Some foresighted individuals already have many gifts put away for Christmas and can enjoy the festivities and parties and family reunions which crowd upon us in the Christmas season. There is still time for the rest of us to check off our Christmas list and enjoy our holiday.

Speaking of Fame

Oakland Tribune

Fame has many roads and definitions. Some find it easily; some seek it eagerly.

Others, like Newt Butler of West Branch, Iowa, won it with his two fists in early life and has but recently become aware of his possession. This Newt Butler serves hash and coffee in a tiny lunch room, giving as full measure a ready conversation and offering for divertisement opportunity for customers to tempt chance in a slot machine.

Newt's claim to fame might never have been aired to the American public had it not been for a raiding party which entered his place of business, upset his coffee pot, confiscated the slot machine and arrested the proprietor. Then it came out, and as an argument in defense. When Newt was a boy he engaged in a fist fight with a neighbor's child and the other boy's name was Hoover. It is not set forth who was the winner, but Newt, back in his restaurant is ready to supply any and all details from his perhaps partisan point of view. He is a man designated proudly by his fellow townsmen as one who had a fight with a boy who became President. Speaking of fame!

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

TO A LAST ROBIN

It may be you forgot the way
Your little friends went long ago,
And that's the reason why you stay
Until the North Wind threatens snow.
Perhaps you're of heroic race,
That winter's biting winds you flout,
And have decided you will face
Them out.

Sometimes I think, the while you flit
So solemnly from tree to tree,
That it is possible your wit
Is not quite what it ought to be.
Although the leaden skies above
Like other robins you behold,
Perhaps they do not tell you of The cold.

For autumn hurries toward its end
And you are thin, and small and frail;
Those fluffy feathers will not fend
Your form against the coming gale,
If you have any sense you'll start
Your journey toward a warmer clime,
And take good care that you depart
In time.

But if you're of heroic stuff,
Despite that mournful look you wear,
And care not if the winds are rough
And chill and bitter is the air,
If with stern courage you are fraught
And mean to stick it out till Spring
Through snow and storm, at least you ought To sing.

The Third Plain Fact

By WILLIAM TRUFANT FOSTER and WADDILL CATCHINGS

Why are we in the depths of a business depression? "General overproduction" is the answer we hear on every hand—"general overproduction," which is merely another name for "general underconsumption." That answer is correct.

The next question is, why don't we consume goods as rapidly as we produce goods?

In special cases, the reason is because we produce too much of one thing in relation to other things. For example, we may produce too many tires in relation to the number of cars in use. This is SPECIAL overproduction.

But GENERAL overproduction is the output of too many things, taken as a whole, in relation to demand, taken as a whole. That is the chief malady from which we have been suffering for the past year. That is the cause of the sharp decline in the general price-level.

The chief reason for that decline is plain to the plain people. The only reason why they do not consume goods, in general, as fast as business makes the goods, is because they do not receive enough money.

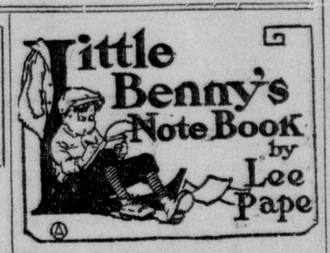

The "Buy Now" campaigns are timely. Idle dollars make idle men; and millions of dollars are shirkers in the war against poverty. But the CHIEF reason why sales are off is because wages are off.

This is the third of the simple facts which we must take into account, before we can understand the causes of the present depression and the cures.

In a single year, wages have fallen off from about 45 billions to about 36 billions. That is a loss of twenty per cent. And business activity is twenty per cent below normal.

Prosperity will not come back until the lost wages come back.

In the Long Ago

From The Register Files 14 Years Ago Today

NOVEMBER 28, 1916

One of the most delightful social events of the season occurred last Saturday night when Miss Gwendolyn Hoyle and Miss Esther Zimmerman and their girl friends entertained the Poly High football team at the Orange County Country club with a private dance chaperoned by Mr. and Mrs. Norman Hoyle.

Mrs. J. R. Medlock entertained yesterday with a delectable Thanksgiving dinner in her home on North Main street.

William Armstrong, Mrs. A. T. Armstrong, and the Misses Berta and Ruth Armstrong motored to San Diego today, and will spend Thanksgiving there, returning here Friday.

James S. Smart, J. C. Horton, W. N. Vandermast, R. L. Bisby, F. P. Nickey, C. S. Kendall, John A. Hervey, J. C. Metzgar, J. P. Baumgartner and Frank P. Clarkson were named as an executive committee in charge of the industrial erpansion of Santa Ana.

That the scarlet fever scare in Orange is noticeably on the decline has been stated by City Health Officer Dr. Chapline.

The Santa Ana football team went down to defeat before the fast Pomona team yesterday by a score of 17 to 9 in one of the most spectacular games of the season.

Mrs. M. M. Crookshank and Miss Lida Crookshank were hostesses at a family reunion in their French street home yesterday.

Thoughts On Modern Life

By GLENN FRANK

CREATING COURAGE

Life in general and the present economic situation in particular are in conspiracy against the coward.

Courage is the imperative virtue!

Without courage, depression routs us and prosperity rots us.

And it is important to remember that courage is a virtue we can create.

We are, perhaps, born with a bent towards courage or towards cowardice, but the sustained courage that makes a man is a thing built up by patient and protracted self-dicipline.

James Gordon Gilkey, in his Solving Life's Everyday Problems, suggests three fundamental laws underlying the self-discipline that makes for courage, viz:

First, we must focus our attention on what we have rather than on what we do not have.

This is one of the major marks of the brave. They know their liabilities but they do not brood over them. They focus their genius on the task of making a maximum intelligent use of their assets.

Second, we must remember that difficulty tends to generate new powers or at least to call into action latent powers.

The cowardly grovel in the presence of difficulty; the courageous grow under the challenge of difficulty.

Third, we must make full use of our reserves of endurance.

Every man of mettle has had the experience of discovering unsuspected reserves of endurance in the face of the necessity of carrying an unprecedented load of work or of fighting against unprecedented difficulties.

These are, I submit, three excellent counsels for the American people as a whole as they face the challenge of the current economic situation.

The whole tone of American life could be lifted and a fresh accession of economic enterprise would result if America kept its attention centered on the amazing resources it has rather than on the mountain of fictitious values that slipped into the sea when the market-earthquake took place, if America really made this time of depression a challenge to a new and better statesmanshp, and if America really realized the full measure of its powers of endurance and its latent forces of progress.

OUR CHILDREN

By ANGELO PATRI

HURDLING WORDS

Many a failure in arithmetic, and other school subjects as well, is due to the difficulty the child finds in interpreting the language of the problem.

The teacher will say, "But he can read every word. The problem is stated in simple language. I even have him read it aloud before he starts to work. The language is all right. It's his arithmetic that is wrong."

Of course the child must be perfectly familiar with the number combinations and the four fundamental processes of arithmetic before he can do any real work but I assure you that it is possible for him to know every combination, be proficient in the fundamental processes and still harvest a zero on test day.

Language is a subtle quality of mental activity. It goes far deeper than sound and articulation of sound. Far deeper than a correct verbal reading; far deeper than set phrasing and formulae. It is but the shadow of thought, at its best, and in children struggling with problems it is as a shadow that blots out thought. Until language has its root in the personal experience of the child it is but sound and symbol. That may explain why a child who can read a problem about cost and gain and percentage of this or that, with ease, fails utterly to get anything like a solution of the thing on paper. Selling horses at so much and gaining so much and discovering the per cent of the amount recovered or lost has little meaning for a few children, none for many.

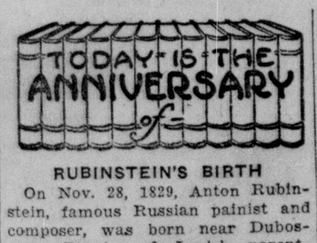

In teaching arithmetic to the pupils of the elementary grades it is first necessary to teach the combinations and tables and give the child varied exercises in them. It is necessary, too, to know how to teach the elements of number. Some combinations are more difficult than others. Some groups are to be taught together, some items must stand alone. To teach tables in rhythmic order, in sequence, is not always good practice. The teacher must know and discriminate.

number combination in the daily number comination in the daily lesson so perfectly that it comes easily at his call, he is to put it to practical use by giving it a setting. This setting is to be of a familiar sort, one encountered in his daily living. He is to discover it for himself. He is to set the problem in his own words. Then he can solve it. Having expressed an idea in his own language it is easy for him to interpret it.

A child learns that nine and seven are sixteen. He must now find a use for his knowledge. How? Just as close at hand as possible. Nine boys in one group, seven in another. He will need sixteen pencils for the two groups. Let him keep well within his experience when he begins working problems.

For the older children, those who struggle with fractions, keep well within their experience. Let them set the problem themselves. Use fractions and situations that are likely to be his own. Let the child clothe the numbers in language and many failures in arithmetic will turn into happy successes. Hurdling words is not even good exercise.

RUBINSTEIN'S BIRTH

On Nov. 28, 1829, Anton Rubinstein, famous Russian painist and composer, was born near Dubossary, Russia, of Jewish parentage.

His mother commenced his musical education when he was four, but in two years he had exhausted her knowledge. At 11 he was sent to the Paris conservatory where he soon attracted the attention of Liszt and Chopin.

After giving concerts and teaching in Berlin and Vienna, Rubinstein returned to Russia in 1848 and settled in St. Petersburg. Here he came under the patronage of the Grand Duchess Helen, and for the following eight years studied and wrote assiduously. He founded a conservatory and organized a musical society. In a world concert tour, undertaken when he was 58, he was hailed as one of the greatest pianists of all time.

Through Rubinstein's burning ambition was to be recognized as a great composer, his works are not consistently great. Since the beginning of the twentieth century his name has practically disappeared from the concert programs.

DEATHS

A WORD OF COMFORT

You are learning by experience some things which will help you to bring comfort to others in their hardest hours.

There are times when you want to be alone, times when the presence of your closest friends, is an intrusion and increases the poignancy of your pain.

At other times companionship is almost a necessity, but it must be of the right sort. The friend who is content just to be with you without voicing sympathy or advice helps and heartens you.

Learn from what you are going through to become a tower of strength for your fellows. Above all, learn to "lean on God."

HOLD FUNERAL SERVICES FOR MESA RESIDENT

Funeral services for Mrs. Lena L. Rehme were held at the Grooms and Riesenberg funeral parlors in Costa Mesa, Friday at 1 o'clock with a second service at the Trinity Lutheran church in Santa Ana. Neither building was large enough to accommodate the host of sorrowing friends.

The deceased had been a member of the Trinity Lutheran church of Santa Ana for many years, and was the president of the Ladies' Aid of the church this year. Her death came as a shock, as she had been ill but a short time.

Beside her husband, Fred Rehme, she leaves three children, Elmer, Emma and Meta; a sister, Meta Isern; a brother in Kansas and a brother, Albert Mellies, of Eugene, Ore., who was present at the funeral. Interment was made at Central Memorial park, Midway City.

161 ATTRACTED TO DINNER OF EPWORTH BODY

One hundred and sixty-one persons attended the fourth annual banquet of the Epworth leagues of Orange county at the White Temple Methodist in Anaheim last week. Community singing was led by Percy W. Olds.

The principal feature of the program was a lecture by Dr. Carl Knopf of the University of Southern California, who spoke on the subject, "Can You Win."

Dr. Knopf referred frequently to ancient history, going back as far as 6000 years, each time pointing out the fact that "youth has had a hard time winning." He discussed youths' criticisms of the church, a few of which are: "Do not find anything attractive," on which he suggested that the young people make a complete survey of the church's situation and discuss it with their pastors; "Find too Much Controversy," "Too Much Doctrine." His opinion is that there is too much misused power of youth that had better be turned into channels of usefulness to the church. In closing Dr. Knopf said, "By the power of God and consecration youth can win."

Ray Rogers, of Garden Grove, county president of the Epworth league, opened the meeting and introduced Wesley Hole, of Pasadena, who acted as toastmaster. Florence Auer, president of the Anaheim group, welcomed the guests. A response was made on behalf of Orange county by Ray Rogers. Among those introduced and who are officers in the county were Miss Clara Wottel, Edna Warner, Frances Thompson, Russell Bales, Roy Ford.

CHRISTMAS SEALS SWELL MAIL

Here is the genial postmaster, Terry E. Stephenson, receiving the big mail bags, containing 30,000 letters, going to that many citizens of Orange county, bearing a dollar's worth of little Christmas seals. The postmaster says that he is very much interested in the work of the Orange County Tuberculosis association, and that he would like to have the mail sacks return filled to the brim with checks to help carry on the campaign for health and happiness.

11,000 XMAS SEAL LETTERS ARE SENT OUT

Completion of the delivery of 11,000 letters carrying the little Red Cross Xmas seals was announced today by T. E. Stephenson, postmaster. The letters were sent out by the Orange County Tuberculosis association. Stephenson, who also is president of the Red Cross Chapter of Santa Ana, said:

"The Postoffice force has completed the delivery of approximately 11,000 letters sent out by the Orange County Tuberculosis Association in its annual campaign for funds for this extremely desirable work. In making preparations for this delivery, the Postoffice force cooperated with the Association in every possible way within the postal regulations to secure correct addresses and to eliminate duplications.

"In spite of the efforts that have been made to get seals to everyone in Santa Ana, who, in the Association's opinion, should contribute, there will be some who will not get seals through the mail. Anyone who does not get seals within the next two or three days, can get seals by addressing the Orange County Tuberculosis Association, Room 600 First National Bank Building, Santa Ana or Phone No. 4797.

"The Postoffice suggests the advisability of returning the return envelopes at once; the Postoffice will have the Christmas load soon to carry, and will appreciate having this matter disposed of before the rush begins.

"In order to comply with postal regulations, purchasers of Christmas seals should remember that these seals in no way can be used as postage. They should not be placed upon the side of a parcel that bears the address and stamps. If put on the address-stamp side of a package going out of the Untied, States, it will be sent back to the sender. Senders should keep in mind that parcels to go at the parcel rate ordinarily must not be sealed and lpacing seals across the edges of the wrapping constitutes sealing."

T. E. STEPHENSON,
Postmaster, Santa Ana.

ORANGE COUNTY MEN TO ATTEND ROTARY PARLEY

Two prominent Orange county men, William H. Spurgeon jr. of Santa Ana, and Carl Leonard of Anaheim, will represent Orange county at the Rotary International to be held this year at Vienna, the famous capital of Austria, on June 22, it was learned today. Spurgeon is past president of the Santa Ana Rotary club, and a similar status is occupied by his Anaheim colleague. Both men have been active in Rotary affairs and have devoted much of their time to the furtherance of the organization's major activities.

Spurgeon, accompanied by Mrs. Spurgeon and children, will depart January 2 from Los Angeles harbor on the Red Star liner Belgenland for the Orient, continuing to European ports via the Suez Canal. Included in the party will be Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Abbott, of Pomona, parents of Mrs. Spurgeon. At Gibraltar the party will leave the Belgenland, and tour Spain, France and Switzerland, before proceeding to Vienna for the big Rotary event.

After the Rotary convention, the Spurgeon party will devote about three months to sightseeing in Germany, Denmark, Sweden, and Norway, returning home via Scotland and England. Spurgeon and his family two years ago spent about four months in Europe.

Carl Leonard, of Anaheim, is making preparations to leave for Europe early next spring, it was learned. He has not definitely decided to go yet as his plans for making the trip are dependent upon the satisfactory arrangement of several business deals. If he goes, he also will be accompanied by Mrs. Leonard. Mr. and Mrs. Leonard, like the Spurgeons, visited Europe a few years ago on an extended trip.

"I like it!" said AUSTIN PALMER JUNIOR
● age 2 and a half

● and if your children hate cod-liver oil, here's good news for you

THINK OF IT!—cod-liver oil in a form that children don't mind taking. It almost sounds unbelievable. And yet . . .

We walked into Mrs. Palmer's back yard at 278 No. 4th Street, Newark, N. J., a few weeks ago.

We asked her if she'd be willing to let her little son, Austin, try Scott's Emulsion. As she knows how hard it is to get children to take cod-liver oil, she consented gladly. Austin swallowed a spoonful. Then he smiled . . .

"I like it, mummy. It's good."

Pleasanter to take—
but that isn't all

Pale, thin, run-down children—they need cod-liver oil. Give it to them the pleasantest way—give them Scott's Emulsion.

Scott's Emulsion hasn't that strong "fishy" taste. It doesn't upset even delicate stomachs. It brings you purest, Norwegian cod-liver oil in its pleasantest form—a perfect emulsion. Easier to take—easier to digest.

Scott's Emulsion is rich in vitamin A, the disease-resisting vitamin. It is rich in vitamin D, the sunshine, rickets-preventing vitamin. It also contains vital mineral elements that aid in forming sound bones and teeth. This gives Scott's Emulsion a special advantage for growing children, infants, nursing and expectant mothers.

Get Scott's Emulsion to-day. Watch cheeks grow rosy. See youngsters gain new weight and pep. Your nearest druggist sells it.

This is the Cooking You Get Gratis . . . When You Cook the Flavor Zone Way

YOU HAVE HEARD that electrical cookery, the new Westinghouse way, is surprisingly economical. This chart shows you why. Two-thirds of your oven cooking is done with stored up heat. You pay for only one-third. That is the way Great Grandmother cooked in her old Dutch Oven. Not for reasons of economy, because wood was cheap . . . but because experience had taught her that this was the best of all possible ways to cook. You will achieve the same splendid results in your Westinghouse Flavor Zone oven, with the same economy . . . and even though electricity for cooking costs only pennies per day, the saving will be worth while, the Westinghouse way.

Every step in the cooking operation shown on the above chart is automatic. All you have to do is to place your dinner in the oven and set your temperature and timing controls. At the time specified, the oven is automatically turned on by the clock. (You may be down town enjoying a matinee at the moment.) When the specified temperature is reached, the current is automatically shut off . . . and your meal simply coasts along on stored up heat. That was the Old Dutch Oven way. That is the Westinghouse way. Make it your way by arranging today to have one of these wonderful new Westinghouse Electric Ranges installed in your kitchen.

Every new Westinghouse is equipped with the new Quick-Cook Platform Units . . . the most important development by Westinghouse since the introduction of Flavor Zone cooking. This means 30 to 50 per cent greater speed, 10 to 20 per cent greater efficiency, depending on the kind and quantity of food being cooked. Your new Westinghouse will have an improved clock, a new thermometer panel, a convenient sloping switch panel, improved door hinges, new leg construction.

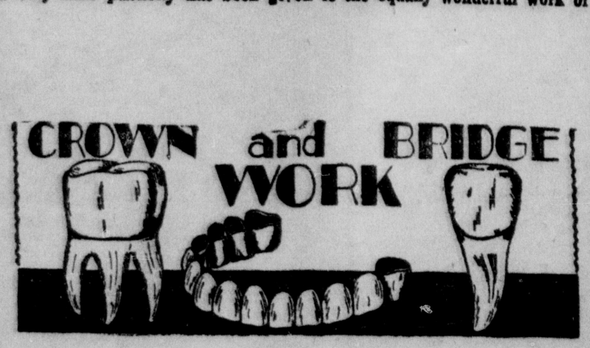

See the entire new Westinghouse series, at your electrical or household appliance dealers, or at your neighborhood Edison office. Select the model you want and you'll find the business arrangements surprisingly simple.

BERDOO NEGRO GETS 60 DAYS IN JAIL HERE

Adam Coldwell, San Bernardino Negro orange ranch owner, is in the county jail for a 60-day stay, just because he paid Santa Ana a little visit on Thursday night "to eat turkey."

Some time ago, Coldwell was brought into Justice Kenneth Morrison's court here, charged with gambling. It was a Negro crap shooting affair, but when Coldwell, who is unusually black, with a high whiney voice, was questioned regarding his part in the game, he pleaded not guilty to gambling on the grounds that he "didn't shoot no craps, yo' honor, I'se just there fadin' the boys."

Justice Morrison at that time told Coldwell that he could go his way on condition that he never come back to Santa Ana.

Thanksgiving night, a turkey feast out on West Third street was too much of a temptation for Coldwell, however, and he returned. It was his hard luck when a shooting scrape took place at the house where Coldwell was visiting, and Coldwell was brought in as a material witness.

In court this morning he told Justice Morrison that he remembered perfectly the agreement he had with the court when he was here before, but that he thought he was in Fullerton and not Santa Ana.

"I jes come on down here 'cause a friend of mine told me I could get a turkey supper for fourbits. I don't know nothing about ths shootin, I had my back turned. I was dancing with a girl and I just went oveh there an tol' 'em they shouldn't do that," he said.

When Judge Morrison told Coldwell he would have to spend 60 days in the county jail for taking Santa Ana for Fullerton, the Negro replied: "Now lookie here, Jedge, yo' honor, you just let me git out of here and ef you ever catches me in here agin, I'll deed you my 10-acre orange grove over there in San Bernardino. Lordy, I ain't never coming back to this here town no more."

On Coldwell's previous trip to the justice court he had been told that if he came back here again, he would get six months in the county jail on the former charge.

"Every time you come to town, there's an explosion,' the court stated.

VALUATION OF ORANGE COUNTY $206,832,045

The great growth in the amount of work handled each year in the county assessor's office is shown in a comparison of the numbers of parcels of real estate and buildings that have been handled in the past with that which is on the records now.

Inquiry reveals that the records of County Assessor James Sleeper now list 123,720 parcels of real estate and 38,983 buildings in the county, and that there is a total assessed valuation of property in the county, including everything, amounting to $206,832,045. This figure just 10 years ago was $114,089,155.

Search of the records in the office shows that in 1911 the assessor had to cope with 41,918 parcels of real estate and 9784 buildings. In 1916 these figures had grown to 61,448 and 12,333 respectively, and in 1926 to 104,371 and 25,610. This shows the rapid increase in parcels of property as caused by subdivision and the development of the county as reflected by the increase in the number of buildings.

The records this year show that there are 7824 orchards or groves; 36,500 autos and trucks; 6215 dairy cows; 11,358 stock cattle; 4624 hogs; 2768 horses; 1617 mules; and 1494 orchard pumping plants. Assessor Sleeper declared that the number of horses and mules is steadily decreasing every year, due to the increase in the number of tractors. There were 14,000 transfers of real estate to make changes on the records during the year and there are 67,725 assessments recorded. This number is less than the number of pieces of real estate and buildings because of the fact that in many instances blocks of lots are owned by the same person.

The county official stated that he personally handled the assessment of all real estate, which amounted this year to $109,437,810 and that he had asked for help in handling this several years, but that it had not been granted. Improvements, including trees, amounted this year to $43,590,860 and personal property assessments totaled $24,417,830.

Court Notes

S. B. Calvert was arraigned yesterday on a charge of grand theft before Judge G. K. Scovel and entered a plea of not guilty. His wife Marie Calvert was arraigned during the morning session of the court and had her trial set for January 14 after she entered a not guilty plea. Calvert was supposed to be tried at the same time his wife was tried, but requested an earlier date and the court delayed setting the time for the trial until Monday morning.

Inventory and appraisal of the estate of Charles Carroll, which was filed yesterday in the office of County Clerk J. M. Backs, shows that the estate has a value of $2625.

Suing to recover for injuries he claims were sustained in an automobile crash, Harry G. Spielman yesterday filed a damage complaint against E. E. Smith. Spielman is seeking damages totaling $10,070 for injuries he received in the crash, which occurred last October and which he claims wan caused by the negligence and carelessness of the defendant. Of the amount sought, $70 is for damages to his auto.

An application for initial registration of title to land was filed yesterdad with County Clerk J. M. Backs by Macy J. and Amy M. Smith of La Habra. The proceeding is under the Torrens Title act for land registration. The petition sets forth the claims that the land is not subject to homestead and that the applicants are informed that no other persons have any claim to or interest in the tract described. They are listed as the owners of all the adjoining land except that to the south of this particular piece.

DIRECTOR FOR BIG FIVE RING CIRCUS HERE

Extensive preparations are being made to make the Orange County Peace Officers' association Big Five Ring Circus, the greatest event in the history of Orange county.

Al W. Copeland of Hollywood, the director, arrived here this morning and said that the various acts that will appear here when the big circus opens in Santa Ana, December 12-13th, are busy getting their equipment ready for the big show here.

Pretty girls, bareback horses, funny clowns, freaks, and a hundred other circus acts direct from the huge studios of Hollywood, are busy rehearsing their acts, and many noted circus stars who appeared in all circus pictures, can be seen working out their acts on the big lots adjoining the studios.

The advance sale of tickets is well under way, and from reports they are going fast. The admission is fifty cents, which gives every holder of a ticket a seat.

A huge circus sideshow, with all kinds of freaks and strange wonders from all parts of the world, will add to the riot of color and snappy circus music, with a real circus band, and plenty of whoopee, popcorn, crackerjack, noise makers, pink lemonade and lots of fun and amusement for everybody.

There will be two performances daily, at 2 in the afternoon, and 8 o'clock in the evening—doors open at 1 p. m.

The circus grounds are located at the Union Pacific grounds on East Fourth and Garfield streets.

The proceeds will go to the Orange County Peace Officers' Relief Fund, and the Policemen of your city will benefit directly by it.

In a few days the billboards will flare with the colorful circus papers heralding the announcement of the huge five ring circus, that will make its appearance here next month.

The Scarab Murder Case

WHAT HAS HAPPENED

When Benjamin Kyle, aged philanthropist, is brutally murdered, a rare blue scarabaeus is found beside him and the finding of this sacred beetle finally leads to the detection of the murderer by Philo Vance, detective extraordinary, who is told of the murder by Donald Scarlett, an Englishman and member of the staff of Dr. Mindrum W. C. Bliss, head of the Bliss museum devoted to Egyptology and financed in a private residence by Kyle.

Kyle himself has lived in an adjoining house and Scarlett finds him dead with his head smashed by a statue at about 10 o'clock in the morning. Scarlett rushes to Vance after his gruesome discovery, as he declares he has no idea of the right procedure in America.

Other members of the Bliss household, Scarlett reveals, are Kyle's nephew, Salveter, through whom he became interested in Egyptology; Mrs. Bliss, who is part Egyptian and whose name is Meryt-Amen; Hani a sort of foster father to her, and two American servants, Brush, the butler, and Dingle, the cook. Young Salveter is assistant curator to the museum.

Scarlett also reveals that Kyle, who has already financed an expedition to locate the tomb of Pharaoh Intef V, who ruled over Egypt during the Hyksos domination, was to have discussed plans for a second expedition with his staff at 11 o'clock in the morning.

Vance telephones the district attorney, Markham, and together with Scarlett they go to the Bliss museum, where the body of Kyle is still undiscovered. Vance questions the Butler about the movements of members of the household and finds that Dr. Bliss has been in his study, that Hani is indisposed in his room, that Mrs. Bliss is out shopping and that Salveter left the house shortly after her. Vance examines the dead man, tells Brush that Kyle has had an accident, and warns the butler not to speak to other members of the family of it.

"You are to stand in the vestibule here," he ordered. "When Sergeant Heath and his men come, bring them to us at once. We'll be in there." He indicated the large steel door leading into the museum. "If any one else calls, hold them and notify us. Don't let any one ring the bell."

The officer saluted took up his post; and the rest of us, with Vance leading the way, passed through the steel door into the museum.

A flight of carpeted stairs, four feet wide, led down along the wall to the floor of the enormous room beyond, which was on the street level. The first-story floor—the one which had been even with the hallway of the house we had just quitted—had been removed so that the room of the museum was two stories high. Two huge pillars, width and length of the house—joists, had been erected as supports. Moreover, the walls marking the former rooms had been demolished. The result was that the room we had entered occupied the entire with and length of the house—about twenty-five by seventy feet—and had a ceiling almost twenty feet high.

At the front was a series of tall, leaded-glass windows running across the entire width of the building; and at the rear, above a series of oak cabinets, a similar row of windows had been cut. The curtains of the front windows were drawn, but those at the rear were open. The sun had not yet found its way into the room, and the light was dingy.

As we stood for a moment at the head of the steps I noted a small circular iron stairway at the rear leading to a small steel door on the same level as the door through through which we had entered.

The arrangement of the museum in relation to the house which served as living quarters for the Blisses, was to prove of considerable importance in Vance's solution of Benjamin H. Kyle's murder. The floor of the museum, as I have said, was on the street level—it had formerly been the "basement" floor. And it must be borne in mind that the rooms were one story above the museum floor and half-way between the museum floor and the ceiling.

My eyes at once searched the opposite corner of the room for the murdered man; but that part of the museum was in shadow, and all I could see was a dark mass, like a recumbent human body, in front of the farthest rear cabinet.

Vance and Markham had descended the stairs while Scarlett and I waited on the upper landing. Vance went straightway to the front of the museum and pulled the draw-cords of the curtains. Light flooded the semi-darkness; and for the first time I took in the beautiful and amazing contents of that great room.

In the centre of the opposite wall rose a ten-foot obelisk from Heliopolis, commemorating an expedition of Queen Hat-shepsut of the Eighteenth Dynasty, and bearing her cartouche. To the right and left of the obelick stood two plaster-cast portrait statues—one of Queen Teti-shiret of the Seventeenth Dynasty, and the other a black replica of the famous Turin statue of Ramses II—considered one of the finest pieces of sculptored portraiture in antiquity.

Beneath the front windows stood a black granite Twenty-second-Dynasty sarcophagus fully ten feet long, its front and sides covered with hieroglyphic inscriptions. It was surmounted by a mummy-shaped lid, showing the soul bird, or Ba—with its falcon's form and human head. This sarcophagus was one of the rarest in America, and had been brought to this country by Doctor Bliss from the ancient necropolis at Thebes. In the corner beyond was a cedar-wood statue of an Asiatic, found in Palestine—a relic of the conquests of Thutmose III.

Near the foot of the stairs on which I stood loomed the majestic Kha-ef-Re statue from the Fourth Dynasty. It was made of gray plaster of Paris, varnished and polished in imitation of the original diorite. It stood nearly eight feet high; and it's dignity and power and magistral calm seemed to dominate the entire museum.

To the right of the statue, and extending all the way to the spiral stairs at the rear, was a row of anthropoid mummy cases, gaudily decorated in gold and brilliant colors. Above them hung two enormously enlarged tinted photographs—one showing the Colossi of Amen-hotpe III, the other depicting the great Amun Temple at Karnak.

Around the two supporting columns in the centre of the museum deep shelves had been built, and on them reposed a fascinating array of shawabtis—beautifully carved and gaily painted wooden figures.

Extending between the two pillars was a long, low, velvet-covered table, perhaps fourteen feet in length, bearing a beautiful collection of alabaster, perfumery and canopic vases, blue lotiform jars, kohl pots of polished obsidian, and several cylindrical carved cosmetic jars of semi-translucent and opaque alabaster. At the rear of the room was a squat coffer with inlays of blue glazed faience, white and red ivory and black ebony; and beside it stood a carved chair of state, decorated in gesso and gilt, and bearing a design of lotus flowers and buds.

Across the front of the room ran a long glass show-case containing pectoral collars of cloisonne, amulets in majolica, shell pendants, girdles of gold cowries, rhombic beads of carnelian and feldspar, bracelets and anklets and finger-rings, gold and ebony fans, and a collection of scarabs of most of the Pharaohs down to Ptolemaic times.

Around the walls, just below the ceiling, ran a five-foot frieze—a sectional copy of the famous Rhapsody of Pen-ta-Weret, commemorating the victory of Ramses II over the Hittites at Kadesh in Syria.

As soon as Vance had opened the heavy curtains of the front windows he and Markham moved toward the rear of the room. Scarlett and I descended the stairs and followed them. Kyle was lying on his face, his legs slightly drawn up under him, and his arms reaching out and encircling the feet of a life-sized statue in the corner. I had seen reproductions of this statue many times, but I did not know its name.

It was Vance who enlightened me. He stood contemplating the huddled body of the dead man, and slowly his eyes shifted to the serene sculpture—a brown limestone carving of a man with a jackal's head, holding a sceptre.

"Anubis," he murmured, his face set tensely. "The Egyptian god of the underworld. Y' know, Markham, Anubis was the god who prowled about the tombs of the dead. He guided the dead through Amentet—the shadowy abode of Osiris. He plays an important part in the Book of the Dead—he symbolized the grave; and he weighed the souls of men, and assigned each to its abode. Without Anubis's help the soul would never have found the Realm of Shades. He was the only friend of the dying and the dead..And here is Kyle, in an attitude of final and pious entreaty before him.

Vance's eyes rested for a moment on the benignant features of Anubis. Then his gaze moved dreamily to the prostrate man who, but for the hideous wound in his head, might have been paying humble obeisance to the underworld god. He pointed to the smaller statue which had caused Kyle's death.

This statue was about two feet long and was black and shiny. It still lay diagonally across the back of the murdered man's skull: it seemed to have been caught and held there in the concavity made by the blow. An irregular pool of dark blood had formed beside the head, and I noted—without giving the matter any particular thought—that one point of the periphery of the pool had been smeared outward over the polished maple-wood floor.

"I don't like this, Markham," Vance said in a low voice. "I don't like it at all..That diorite statue, which killed Kyle, is Sakhmet, the Egyptian goddess of vengeance—the destroying element. She was the goddess who protected the good and annihilated the wicked—the goddess who slew. The Egyptians believed in her violent power; and there are many strange legend'ry tales of her dark and terrible acts of revenge.."

CHAPTER III
SCARABAEUS SACER
(Friday, July 13; noon)

Vance frowned slightly and studied the small black figure for a moment.

"It may mean nothing—surely nothing super-natural—but the fact that this particular statue was chosen for the murder makes me wonder if there may be something diabolical and sinister and superstitious in this affair."

"Come, come, Vance!" Markham spoke with forced matter-of-factness. "This is modern New York, not legendary Egypt."

"Yes..oh, yes. But superstition is still a ruling factor in so-called human nature. Moreover, there are many more convenient weapons in this room—weapons fully as lethal and more readily wielded. Why should a cumbersome, heavy statue of Sakhmet have been chosen for the deed?..In any event, it took a strong man to swing it with such force."

He looked toward Scarlett, whose eyes had been fastened on the dead man with a stare of fascination.

"Where was this statue kept?"

Scarlett blinked.

"Why—let me see.." He was obviously trying to collect his wits. "Ah, yes. On the top of that cabinet." He pointed unsteadily to the row of wide shelves in front of Kyle's body. "It was one of the new pieces we unpacked yesterday. Hani placed it there. You see, we used that end cabinet temporarily for the new items, until we could arrange and catalogue 'em properly."

There were ten sections in the row of cabinets that extended across the rear of the museum, each one being about two and a half feet wide and a little over seven feet high. These cabinets—which in reality were but open shelves—were filled with all manner of curios: scores of examples of pottery and wooden vases, scent bottles, bows and arrows, adzes, swords, daggers, sistra, bronze and copper hand-mirrors, ivory game boards, perfume boxes, whip handles, palm-leaf sandals, wooden combs, palettes, head rests, reed baskets, carved spoons, plasterers' tools, sacrificial flint knives, funerary masks, statuettes, necklaces and the like.

Each cabinet had a separate curtain of a material which looked like silk rep, suspended with brass rings on a small metal rod. The curtains to all the cabinets were drawn open, with the exception of the one on the end cabinet before which the dead body of Kyle lay. The curtain of this cabinet was only partly drawn.

Vance had turned round.

"And what about the Anubis, Scarlett?" he asked. "Was it a recent acquisition?"

"That came yesterday, too. It was placed in that corner—to keep the shipment together."

Vance nodded, and walked to the partly curtained cabinet. He stood for several moments peering into the shelves.

"Very interestin'," he murmured, almost as if to himself. "I see you have a most unusual post-Hyksos bearded sphinx..And that blue-glass vessel is very lovely..though not so lovely as yon blue-paste lion's-head..Ah! I note many evidences of old Intef's bellicose nature—that battle-ax, for instance..And—my word!—there are some scimitars and daggers which look positively Asiatic. And"—he peered closely into the top shelf—" a most fascinatin' collection of ceremonial maces."

"Things Doctor Bliss picked up on his recent expedition," explained Scarlett. "Those flint and porphyry maces came from the antechamber of Intfe's tomb.."

A SERMONETTE

"Waiting for the Waters to Bubble"

(Moffatt's Translation) John 5:3

By O. SCOTT McFARLAND

Pastor of the First Presbyterian Church

The pool of Bethesda, in the city of Jerusalem, was a renowned health resort. At certain seasons of the year the waters of the pool, geyser-like, bubbled and boiled. A tradition had developed about these bubbling waters to the effect that an angel of the Lord went down into the pool at certain seasons of the year and troubled the waters. And a superstitious belief had also gained credence among the sick and ailing to the effect that the first one who stepped into the pool after this disturbance would be healed. No wonder that the porches surrounding the pool were always crowded with those who were in search of health. No wonder that, in great numbers and from all sections of the country, the sick and the lame and the blind came to bathe in its medicinal waters. The space available for the beds of the invalids was always at a premium. All through the year crowds of the world's unfortunates were there waiting for the waters to bubble. They were depending upon some external commotion rather than a subjective treatment. They put all their trust in "bubbles."

One does not have to draw on his imagination overmuch to see that this is a picture of many individuals and of many groups — both intelligent and Christian—who are scanning the surface of life and waiting some new bubbling, some new agitation, some new bigness, some latest-thing-out to supply a lack and a need in their own inner life. Instead of taking ourselves in hand for a rigorous treatment; in place of depending upon an inner renewal; rather than wait upon God for the renewal of our strength and vision and purposes; we say, "This is the thing that will put me on my feet again."

The most agitated bubbling and boiling of the waters in the pool of the world's life—a boiling-over that scalded the whole world—was the World War. The Christian nations, the nations where the Bible had been read the longest and where the churches were the most numerous, built the fires which brought about the boiling-over of greed and hate and slaughter. During those days of 1914 to 1918, certain thinkers in the field of religion were saying, "This will bring the people back to God. The war will refine our faith. If God answers our prayers for victory, we will never forget." Now we know that our expectation, that the war would bring in a new day of spiritual life and power and move all mankind closer to the ideals of the Prince of Peace, was an illusion.

Immediately upon the termination of the war, the forces of Protestantism, knowing that victory had come through the alliance of the allied powers, sought to marshall all the strength of our "bigness" in the Inter-Church World Movement. For a year or two some of us sat around the waters of this pool waiting for them to boil. Many were saying, "This will bring in a new day for the Kingdom. With the alliance of all our forces in one 'big' movement, we shall be able to win the kingdoms of men's minds and hearts for the Kingdom of our Lord." But this "newest" idea and this alliance in "bigness" was not what we needed. These bubbles did not bring health.

Most of us have been guilty, and that more than once, of sitting around the pool of "bigness," waiting for it to bubble. Again and again we have written a "Book of Numbers" by measuring the strength of a movement by the numbers which it enlists. We seem to think that glory is to be found only in the biggest city. More than once we have been guilty of thinking the successful men are those with the biggest fortunes. We point with pride to our biggest churches. We laud the preacher who captures the biggest crowd. This "Jumboism" is nothing more than tawdry bubbles. "We all are blind until we see that, in the human clan, nothing is worth the making if it does not make the man."

At the pool of Bethesda was a man who for thirty-eight years had been a constant sufferer. He was but one in a great crowd that waited for the pool's periodic bubbling. At every troubling of those waters there was much pushing and jostling in that crowd for each one was saying, "Me first." This man had no friend to help him; there was no chance of his ever being first into the pool after its bubbling. But one day he was healed. However, this man was not saved by the bubbling waters, but by the coming of Jesus, the Great Physician, who said to him, "Arise, take up thy bed and walk."

Our only hope for saving health and complete satisfaction and abiding joy and motive power that moves us Godward is through the coming of Jesus Christ into our life. He has already come. He is now here, for He says, "Lo, I am with you alway." The energizing power of His presence and spirit is the only way to inner renewal. The Kingdom of God cometh not with observation, but by the triumphant entry of Jesus Christ, the Son of God, into the lives of men.

WEEKLY SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

MAKING BUSINESS CHRISTIAN

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Nov. 30. Making Business Christian. Luke 19:1-10.

* * *

Editor of The Congregationalist

No better lesson upon the theme of "making business Christian" could be chosen than this story of Zacchaeus, for whatever interpretation we place upon the story Zacchaeus stands as a great example himself and his wealth to heal christian ends.

If Zacchaeus all along had been striving earnestly and faithfully to conduct his course honestly and fairly in a profession which was given over to extortion a..d dishonesty, that example strongly commends him.

Whereas, if Zacchaeus on the other hand had been unjust and extortionate the completeness of his readiness to make restitution marks in the surest and most definite way the sort of revolution that alone can establish Christian conditions where formerly conditions of selfishnes sand evil prevailed.

These two interpretations, it should be stated, have been placed upon the story as it reflects the character and former course of Zacchaeus. For the conception that Zacchaeus had all along been a man striving in an unpopular and morally dangerous calling to conduct himself honorably, the finest statement is to be found in a great sermon by Frederick W. Robertson of Brighton, on Hindrances Overcome.

Tried to Live Right

This great preacher of the last century in that brilliant and powerful sermon defends Zacchaeus against the imputations that have been made against his character. He represents him as a man who through his unpopular calling as tax gatherer for the Romans, and possibly in some other way, had become overwhelmed with an evil reputation, yet who, in spite of that reputation and with all its overwhelming handicaps, had striven to live honestly and according to his best ideals.

There is much warrant for that representation, for if Zacchaeus had been a purposeful extortioner, he could hardly have restored fourfold the things that he had taken from the people dishonestly.

The natural conclusion would be that his very statement, "If I have taken anything from any man by false accusation," suggested that he was not conscious of having done so, but that if he had in any way overlooked any extortionate action, he had the strong purpose to make the matter right.

Acocrding to the Jewish law, the restoring four-fold of anything taken unjustly was the obligation of a thief, and Zacchaeus was facing the situation courageously and honestly by saying virtually, "If I have used my office for extortion, I have been a thief, and I restore the thief's portion."

Whatever interpretation we put upon the incident, the one striking thing is that Zacchaeus in his meeting of Jesus found the true triumph of all that was best in him. Whether Jesus was vindicating the moral purpose that Zacchaeus had displayed all along and was bringing that former purpose to its supreme place, or whether Jesus in that moment beneath the tree brought to Zacchaus the glorious vision of a transformed life, the resulting experience was all that Christian privilege can suggest. Zacchaeus a man of small physical stature, stands forth as a man of giant-like proportions in his moral and religious life.

All Can Be Saved

The salvation that Jesus brought to the house of Zacchaeus is the salvation that he can bring to every house and to every individual. The notion that business cannot be touched with righteousness and truth is economically as wrong and unsound as it is morally. More and more we are discovering that. This does not mean that there are not mean that there are not issuer in business life where a man has to choose very definitely between a right course of action and probable, or certain, economic loss.

More than one individual has been compelled to make such crucial decisions, and it is no more true that the loss that men have been willing to accept for right-eeousness sake has had some corresponding economic gain than it is true that the way of the cross for Jesus was not a way of real loss.

What is true is that as in the case of the Master's going to the cross, so with every man who in business refuses even for the sake of gain to do something dishonest or dishonorable, there is something of the resurrection triumph. No gain can compensate for the loss of a man's self-respect or any gain in fortune for the death of his soul.

The Church Invites You

MAN A RELIGIOUS BEING

A man is incurably religious. One finds in the church that which helps to satisfy the natural instinct for worship. It is there where primarily the teachings of Jesus are presented and in these teachings are found the fundamental principles of conduct and character.

The church ministers to man's deepest needs. It is as natural for a normal man to go to church as it is for a horse to seek green pastures. Why not accept the invitation and GO TO CHURCH NEXT SUNDAY?

—D. Carl Yoder.

It is quite the usual thing to find youth impatient in its immaturity and wishing for greater years and a quicker arrival at man's estate. It is equally common to find the man past middle years recounting the brave days of his youth and wishing the vain wish that he might be a boy once more.

Our increasing years should yield us a constantly growing fund of wisdom if we are to enjoy our life station and justify our continued existence.

Wisdom is but another word for understanding—and in understanding the conditions that surround our lives today—that which lies directly before us—we learn to discern those things which might happen in the future.

If you are kind, your kindness will be reflected back upon you from the world as if it were a mirror.

Zaccheus, the Publican (a business man converted) Luke 19:1-10, for Sunday, November 30.

1. Why are taxes so unpopular? How change this attitude?
2. Of what value may obstructions be to one seeking to live a better life?
3. When is a business a Christian business?
4. What are some things in business today that ought to be Christianized?
5. What are the spiritual dangers of money getting?
6. How may our industrial system of capital and labor be made more Christian?
7. What are some of the things that prevent business men being converted to Christ?

Clericus says, "We are often down in an unspiritual crowd where we cannot see Christ. Get up into some tree of higher vision and clearer view and better thought and purpose, climb the tree of penitence, get up in the lofty branches of prayer and heavenly aspiration and you, too, shall see Jesus."

(Send church and Sunday school problems in question form to the church editor; questions with answer will appear in later issue.)

What is the best basis for church school grading?

It is generally conceded that the best basis for church school grading is the public school grading, each pupil in the church school being placed in the grade corresponding to the grade which he attends in the public school. There are four reasons for using this basis of grading:

(1) Its simplicity and naturalness. All the enrollment secretary needs to do is to learn the grade in the public school attended by the child; there can be little dispute on this basis.

(2) It brings together pupils of about the same degree of general mental development. This allows the teacher to do better work than could be done if there was a wide difference in the mentality of the children.

(3) It makes possible the same Sunday associations as exists during the week in the public school, making for increased interest in each other and a more harmonious response to religious instruction.

(4) It dignifies the church school in the eyes of both parents and pupils. There is carried over into the church school the educational spirit with an essential sense of sincerity.

FIRST ALL-AMERICA OUT

No Post-Season Football Here

ALHAMBRA AND ORANGE SPURN SAINT 'FEELER'

Santa Ana will have no post-season football this year. The city's gridiron schedule will close, officially and finally, next Friday afternoon when Coach "Tex" Oliver's Saints play Fullerton high school at Poly field.

Powerful interests here had been working secretly on a plan that would send the Santa Ana high school eleven against some strong team with the net proceeds going to charity. December 13 had been set as the tentative date.

Orange, undefeated champion of the Orange County league and the same squad that tried Santa Ana early in the fall after decisively outplaying the locals, was the first choice.

Orange In Playoffs

A "feeler" was sent to the neighboring city. It brought the answer that the Orange season, still on, would be considered at an end when, if at all, the Orangemen are defeated in the Southern California championship playoff series. The Panthers were to meet Whittier at Whittier today for the right to play Long Beach, the Coast league titleholder, in the semi-finals for the Southland gonfalon.

Alhambra, the only Coast league eleven that Santa Ana didn't have on its conference schedule, was next considered.

The Moors, through Coach George Hobbs, declined the nomination. Officially Hobbs explained that the Alhambra season, culminating in games with San Diego and Alhambra within five days, had been so strenuous that he did not feel like asking his boys to prolong it further.

Dons' Season Severe

Santa Ana junior college was not considered for the same reason. The Dons' season has been a severe one, calling for games with Chaffey, Phoenix, Ariz., and Menlo, northern California champions, as well as with six conference institutions, and Coach Bill Cook desired to terminate the schedule at Fullerton today. The jaycee squad has been hit hard by injuries too, and would hardly be in condition for further work.

Coach Oliver, head of the physical education department in the city schools, said he would not approve any post-season affair which would send members of Santa Ana teams against unorganized "outside group or groups."

No "All-Star" Game

This eliminated the possibility of an all-star contest featuring Jim Musick, Blanchard Beatty, Curt Youel, "Red" Cooke, George Decker, Ray Dawson, Bruce Tarver, "Chuck" Ehrhorn, George Warmer and other former Santa Anans who played on Pacific Coast and Southern California conference teams this year.

At Andrews gymnasium, headquarters for high school and junior college athletic squads it was stated that the football season will be considered closed after Friday's game with Fullerton.

Athletes and coaches alike are anxious to call it quits. It has been a long, hard season although one not without its success for both teams.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 29.—Selection of a captain to lead the University of Washington football team next fall has been deferred until the new season opens, Coach Jimmy Phelan announced today.

TULANE'S TERROR

Tomorrow's Schedule

Santa Ana at Laguna Beach; Huntington Beach at Cypress; Anapauma Rancho at Olinda; Anaheim at Associated Oil.

Weather permitting, some of the best baseball of the Orange County Harbor league season will be spread before fans of the district tomorrow afternoon.

Cypress and Laguna Beach, the only undefeated clubs of the second half of the split schedule, will be challenged by worthy opponents and good competition is promised at both of the other central points too.

Roy Langley's Santa Ana Merchants play at Laguna Beach. Jim Culver's Huntington Beach Waves travel to Cypress.

Anaheim draws the Associated Oil company.

Santa Ana has been an in-and-out club all season but largely because of its unsuccessful efforts in recruiting its strongest force all at one time. It is understood that all the big guns will be on deck for the joust at Laguna Beach so B. W. Elliott's men, easily the surprise team of the year, may have to stand the rap.

Huntington Beach is more than just a mere threat to Steve Luther's powerful, undefeated Cypress ensemble too. The Oilers are capable of some fine baseball when they settle down to it and they may possibly provide an upset tomorrow although Cypress will be favored to score its tenth straight victory of the campaign.

Cook Takes Dull Bout At Stadium

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 29.—George Cook, Australian heavyweight, won a decision over "Dutch" Elliott of Alhambra in a 10-round main event here last night which was characterized as the most uninteresting ever staged in the Legion stadium. The only persons left in the house at the end of the bout were the fighters, their managers, and newspapermen who were forced to stay.

KEARNS PAYS ALIMONY

CHICAGO, Nov. 29—Jack Kearns, prizefight promoter and former manager of Jack Dempsey, must pay his estranged wife, Legana Angel Kearns, $500 a month temporary alimony, Judge John Kerner ruled yesterday in circuit court.

YANKS TRADE BATTERY

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—The New York Yankees traded two pitchers and some money to the Baltimore Orioles yesterday and got a battery in exchange. Ken Holloway and J. Hopkins were sent to Baltimore.

DELHI OFFERS STRONG BOXING LINEUP MONDAY

While most matchmakers would feel satisfied with having a real magnetic fight topping their card and fill out the remainder with mediocre bouts and let it go at that, "Pop" Barrett, grizzled matchmaker for the Orange County Athletic club, feels otherwise, and his announcement regarding the support for the Canto Robleto—Young Sport eight-round bout for the flyweight championship of the Pacific coast, indicates he is sincere in claiming a double show for the price of one Monday night.

Sport and Robleto are both uptown main-eventers and Promoter Henry T. Foust outbid four Southern California clubs for their set-to, which will mark the third time they have crossed gloves. Sport won the first, a main event at Pasadena. Robleto took the second, a windup at Hollywood.

Winner Gets Speedy Dado

The winner has been assured a main event at the Olympic with Speedy Dado, now laid up with a broken collar bone.

Warren Frakes, the San Bernardino lightweight who is remembered as having won all the cups that used to be given to the fighter doing the "best work" at the Delhi club, and who holds two decisions over Urban Hernandez, is meeting Vincent Martinez, the aggressive Mexican lightweight who once beat Len Porter here. This will be the semi-final at 138 pounds.

Andy Dumler, known here as a fellow who never fails to put up real fights, meets Hugh Shropshire, another heavyweight slugger rapidly making a name for himself, in the special event of six rounds.

Charles Trains Hard

Making his first Santa Ana appearance since he knocked out Gus Hiebe in the eighth round of their ten-round star event, several weeks ago, fat Tim Charles, claiming to be better than ever owing to a strict course of training, has a real job on his hands in facing Vic Pertley, the one and only heavyweight ever to stop Kid Williams. This bout is limited to six rounds at catch weights.

Howard Fritz, with victories over Joe Ruiz, and knockouts over Ray Leonard and "Swede" Bergland, the last in about 15 seconds, opens the show in a four-round bout against Johnny Cordova, promising Mexican welterweight.

The 40 and 8 of the American Legion, and Foust, co-promoters, announce that there will be no raise in prices for this all-star lineup.

Craghead, Oak Ace, Sold To Cleveland

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 29.—Purchase of Howard Craghead, star righthander of the Oakland club of the Pacific Coast league, was announced today by Business Manager Billy Evans of the Cleveland Indians.

The consideration was $15,000 in cash and an agreement to pay an additional $10,000 if the pitcher is retained after May 15.

FANS SCOFF AS WALKER STOPS K. O. CHRISTNER

CHICAGO, Nov. 29.—(UP)—Mickey Walker, world middleweight champion, today listed a 58-second knockout over K. O. Christner as the second accomplishment of his heavyweight campaign, but the victory added nothing to Walker's prestige.

Walker scored his "knockout" in the opening session of a scheduled 10-round bout at Chicago Coliseum last night, and left the ring with the boos of 3000 spectators ringing in his ears. The fans apparently were convinced that Christner "took a dive" and evidenced their displeasure by hooting Walker and his manager, Jack Kearns, from the ring.

Christner, whose artistic backward flop into the press row ended the exhibition, had been on the floor once previous to his final fall. He went down after being hit by a left hook to the jaw in Walker's initial rush.

He got up at the count of six and backed across the ring trying to avoid Walker's blows. After reaching the ropes, he looked back over his shoulder, and then fell backwards out of the ring. He claimed to have injured his leg so severely that he could not get back into the ring before the count of ten. Christner weighed 202 pounds, Walker 164 1-4.

PINCKERT AND BAKER ON N.Y. SUN'S ELEVEN

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—(UP)—The New York Sun named today its All-American eleven, an alternative eleven and one hundred players with All-America ranking.

Notre Dame and Southern California each placed two men on the first team. The Sun reported a lack of star backfield men which prevailed in the past few seasons and found the greatest competition for line positions, especially at center.

The teams follow:

First team—Baker, Northwestern, LE; Edwards, Washington State, LT; Koch, Baylor, LG; Ticknor, Harvard, C; Baker, Southern California, RG; Sington, Alabama, RT; Fesler, Ohio State, RE; Carideo, Notre Dame, QB; Schwartz, Notre Dame, LHB; Pinckert, Southern California, RHB; Macaluso, Colgate, FB.

Alternates—Arbelbide, Southern California, LE; Van Bibber, Purdue, LT; Wisniewski, Fordham, LG; Hein, Washington State, C; Woodworth Northwestern, RG; Lubratovich, Wisconsin, RT; Dalrymple, Tulane, RE; Dodd, Tennessee, QB; Duffield, Southern California, LHB; Brill, Notre Dame, RHB; Russell, Northwestern, FB.

LA BARBA EXTENDED BY VETERAN TAYLOR

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—Fidel La Barba, erstwhile bantamweight champion, was farther along today in his quest for the featherweight boxing crown that rests uneasily on the head of Bat Battalino.

La Barba defeated Bud Taylor in a none too impressive 10-round battle last night in Madison Square Garden and appeared to have earned a bid to meet the winner of the Kid Chocolate-Battalino featherweight title bout December 12.

Next Friday's Schedule

M. E. South vs. First Christian; First Baptist vs. Costa Mesa Community; Orange Avenue Christian vs. Latter Day Saints.

Where there were three before there were only two basketball teams left today in the "charmed circle" of the Santa Ana Church league.

The Latter Day Saints, champions of the 1929-30 campaign, dropped out of the undefeated class at the Y.M.C.A. last night. M. E. South, playing splendidly on offense and defense, unexpectedly took the measure of the Mormons, 29 to 22.

The South Methodists won by getting the jump on their opponents. They enjoyed a 22-12 advantage at the half and though outscored in the last half had enough on the ball to maintain their advantage.

Cooke, M. E. forward, ran amuck in the first half with 16 points. Snow, usually a great marksman for the Mormons, was limited to four field goals.

Dope followed a true course in the other two contests, the Costa Mesa Community quintet waxing the Orange Avenue Christians, 25-7, and the powerful First Christians rolling up the largest score of the season at the expense of the luckless First Baptists, 66-10.

The lineups:

L. D. Saints (22)		(29) M. E. South
Snow (8)	F	(17) Cooke
V. Morley (7)	F	(2) Slaback
Marcil (2)	C	(7) Stull

WASHINGTON STATE BATTLES VILLANOVA

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 29.—Supremely confident of victory, Washington State's undefeated and untied varsity met Villanova in intersectional football today.

Villanova's varsity, coached by Harry Stuhldreher, former Notre Dame star, pinned hopes of victory of its record. It has upset other favorites, notably Georgetown and Temple.

WEST WINDS

Here and There in Local Sport

By EDDIE WEST

There are two mediums you can't beat no matter how hard you try—in pool, poker or pigskin. They are, reading rapidly from left to right, skill and luck. Skill and luck are combinations that touch the spot like potatoes and gravy, ham and eggs. In sport they often spell the difference between success and failure.

Resourceful Orian Landreth, a young man of intellect and imperturbability, is indeed a favored son. Nature has endowed him with plenty of both—skill and luck—and he has been foxy enough to make assets of them.

Mr. Landreth is the coach of Long Beach high school's football team, 1930 champion of the Coast Preparatory league and of Southern California—for winning the championship of the Coast league is tantamount to annexing the more important bauble.

Landreth is a smart, alert, keen young man, and this is not to be taken as an effort to minimize his feat of capturing the conference bunting again. If anything it is to be an encomium, for in my none too expert opinion young Mr. Landreth coached to the top of the heap the fourth best team in the league.

Long Beach played smart, heads-up ball to beat Santa Ana, Alhambra and San Diego in successive games. A team that did that, no matter how, deserved the jewels.

The Jackrabbits were outgained by Santa Ana, almost two to one, but won when their backs performed the football miracle of running back for touchdowns two kickoffs in the same game.

The Jackrabbits were quite conclusively outplayed by Alhambra, then won when Alhambra fumbled on its own 15-yard line in the last three minutes of play and thus prevented a trailing team with the winning touchdown.

The Jackrabbits next were most thoroughly outgained by San Diego, but won, and those who witnessed the affair are still scratching their heads and wondering how.

San Diego made 14 first downs. Long Beach couldn't make any.

San Diego made a total of 238 yards from the line of scrimmage. Long Beach made 72, including an advance of 50 yards on the touchdown pass.

The great "Red" Franklin, who dazzled Santa Ana with his speed, was stopped colder than a pawnbroker's smile. He averaged one-twelfth of one yard for the whole day. He got as far as the line of scrimmage just twice.

The secret of Long Beach's success is coaching and opportunism. The Jackrabbits "hound" that old agate, cash in on the other fellow's mistakes. They have enough on the ball to take advantage of the breaks that come their way when the other fellow eventually errs.

You can't beat the never-miss combination of skill and luck. They'll beat skill alone any day.

JOE GETS GENEROUS

Joe ("Pop") Barrett, matchmaker for the Orange County Athletic club, whose experience in the pugilistic trade span from March 17, 1880, and from bareknuckle fighter to promoter, matchmaker and manager of world champions, came up with a new one today.

Last week he imposed a rule to the effect that any Delhi main-eventer residing outside Orange county must lodge in Santa Ana the night before the fights, and report to the sports editors of Orange county newspapers as proof of such residence.

This week Barrett, being duly sworn, offers:

"To pay the full and complete expense of any fan who, after attending every boxing program in Southern California next week, including the two highest priced shows in Los Angeles, does not of his own free will and accord agree that the card at the Orange County Athletic club Monday night, featuring Canto Robleto and Young Sport, is the best of the bunch."

This smacks mightily of free publicity, Joe, but we'll let you get away with it this time.

Conduct Services For Nell Hoskins

ANAHEIM, Nov. 29.—Funeral services were held today for Mrs. Nell Hoskins, who passed away Friday at the home of her two sisters, Mrs. William E. DeSombre and Mrs. Pauline Campbell, of East North street, where she had resided for the past four years. Surviving her are two other sisters, the Misses Mamie and Nina Thornton, both of Dallas, Texas.

The remains were sent to Dallas, Mrs. Hoskins' former home, for interment.

Shires Happy He's Farmed To Minors

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 29.—"That's one of the greatest breaks I ever got," opined "The Great" Shires, when informed today of his sale to the Milwaukee club of the American association by the Washington club.

"I'm too good a ball player to be sitting around on a major league bench. I told Clark Griffith that last year," Shires added.

SIKI BEATS ARREGON

PHOENIX, Ariz., Nov. 29.—Battling Siki, 132, Phoenix Indian, won a close 10-round decision from Frankie Arregon, 132, Los Angeles, here last night. Arregon scored a knockdown in the first round but was unable to maintain his advantage.

WE VOTE WITH GEORGE

From Philadelphia come advices that George Earnshaw would like to have $30,000 to pitch baseball next year with Mr. Mack. If Mr. Mack gives Earnshaw that much, it's a cinch that "Lefty" Grove will not be satisfied with $29,000. And if Mr. Mack gives these two fellows $60,000 between them, what do you suppose Mickey Cochrane will want for catching both of them? Being the manager of a world championship ball team is not always a bed of roses, at that.

But we vote with George. The young social registerite from Swarthmore did $50,000 worth of work in three days during the world series. Give him $30,000, Mr. Mack, and next fall let him pitch the whole world series.

NEW FACES IN PHILLY

During the least part of next season, new faces will appear in the Athletics lineup. Three reserves seem to have established themselves. They are Frank Higgins, third baseman; Eric McNair, second baseman, and Dib Williams, shortstop. Higgins will have a chance to play if either Dykes or Foxx is hurt, as Dykes would be shifted to first base in case of an injury to Foxx. Though Joe Boley still has a lot of great baseball left in his system, he cannot go on forever, and Williams has shown some pretty nice stuff at short.

TALE OF A GAS TANK

In the outfield, besides Simmons, Haas, Miller and Summa, the team has Jim Moore, Roger Tigers, and comes to the Athletics Cramer and Bob Johnson of the with Catcher Palmisano from Portland.

There is a story that Palmisano got into the big leagues because John Shibe's car ran out of gas in San Francisco. Last fall, Shibe, vice president of the Athletics, made his annual visit to the coast. He was riding around in San Francisco with a friend when the gas supply ran low. They made a gas station and the friend introduced Shibe as one of the owners of the Athletics. A young man in greasy overalls, standing nearby, picked up the words and approached Mr. Shibe.

He introduced himself as a former Georgia Tech quarterback who wanted to get a job in organized baseball as a catcher. Shibe was impressed by the young man's eagerness, took his name and asked Tom Turner, president of the Portland club, to give the former quarterback a tryout. Palmisano made good with Portland, and now is to have his chance with the A's.

Mack is, for the most part, standing pat with the team that won the world championship this year. But he is working new faces into the background, and when the old guard falters, there will be ambitious youth to take its place.

JUSTICE TO GIL

Legend hath it that of all the sour coaches of the western hemisphere, none is more sour nor morbid than Gil Dobie of Cornell. There is no more misjudged man in baseball today. Dobie can smile, even in defeat, and he is a sportsman of the very highest caliber. He is a friendly man, with always a word of praise for players who have done well, whether they are his own or not.

SUCKERS? WHY NOT?

We are in receipt of a bulletin from the board in control of athletics at the University of Michigan. It states: "The nickname 'Suckers' as referring to the athletic teams of the University of Illinois is no longer being used in deference to the wishes of Illinois alumni. While this term has long and often been used in this connection, it is requested that its use be now discontinued." Very well, board, but isn't this rather a bad year to try to shelve that monicker?

IN REBUTTAL

"The wailing wall is wet again,' is the comment coming from the press agent of W. L. Stribling of Ochlochnee, Ga. "Stribling has only knocked out Von Porat, Scott, Christner and a couple of others this year, and simply because Arthur De Kuh, the king of clutch, stays the distance with Strib all the hammers are busy again. Even though Sharkey's pugilistic effort for the year consisted of hitting Phil Scott and Max Schmeling below the hips, his grandstand offer to box Stribling in New York is seized on all sides, and the Boston gob becomes the pet of the pugilistic prattle. Sharkey, praised, has made two starts this year and failed miserably in both; Stribling, criticized, has knocked out five men and won three other bouts decisively. How can you figure it out?" The answer is that we are not figuring out anything concerning heavyweight fighters any more.

ANOTHER LITTLE WORRY

There are lots and lots of football players, so it shouldn't cause us to lose a great deal of slumber when one gets married and leaves dear old Pimplewash. But how about these tennis players? George Lott's married, Johnny Van Ryn's married and they say Johnny Doeg is going to be. Of course there is no reason why marriage should interfere with an athlete's deeds except that it does. And how about that Davis Cup?

'LADY'S MORALS' OPENS AT WEST COAST: 5 DAYS

Grace Moore, famous Metropolitan Opera soprano, makes her debut on the talking screen as Jenny Lind, historic Swedish singer, in "A Lady's Morals," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's vivid romance based on the life of the opera celebrity of the past, which will come Monday to the Fox West Coast theater.

The picture deals with the career of the "Swedish Nightingale" and her sensational appearance in New York under the auspices of P. T. Barnum, pioneer of showmanship, and the romance is between the singer and a blind song composer. Hans Kraly, famous for "The Student Prince" and other film hits, and Claudine West adapted the scenario from a story by Dorothy Farnum.

The plot opens with Jenny Lind at the height of her success in Europe, and continues with her romance with the composer, Paul Brandt, who goes blind and then hides from her sight; then follows her, coming to New York for the Barnum engagement, where she is reunited with her sweetheart.

A notable cast appears with the singer. Reginald Denny, hit of "Madam Satan" and "Those Three French Girls," enacts Brandt, and Wallace Beery of "The Big House" and "Way for a Sailor" is seen as P. T. Barnum. Jobyna Howland, famous on the stage in "The Gold Diggers" and on the screen in "Dixiana," appears as a tempestuous companion; Gus Shy of "Good News" on stage and screen is the Bowery entertainer and minor parts are played by Gilbert Emery, last seen in "Let Us Be Gay," George F. Marion of "Anna Christie," Paul Porcasi of "Broadway," Giovanni Martino, Metropolitan opera singer; Bodil Rosing, Swedish character actress, Joan Standing, Mavis Villiers and Judith Vosselli.

The picture marks the first talking screen work of Carrie Jacobs Bond, composer of "The End of a Perfect Day," whose song, "Lovely Hour," was specially written for Miss Moore. She also sings two operatic numbers, the "Casta Diva" from Bellini's "Norma" and an aria from "Daughter of the Regiment," by Donizetti. "It Is Destiny" was composed for her by Oscar Straus, king of light opera composers, and "Barcarolle" is from the same composer, lyrics for both by Clifford Grey. Herbert Stothart, composer of "The Rogue Song," is represented in "Oh Why," with lyrics by Harry Wood and Arthur Freed. Other musical details include a chorus sung by students, a Swedish pastorale by Stothart and an Italian song by Straus and Grey.

"PLAYBOY" HELD OVER

RECORD THRILLING SCENE

Acclaimed as one of the most imposing, dramatic and entertaining pictures ever produced by Pathe, "Her Man," a colorful story of the Havana underworld, comes to the Fox West Coast theater today and Sunday.

Directed by Tay Garnett, "Her Man" deals with the regeneration of a girl from "the wrong side of the island" and in the course of this reformation there is presented a series of episodes that are said to be the most thrilling that have been pictured since the sound era was inaugurated.

Helen Twelvetrees plays Frankie and Ricardo Cortez essays the character of Johnnie. The production serves to introduce to the motion picture public the stage star, Marjorie Rambeau. Phillips Holmes, whose performance in "Devil's Holiday" was hailed as one of the best of the season, plays the roving sailor lad who rescues Frankie from degradation.

The comedy is provided by James Gleason and Harry Sweet. Others in an outstanding cast are Franklyn Pangborn, Mathew Betz, Thelma Todd, Mike Donlin, Stanley Fields, Blythe Daly, Ruth Hiatt, Vincent Barnett, Jerry Drew and Pat Harmon.

One of the much talked of features of "Her Man" is the climax which is reached in a sensational underworld battle, said to exceed in action and thrills even the famous fight of "The Spoilers." The story of "Her Man" was written by Mr. Garnett and Howard Higgin. The dialogue and adaptation was the work of Tom Buckingham.

SEVEN ACTS VODVIL AT FOX WEST COAST

35 Juveniles In Big Film Coming To Santa Ana

The children who answered the roll call at the beginning of the studio school day hailed from every corner of the United States and far-away places of the globe.

"The Doorway to Hell", newest Warner Bros. and Vitaphone production, comes to the Fox Broadway theatre Monday for a run of four days, according to the announcement of Manager Francis Glaab.

This tense and thrilling study of gang psychology was made by Rowland Brown and the crackling underworld dialogue by George Rosener—both adepts in their field. One of the most realistic sequences of the hair-raising melodrama is that in which disgruntled gangsters plot to get their former leader out of jail for the purpose of "giving him the works."

Young Lewis Ayres, who burst into full-fledged fame as the hero of "All Quiet on the Western Front," plays the part of the outwardly gentle, but ruthless, king of the underworld. The girl in the case is played by beautiful Dorothy Mathews. Character parts are superbly acted by Charles Judels, Leon Janney, Robert Elliott, James Cagney, Kenneth Thompson, Jerry Mandy and Noel Madison. Archie Mayo directed.

"The Doorway to Hell" again proves that there is no escape for the wrongdoer. It also shows the courage, thrilling if misguided which actuates the gangster in living up to his code. A play to be put on your list is "The Doorway to Hell."

KAY FRANCIS, LUKAS TO SUPPORT POWELL

William Powell will have distinguished support for his next production, "Ladies' Man", it was assured today when Paramount assigned Paul Lukas and Kay Francis to dramatic roles in this filmization of Rupert Hughes' story which Lothar Mendes will direct.

Kay Francis supported Powell in "Street of Chance" and "For the Defense," and is now working with George Bancroft in "Scandal Sheet."

'MAN OF WYOMING' COMES TO WALKERS'

Gary Cooper, hero of "The Virginian" and "The Texan" becomes a gallant captain in the U. S. Engineers in "A Man From Wyoming," which opens at Walker's State theater tomorrow.

"A Man From Wyoming" is the story of the war adventures of a young Westerner who enlists at the first bugle call and serves valiantly in the great conflict in France.

During a particularly stiff engagement June Collyer, a society girl ambulance - driver, craving thrills, makes her way to the front, "A. W. O. L." She wanders into Cooper's territory and draws shell-fire. He is forced to arrest her. He treats her roughly, but he cannot help admiring her grit. She is fascinated by his stern manliness, and the result of their friendship is marriage in a small French village back of the lines.

"SEE AMERICA THIRST" OPENS AT BROADWAY

A new trio of comedians, "Slim" Summerville, Bessie Love and Harry Langdon, come to the Fox Broadway theater today in one of the funniest pictures that has been brought here in the past several months. The film is "See America Thrist," a travesty on gang warfare, and it plays at the theater through Sunday night.

The amusing situations that Summerville and Langdon find themselves in, when as they are kicked off a freight train to land on a truck carrying contraband liquor, until the end of the picture when they find they are sandwiched in between two rival gangs, will tend to send the blues scattering.

Both comedians, opposites if there ever were two, go over with a "bang." Summerville, since his performance in "All Quiet on the Western Front," as the sole comedian, has been in great demand by directors of comedies ever since and he shows his sterling qualities along that line in "See America Thrist."

Bessie Love plays the part of a cafe entertainer, out to get information of the various gangs for the district attorney's office. She plays her part particularly well.

A Fox Movietone news reel, together with an all-talking comedy and other short subjects also are shown over the week-end.

Fern Burford Gallery Opened Today With Reception

Many Santa Anans interested in the art colony at Laguna Beach, and the work of the talented dwellers in Our Village as exemplified in the art gallery there, were turning their steps beachwards today, drawn by the formal opening of the Fern Burford galleries in Laguna hotel.

Mrs. Burford, who for a number of years has served the Laguna Beach paper, "South Coast News," as art and society editor, resigned recently to give her attention to the new galleries where she will display the work of famous painters of the west. It is her intention to provide a setting suitable for canvases which she wil show to those who wish to select representative work of the artists, for their homes. While she will handle the work of all western painters, she will give special prominence to that of members of the Laguna Beach Art association.

In opening the galleries to the public, Mrs. Burford planned to present many notable artists to friends and patrons, for she was to be assisted in both afternoon and evening hours, by members of the Art association, the board of directors especially acting as sponsors for the function.

Among famous painters serving as patrons and patronesses were to be Mr. and Mrs. William Wendt, Frank Tenney Johnson, Alhambra; Thomas L. Hunt, William Griffith, William Riddell, president of the Art association; Frank Cuprien, vice president; Ida Randall Bolles, secretary; Joseph Kleitsch, Carl Yens, Marion Kavanaugh Wachtel.

Musical features of afternoon and evening were to include solos by Louise Gibbs of Los Angeles, coloratura soprano; instrumental numbers by Le Charmant trio, directed by Clarence A. Gustlin of this city, and selections by the Whittier College orchestra. A lecture on art was to be an afternoon feature also.

HOLIDAY BRIDE

Thanksgiving was a holiday with special significance for Mrs. Don Smith, for it was her chosen wedding day. She was formerly Miss Erma Lee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. K. Lee of Stanford street, Garden Grove, becoming Mrs. Smith at 4 o'clock on Thursday afternoon at a pretty wedding ceremony in the home of her parents. Mr. and Mrs. Smith are now honeymooning in the mountains, but will make their home in Hermosa Beach.

Thanksgiving Chosen For Pretty Home Wedding

A Thanksgiving wedding ceremony of much charm, was that of Miss Erma Lee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. K. Lee of Garden Grove, and Don Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Smith of Los Angeles, which occurred Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Lee home on Stanford street.

An attractive background was given the ceremony by the autumn flowers and greenery used in the home. A musical interval preceded the ceremony, opening with "At Dawning," played as a piano solo by Mrs. Glen Speck, sister of the bride. Two songs, "Because" and "The Greatest Wish in the World," were charmingly sung by Mrs. C. W. Chamberlain of Banning, sister of Mr. Smith, to Mrs. Speck's piano accompaniment.

The latter remained at the piano for the bridal music, playing the Wedding March from Lohengrin as the wedding party formed beneath a bower of ferns and baby chrysanthemums in primrose yellow, flanked by tall candelabra.

Miss Lee was lovely in her gown of lustrous white satin in formal effect, and carrying a great cluster of gardenias circled by snowy bride roses and lilies of the valley. Her long tulle veil had been worn by Mrs. Chamberlain when the latter was a bride, and was confined to her hair with the orange blossom wreath worn by her sister, Mrs. Speck, at her nuptials. An interesting detail of her costume was the handsome gold necklace which was a family heirloom.

Miss Ethlyn Lee attended her sister as maid of honor, and wore a peach colored chiffon with rosebuds and violets as her flowers. Winton Smith of Los Angeles, assisted his brother as best man. The ceremony was read impressively by the Rev. H. E. Hinkley, pastor of the Garden Grove Baptist church.

There were sixty guests present for the nuptials and the reception which followed, and during which, a tiered wedding cake was cut to be served with ices.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith left for a honeymoon in one of the Southland's mountain resorts, Mrs. Smith traveling in a smart ensemble costume in deep red, worn with black accessories. Upon their return they will make their home in Hermosa Beach, and will resume their teaching duties. Mr. Smith, who is a graduate of Pomona college, is principal of the Wiseburn school in Los Angeles. His bride, who graduated from University of California at Los Angeles after completing her high school course in Santa Ana, is teaching in Palos Verdes schools. She is a native daughter not only of the state, but of Garden Grove.

Vernons Were Hosts At Lovely Dinner

One of the enjoyable Thanksgiving dinners was that with Mr. and Mrs. John J. Vernon as hosts in their home at 2020 Santiago avenue. An intimate little group was bidden to share the hospitality of the home.

The table expressed the autumn mood in delightful fashion, and was centered with a black crystal plate filled with silver fruit. Candleholders were of the same rich ware, and bore large orange tapers which harmonized prettily with cunning little baskets at each place. Chocolate turkeys served as favors. A tempting five-course dinner was served.

Those present, other than Mr. and Mrs. Vernon and little daughter Betty Louise were Mr. and Mrs. Albert B. Sholly and Mrs. Elizabeth Good of Altadena.

Unique Party Given For Bride-Elect Recently

Reminiscent of the many enjoyable week-ends which the guests have shared together at Camp Emma Otis, Y. W. C. A. camp above the Modjeska ranch, was a charming party of recent date when Miss Harriet Wollaston was hostess in her home at 642 North Ross street, honoring Miss Floye Allen, bride-elect of W. S. Phelps of Oakland.

Eloquent of these good times were the appointments used at the dinner hour, for centering the table was a little log cabin whose tiny window revealed the glimmer of a candle. Surrounding the rustic dwelling were leaves, rocks and acorns such as are found in the popular Orange county camp. The menu was especially tempting, and was served to the accompaniment of "do you remember this" and many other references to the camping parties in the hills.

Following the dinner Miss Allen found herself the center of interest, and was presented with an array of delightful accessories for her future kitchen. The wedding will take place at an early date, and she and Mr. Phelps will make their home in Oakland.

Those present, other than the hostess, Miss Wollaston and the honoree, Miss Allen, were Mrs. L. M. Wollaston, Miss Myrtle Reeves, Miss Carolyn Haughton, Miss Helen Kubitz, Miss Minnie Crissman, Mrs. R. R. Russick, Miss Lula Ott, Mrs. Marie Fowler and Mrs. Jessie Searls.

Interesting Meeting Held In Zimmerman Home Wednesday

Of more than usual interest was Wednesday's meeting of the Martha Washington Thimble club when Mrs. J. J. Zimmerman was hostess in her home at 210 South Sycamore street and Mrs. Mary Baxter, recently arrived from Iowa, was a special guest of the day. Many were the interesting accounts of the first appearance of winter and the snow-clad Iowa fields which Mrs. Baxter related.

During the afternoon members continued to work on their Christmas needlework while enjoying the social time. To conclude the pleasant gathering, dainty refreshments were served.

Those present, other than Mrs. Zimmerman and Mrs. Baxter, were Mesdames Roy House, C. E. Jackson, Florence Summerville, George Decker, C. E. Curtis, Bessie McDonald, Harry Erans, Docia Jasper and George Peters.

Dinner Party Observed Joint Occasion In Paul Home

The joy of celebrating their 22nd wedding anniversary was enhanced by Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Paul recently for it was Mr. Paul's birthday as well, and they were hosts at a delightful dinner, entertaining in their home at 1205 West Third street.

White and a delicate tint of pink featured the decorations, and evidencing the chosen color scheme were the tall pink candles tied with fluffy tulle bows, and resting in crystal holders. Concluding the menu course was a huge wedding cake topped with a shy little bride and bridegroom. Mr. and Mrs. Paul were married in Iowa.

Those present, other than Mr. and Mrs. Paul, were their daughter, Miss Mildred Mae Paul, Miss Addie Mae Leech, Mrs. Paul's sister of Long Beach, Mr. and Mrs. A. C Roedeske of Inglewood, and Mr. and Mrs. H. N. Stuhr of Eagle Rock.

Dinner Party Held In Fullerton

Among the merriest of the many Thanksgiving dinners was that with Mrs. Marjorie Fox and young sons, Arthur and Billie as hosts in their home in Fullerton. Many of the delicacies associated with the annual holiday were included in the menu served at a table centered with yellow chrysanthemums flanked with glowing tapers of the same tint. A profusion of red-berried shrubs were used to brighten the rooms.

A social time followed the dinner hour, and those present to share the affair with Mrs. Fox and her sons were Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Swanson and children, Patsy-Ruth and Robert-Roy and Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Chilburg and daughter, Barbara-Lee, all of Riverside; Henry Goslin, Glendale; Russ Hobson, Fullerton, Ross Eddows, Anaheim, and Mrs. E. J. Scott of this city.

Miss Martha Kittle Wedded Wednesday To R. Lenhardt

Miss Martha Kittle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Kittle, and Robert Lehnhardt, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Lehnhardt, of Garden Grove, were united in marriage at a quiet wedding held at the bride's home, 1002 West Washington avenue, Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Preceding the ceremony, Mrs. L. E. Kittle, of Berkeley, sister-in-law of the bride, sang "O, Promise Me."

Dr. H. E. Hinkley, pastor of the Garden Grove Baptist church, performed the ceremony. The couple was unattended.

Following the service a reception was held with only the immediate relatives present.

The bride was a resident of Garden Grove for several years prior to moving to Santa Ana this fall. Both young people are active in the Baptist church work. The groom is a teacher in the high school at Bell.

Southland Clubwomen Will Meet at Lake Norconian Club

Definite co-operation of the united forces of the California Federation of Women's clubs to secure immediate results toward the alleviation of unemployment is being sought by Mrs. Lillian Gilbreath of the National Committee on Unemployment.

Mrs. A. P. Nelson, former well known Santa Ana clubwoman and president of Costa Mesa Woman's club and state chairman of industrial and social relations, will present the request at the next regular state board meeting of the federation at Lake Norconian club, December 6.

Mrs. W. W. Slayden, Los Angeles, state president, will preside at the board meeting which will convene at 9:30 o'clock for the all-day session. At the noon luncheon, members of the Southern District executive board will be present. As customary during the present administration, executive board members of the district in which the state meeting is held will attend the afternoon session.

Other business of importance will include a request from the Woman's club of Bakersfield whose members are seeking help in securing federal aid for the development of the Sanctuary of the Pines in Santa Barbara National forest on Frazier mountain. 3 tablespoons soft butter
1 package of zwieback

Directions: Beat the egg yolks till creamy and thick, add to them the sugar, flour, salt and flavoring and beat well to mix. Add the cheese and mix until the lumps are gone. Milk is added to the mixture and it is whipped once more, the stiffly beaten whites folded in last and the filling poured carefully into a pie pan lined with the zwieback crust.

Bake one hour in a rather slow oven (about 350 degrees to start then reduced to 275 as soon as a film forms over top). To make the crust, cream the sugar with the soft butter, roll the zwieback to dust and slowly blend it into the butter until it will hold together when pressed firmly against the bottom and sides of the pie tin with a spatula.

I have found that many a Waterloo is met in trying to make the zwieback crust stay put . . . what's the matter with using a very crisp pie crust? Line the pan as for lemon pie and bake it for five minutes in a hot oven so that the moist filling will not soak too much, then proceed with the baking as directed . . . another hint that will help you— don't try to beat the lumps out of commercial cottage cheese; it can't be done, but perfect results can be had by pressing the cheese through a potato ricer.

DIVORCES ARE GRANTED THREE BY S. A. JUDGE

Three divorce decrees were granted yesterday after hearings before Judge G. K. Scovel and one suit asking divorce and another seeking annulment of a marriage were filed in the office of County Clerk J. M. Backs.

Judge Scovel granted decrees to Walter W. Meyer from Florence L. Meyer, on a charge of cruelty; to Ralph Hiatt from Grace E. Hiatt on a charge of desertion; and to Ernestine Stankey from Adolph Stankey on a cruelty charge.

The annulment proceeding which was filed by L. R. Barnes, carries some startling charges against J. R. Barnes, who it is alleged is also known as E. W. Rinard. The plaintiff asserts that she married the defendant on the representations that he was an upright, honest and industrious man employed as a construction engineer, but that after they were married in Yuma, Arizona, last July, he informed her that he had participated in numerous robberies and was a fugitive from justice as an escaped convict. The complaint alleges that Barnes or Rinard told the plaintiff that he had stolen autos at a price of $50 each and that he had transported liquor at $50 per trip, and had escaped from prison after serving about one year of a 10 year sentence for manslaughter.

The divorce complaint filed yesterday afternoon was by Ada Remley against Otis Remley. They were married in 1927 and separated in 1929. The plaintiff charges desertion.

BAND TO OPEN WINTER SERIES DECEMBER 9TH

Plans are rapidly being completed for the first program of Santa Ana Municipal band's annual series of winter concerts. This event, which will be in the nature of a Christmas concert, and which has been arranged in honor of the holiday season, is scheduled for presentation in Santa Ana high school auditorium on Tuesday evening, December 9, under the direction of D. C. Cianfoni.

Special efforts have been put forth to make the program novel and of distinctly popular appeal. Selections to be programmed have been chosen with due consideration for the present holiday season, to emphasize the Yuletide sentiment. Several modern works published within the past several years will also receive premiere reading.

The entire "Nutcracker Suite" by Peter Tschaikowsky, one of the most universally popular of symphonic selections and a distinct favorite of local audiences, will be offered by the band, its Christmas setting making its choice on this occasion very fitting. Founded on a charming Christmas fairy tale, the several graceful movements of this Russian masterpiece are colorful and appropriately chosen.

In connection with the interesting program, music lovers will note with interest the first public appearance of the women's chorus, the Treble Clef club, since the appointment of its new director, Mr. William Clare Hall. The club will be heard in familiar old Christmas carols, redolent of the spirit of Christmas.

MUSIC-LITERATURE-ART

PAUL DUKAS

BY RUTH ANDREWS

Paul Dukas, who has been termed by one enthusiastic biographer "one of the noblest figures in contemporary music" is one of that important group of French modernist composers including Claude Debussy, Maurice Ravel, and Florent Schmitt. He is of special interest since he is still active as a composer, while his works are often played on current concert programs, as typical examples of the modern French style.

Dukas, who was born in Paris October 1, 1865, first began to manifest a sincere feeling for music when he was about 14, and made some premature attempts at composition even during this youthful period, although his knowledge of theory was meagre and secured through his own efforts.

Not until he had finished his general education did Dukas turn to music in earnest, entering the Paris conservatory in 1882, when he was 17. He studied under Guiraud, Dubois and Matthias during a six-year period spent in this historic institution of musical instruction. When he was 21 he won a first prize for proficiency in counterpoint, followed two years later by a second "Prix de Rome," as the result of a cantata, "Velleda."

While at the Conservatory Dukas also composed two early overtures, "King Lear" (1883) and Gotz von Berlichingen" (1884). These early efforts showed somewhat the influence of Wagner, who was then the idol of all young composers in Paris, but Dukas quickly realized that in order to achieve the goal which he had already set for himself, he must strive to retain and strengthen his own individuality.

Thus it was really to his advantage when he left the conservatory in 1888 for a period of military training. When this expired he embarked upon a rigid course of self-training, in which he endeavored to perfect himself technically by a careful study of the classic masters, as well as to give full expression to his own indixiduality. No half-way compromise could satisfy him, and he worked with undiminished ardor, progressing rapidly, and developing his own unique style to a marked degree.

One of the first results of this period of training, also his first composition of merit to be publicly performed was his overture, "Polyeucte," based on Corneille's tragedy of that name, and brought out in 1892. For a time after this he aided Saint Saens in completing the orchestration of an opera, "Fredegonde," also supervising its premiere performance in 1895.

During 1896 and 1897 Dukas composed a symphony, also a sonata, which were severely classic in style, also indicative of the rare talent which was rapidly blossoming forth as the result of tireless study.

Indeed, 1897 was an especially important year in Dukas' life, and his widespread recognition as a composer dates from this year, in which he produced his symphonic scherzo, "L'Apprenti Sorcier," founded on a humorous ballad of the German poet, Goethe.

This work, one of his best known, also one of the most widely played of all his works, was personally conducted by Dukas at its premiere hearing, at a concert of the Societe Nationale. Critics were not slow to recognize that here was a real gem, brilliantly conceived, and eloquent with a mastery of orchestration. Dukas was accordingly heralded as one of France's foremost composers of the day, because of his distinctive individuality.

No doubt to a large extent as a result of the furore created by this work, Dukas was appointed Chevalier of the Legion of Honor in 1906, an honor awarded by France to her famous artists.

The longing to write operas had long been a cherished dream in Dukas' heart, and in 1907, this dream was materialized in the premiere of his operatic masterpiece, "Ariane et Barbe Bleu," suggested by the play of Maurice Maeterlinck and first performed at the Paris Opera Comique on May 10 of that year. The work was later given in Vienna, and in New York in 1911, and was the product of ten years of creative work.

This work, which was a real triumph, has been ranked with the "Pelleas and Melisande" of Debussy as one of the foremost masterpieces of French contemporary opera. In it the music is especially emphasized, with the libretto secondary in importance. The work is characterized by that inherent individuality that is Dukas' most outstanding feature, a vivid feeling for color and apt description, as well as symmetry of form. Dukas' mastery of orchestration is equally apparent in this work.

It is thus interesting to note that two years following this operatic triumph, Dukas was appointed professor of orchestration at the Paris Conservatory, a post he held for several years.

A poetical ballet, "La Peri," published by Dukas in 1911 was interpreted the following year at the Chatelet Theater in Paris by Mlle. Trouhanowa, noted Russian danseuse. The work, in reality a symphonic poem, was very imaginative and suggestive in style. Additional works include an appealing "Villanelle" for horn, also various piano works.

Dukas has done much valuable work in the revision of important works of the early French classicists, Rameau and Couperin. During recent years he has devoted diligent efforts to the composition of an elaborate symphonic work, based upon the famous "Tempest," by William Shakespeare.

Although Dukas does not hesitate to give Debussy much credit as an inspirational influence in the shaping of his own distinctive career, yet he has always maintained a marked independence of other composers. He has brought to the service of his art a fundamental honesty and conscientiousness that have been greatly responsible for his success.

Dukas has always had a great aversion to the adulation of the elite, and has instinctively craved the seclusion in which his talents were best fitted to unfold. He has avoided concert appearances and the popular applause craved by many lesser artists.

Dukas' musical criticisms have been highly valued by the French press and he has for many years been a valued contributor to the foremost French journals.

French authorities of the present day do not hesitate to term Dukas an especially important influence upon the evolution of current French music. To quote Henry Prunieres of Paris:

"Dukas' works have revealed to the modern school the rarest secrets instrumentation. His music is dazzling; delicate tones and rarest shades contrast with vigorous and warm brush-work in an irresistible wizardry of color. Dukas is a great artist, who knows how to create in the hearts of his audience that delightful unrest, that total abandonment to music's sway, which is the hall-mark of real creative genius."

BOOK REVIEWS

By MARY BURKE KING

Whither, Whither, or After Sex, What? —edited by Walter S. Hankel, published by The Macaulay Company.

In order that there will be no mistake about the purpose of this book, the editor has it stated on the title page: "A symposium to End Symposiums." One who has derived a considerable pleasure from symposiums may find it necessary to force himself to enloy this book at first.

There are really quite overwhelming bits of humor here and these and one appreciates them more in bits than in gulps.

Acknowledgement is made "to the Statue of Liberty whose constant patience and support sustained the contributors in their labors, and to Nicholas Cabozo, barber, for keeping the editor's hair out of his eyes while editing the contributions."

The book is a burlesque. Here and there it reverts to pure nonsense, and fittingly enough for one portion is in the chapter on literary criticisms. One of the very amusing chapters is "Coolidge: or the Future of History." The particular fun in that chapter is on the ex-President's five hundred word history. The author of this chapter denies the "dastardly rumor, now current, to the effect that the promoters of the Mt. Rushmore monument asked the president for a donation of words he examined his contract with one of our great magazines and said, 'Gentlemen, five hundred words is all I can spare.' While the debunkers of the future would no doubt love to seize upon such an ignoble origin for the greatest revolution in the history of history, we may here set the matter definitely at rest. Five hundred words were determined upon by the promoters before they approached President Coolidge; and the distinguished author showed his generosity by making most of the 500 words long ones." Trying to impress us with the importance of this revolutionary history this author says that a statistician is authority for the statement that "after the institution of the five hundred word history America will have four and a half centuries, every year!"

Those who have time for nonsense and are refreshed by it will find real joy in: "Whither, Whither, the Symposium to End Symposiums."

Consider the Consequences by Doris Webster and Mary Alden Hopkins. Published by The Century company.

"Consider the Consequences is a freak book. It suggests infinite possibilities. It is a dozen books rolled into one. It takes all point from the familiar quotation from the wife who was considering a Christmas present for her husband and said "he has a book," for this one book can readily become a dozen books. It is a puzzling book.

Now for the explanation of the all-inclusiveness of this book. It is by the authors of "I've Got Your Number," and "Mrs. Grundy Is Dead" which serves to signify something different. "Consider the Consequences" is absolutely something different from either of those others, however. The plan is that you start reading about Helen and her problem in choosing between two suitors, Jed Harringdals and Saunders Mead. A description of the characteristics and prospects of the two men is given. Then the reader is to make the choice for Helen. If the first course (marriage to Jed) is chosen, turn to paragraphs H-1. If the second course, turn to paragraphs H-2. Now having married Jed or Saunders, as the case may be, other possibilities are presented. In the case of Jed, Helen is confronted with a very domineering mother-in-law. Jed takes her home to live with the mother-in-law. The question is shall she put up with the situation or insist that they shall live by themselves. Then Jed dies. Shall Helen stay on with her mother-in-law in order to provide a home for her child, or shall she leave that home and make a more modest home for herself and her child.

If you select one course of action for Helen you are instructed to turn to such and such a paragraph. If you make the other choice for Helen you are instructed to read the other paragraphs. It will be seen from this sketchy outline that the book has infinite possibilities in reading and re-reading for after you have made certain choices for Helen you can go back and make other choices. Of course in the first instance there are only two choices, whether she shall marry Jed or Saunders, but there are four courses of action the next time so that section can be read four times, two for the choices if she had married Jed, two for the choices if she had married Saunders and the next time there are eight choices, which means eight readings from that point on. In fact to avoid confusion there is a diagram in the beginning of the book showing the choices so that one doesn't become lost and traverse the same ground twice, and one can check off those one has read. Curiosity as to what will happen to Helen if she made the other choice keeps one "glued to the pages."

The story of Helen is a bit simple but the plan suggests possibilities for more complicated tales. It is a book with which you can suit yourself. Who has not speculated what would have happened if a character in a book had not made this or that choice at this or that place? Here the authors have actually shown us what would have happened. It suggests infinite work for authors. Let them take the classics and develop this choice plan. By successive choices the book may be extended indefitely.

If you want to give somebody a library and can't afford to do so, give them this book "Consider the Consequences" and they will have a number of stories all compressed into 186 pages.

Roads to Roam, by Hoffman Birney, published by the Penn Publishing company.

"Roads to Roam" has an undeniable appeal because it is about places not far removed from ourselves, in fact the author comes as close as Los Angeles on his travels in his car "Betsy." He wasn't very well impressed in Los Angeles and its environs so we may feel just as glad that he didn't include Orange county in "Roads to Rome," for he is very critical.

There are several pages on Los Angeles. One paragraph serves to show the tenor: "Man—and what annoying creatures human beings can be—has done his best to spoil Los Angeles. Advertising of the Babbit, Rotary, Lions, George Creel, Chamber of Commerce and the hit 'em-between-the-eyes-with a two-by-four school has played hell with a natural charm and a beautiful location. Only if you look far beyond the handiwork of homo more-or-less sapience can you find anything of beauty in Los Angeles.

Mr. Birney, this author, is positive that at some future date the Boulder dam will go out. He firmly believes that it will prove impossible to harness the Colorado river. It may be pent up for a while, but eventually it will break loose and defy all man's efforts at control.

"Just as Fred Harvey," says the author, "exercises a benevolent despotism at Grand Canyon, an outfit known as the Yosemite Park-Curry company has a tail-hold on everything worth while in Yosemite. You find there none of the quiet ,effortless efficiency of El Tovar, however. The Curry company is to Fred Harvey (and Vic or Patrosso) as Child's or the Automat is to the Art Club or the Ritz-Carlong. This is not semi-Spanish, dolce far niente Arizona. This is California, land of promise and of speed.

From this it will be gathered that Mr. Birney is rather a dispeptic. But when he describes Reno and then apparently a city of the type he describes as Reno does not displease him one loses confidence in his judgment.

Those who have roamed much in the southwest will want to take this fellow on a tour. The feeling arises partly because everyone who has camped and slept under the stars and wandered from the beaten path has treasured in his memory this place and that place of exquisite beauty and charm, and other people's discoveries cannot replace the beauties one remembers for himself.

The Shadow of the Sword, by Hawthorne Daniel, published by MacMillan company.

Travelers to the northern part of France all know about the wonderful island of Mont Saint Michel, which is connected with the mainland by traversible sands when the tide is out but when the tide comes in an estuary surrounds the island. There is a most peculiar and terrible rush of water when the tide turns to run in. It comes in swiftly and with great force. A story told in the region about a band of gypsies who set out for the island from the mainland. Townspeople on the wall of St. Michel seeing them coming and knowing the tide was due tried to signal to them to go back, but they could not make them understand and the little band was all drowned.

It is the proud boast of the natives of the island that although all of northern France was captured by the English in the Hundred Years war between France and England, the English were never able to capture the island

Blue Jay

By Miss Carrie Jacobs

Beauty and the beast. That is what they tell us that the blue jay is. But let us believe that it does more good than bad. Let us learn to love it first and then if we do find that it does some wrong we can more easily forgive it.

If you know the blue jay and some one who does not know it were to ask you what it looked like you would be quite sure to say something like this: A big noisy blue bird with some black and white on it and a topknot or crest on its head.

Mr. Chapman, who knows the birds so well, tells it something like this: Upper parts grayish blue; under parts dusky whitish; a black band passing across the back of the head, down the sides of the neck and across the breast; head crested; wings blue, barred with black and some feathers tipped with white; bill and feet black.

Bluebirds are just about as scarce in this country as red ones. Since the blue jay and the redbird both spend the winter as well as summer with us, about as pretty a picture as one could wish to see is when these two birds are together, and the white snow covers everything; the red, the white, the blue, the colors that we love so well.

The blue jay is one of the birds that will come regularly to the feeding shelf or window sill if you will keep it supplied with peanuts or corn. Indeed it is the only way to keep it in the cities in winter, for it must have food and if it cannot get it from you or some neighbor it must go to the woods where it can find acorns.

It is a very interesting bird, yes, and a saucy one that likes to tease. It not only takes all the peanuts it wants to eat, but carries some away for a time coming when there may be none on the shelf. It will carry these nuts to the ground, lay them down, one in a place, pound a time or two with its bill and then pick up a few dried leaves or pieces of rubbish and cover them. You may watch it hide half a dozen nuts and think you have seen just where it put them. When you go to the places you will not be able to find three of the six. It will carry the nuts or nut kernels to a tree, place them in a crotch, pull off a few pieces of loose bark and cover them. Once a gray squirrel was seen to come to a large maple tree near the window sill where blue jays came morning after morning for their breakfast of peanuts and corn, calling if none had been put out the night before. The squirrel went carefully over the crotches of the tree smelling and digging out the nuts when it found them. Both the squirrel and blue jay plant many acorns and nuts when they think they are just hiding them and will come again and get them. They do come and get some, for they have been seen to do it, but many are forgotten and grow to be large trees in the years to come.

During the winter the jays are not so noisy unless one calls to its companions to come and come quickly. Then their jay, jay will ring out and you yourself will want to go out to see what is going on. They do talk in soft low whispers sometimes, even to themselves when no other jay is about. Some day in spring it will even surprise you by sitting quietly and humming a sweet little song, as sweet as the low sweet song of a canary bird, and quite as varied. You will not want to believe your own eyes that have seen the bill open and the throat fill out. Can it sing so sweetly and then send out from the same throat the coarse notes that sound like a creaking hinge, as the bird teeters its whole body upon its legs as if the sound was made by the squeading of the joints?

The noisy time comes in the spring. They are choosing nesting places and looking for material to build their nests with. They like a crotch of a tree near the trunk. The nest is made by sticks and rootlets closely woven. The eggs vary, but are greenish, either olive or bluish and thickly covered with brownish specks.

Spring is the blue jay's noisy time.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR COLORING

This should be a very interesting and also an easy subject to color. The sky should be a very light blue, the distant trees a warm blue gray, the foreground warm gray shaded with a little brown and green, the branch upon which the bird is perched should be brown and blending to a light green near the tip. The leaves are brown shaded with red and yellow. The acorns can be brown shaded with a little green and a touch of red. Now for the Blue Jay, most all of us know something about the beautiful colors of this bird; the breast is gray, the back is a light purple almost a blue, the wings and tail are blue with white and black streaks, the crown is light purple or blue, there is a black streak running around the head just back of the dark eye, below the eye and under the beak the feathers are gray, the beak is gray with a black tip. The feet are gray almost black. The bird flying near the bottom of the picture should be colored simiar to the one on the branch.

NEW FRANKLIN CAR DISPLAYED IN SANTA ANA

Revealing new beauty, smartness and comfort, more power and greater performance ability, the Series 15 air-cooled Franklin six for 1931 has arrived in Southern California, announces R. W. Townsend, Franklin dealer.

There are two models—the DeLuxe and Transcontinental, with wheelbases of 132 and 125 inches respectively. Both their appearance and mechanical advancements have been strongly influenced by airplane design, he stated. Each model has ten body types.

"The beauty of the Series 15 Franklins makes them outstanding in the fine car field," he declared. "Deitrich created the new bodies. The appeal of line and proportions of detail and fitments of color and trimmings smacks of the most exclusive and discriminating practice.

"Part of the beauty of this line lies in the sweep of the newly designed one-piece fenders, rakish slant of windshield, deeply crowned roof section and smart front extension. Width of the body accentuates the car's low-swung appearance. It has a wide chromium band on the hood front, plated shutters of satin finish, port type louvres and other smart exterior touches.

"One feature of the design is the manner in which the curves blend into a studied ensemble from whatever angle one looks at the car.

"Contours are shaped to minimize wind resistance. The car looks speedy. Airfoil fenders have a bird-like sweep that seems to give 'lift' to the car and make it appear to fairly fly.

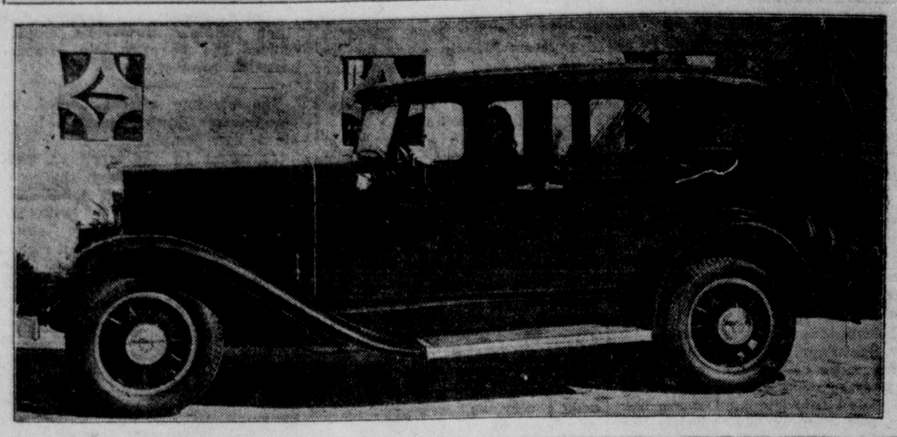

"Luxury is the keynote of every interior down to the smallest detail of trimmings and fitments. Due to the rear tread being widened to 60 inches, seats are wider than formerly, made deeper with higher backs to offer drawing-room comfort. Angles of the cushions are such that one relaxes completely. Riding in this Franklin is fairly like floating through the air. The finest of broadcloths, whipcords and other fabrics are employed for upholstery.

"The airplane feature is carried into the car's interior as the instrument board resembles that of the smartest sport aircraft. The panel is wide with the instruments standing out conspicuously so they are easily read.

Oiling operations on U. S. highway 91 (Arrowhead Trail) north of Crystal Station have been completed, and pavement is now continuous from Las Vegas to a point four miles beyond Glendale, reports the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

HERE'S NEW FRANKLIN MODEL

New beatuy and smartness is seen in the latest Franklin models now on display at the R. W. Townsend agency in Santa Ana. Many new features are seen in the new 1931 model Franklin in which luxury is the keynote throughout.

Longest Paved Road

Here is one of the scenic spots on the Pacific Highway, the longest paved road in the world, allowing all year round travel from Mexico to Canada. The car is a Buick eight sedan. Beautiful scenic spots can be found on this route in all three Pacific Coast States. Thousands have used the road so far this year and thousands more will use it before the year ends.

ROAD CONDITIONS OVER THE UNITED STATES DISCUSSED BY AUTOMOBILE ASSOCIATION

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 29.—Road conditions that hamper the motor touring caravan of the nation, causing loss of time, congestion and in many instances acting as travel hazards, received a thorough airing at the recent annual meeting in Washington of the advisory committee to the National Touring Board of the American Automobile association.

The committee, which consists of touring experts of A. A. A. motor clubs throughout the country, and which W. G. Bryant, well known attorney of Detroit, Mich., heads as chairman of the national touring board, made its indictment of so-called "touring nuisances" on the basis of complaints registered by thousands of motorists during the last touring season.

Among the conditions cited in the ban of the travel experts were:

1. Lack of uniformity in traffic regulations with particular stress on the constant changes in speed rules and the requirements as to the left-hand turn from village to village, town to town, city to city, and state to state.
2. Traffic lights that have sprung up in thousands of small towns and suburban sections.
3. Failure of many cities to mark through highways or to designate belt lines around congested urban areas.
4. Compelling motorists to use freshly oiled and tarred roads.
5. The presence on main traveled highways of a multitude of advertising signs imitating danger and direction signs.

JEFFERS IS GIVEN GOODRICH AD JOB

R. E. Jeffers, merchandising manager of the Pacific Goodrich Rubber Company, has just been placed in charge of advertising and sales promotion activities of that organization.

Mr. Jeffers has been connected with Pacific Goodrich about two years. His first assignment was in the sales and merchandising department of the Los Angeles Goodrich Branch.

A native Texan, Mr. Jeffers came to California in 1917. He enlisted in the army and was sent to Camp MacArthur. After the war, he returned to Los Angeles. He has been identified with the rubber industry more than twelve years.

In his new work he will be assisted by A. L. Fullwood of the Pacific Goodrich advertising department and Ed Johnson, who has been assigned to sales promotion work. Mr. Johnson was formerly connected with the Seattle branch of the Pacific Goodrich Company.

SPEED RECORD AGAIN SOUGHT BY CAMPBELL

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 29.—Capt. Malcolm Campbell, British speed ace, who established a world's land record of 206.956 miles per hour at Daytona Beach, Fla., in 1928, only to see it twice shattered, has advised the Contest Board of the American Automobile Association that he intends to return to this country early in 1931 for an attempt to regain his laurels.

In announcing that Capt. Campbell has formerly applied for an official sanction for a new assault on the existing record of 231.362 miles per hour, established at Daytona Beach by the late Sir H. O. D. Seagrave in 1929, the governing body of racing declared that there is every indication that other record attempts will be made.

"Daytona Beach is at present the logical place for these runs," and the Contest Board, "and while plans for the 1931 speed carnival have not been approved, reports from Florida are to the effect that elaborate preparations are being made for the speed tests between January 1 and February 15.

"There is also evidence of renewed interest in these speed trials in other sections of the country and investigations are now being made to ascertain the facilities of these places. However, Daytona Beach is the proven place for present attempts to create new world's records, which would mean a speed of around 250 miles per hour."

The A. A. A. Contest Board is the American representative of the International Sporting Commission, under whose aegis all international records are certified.

AUTO DEATHS MORE THAN IN YEAR 1929

Motor vehicle fatalities in the United States for the first nine months of the year were two per cent above the same period in 1929, which was by far the worst year since the automobile became a factor in our national accident record, according to figures reaching the Automobile Club of Southern California.

The report is based on figures representing areas containing about 50 per cent of the nation's population.

The winter racing at Agua Caliente will be from Christmas day to March 29, inclusive, according to information received by the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

STATE POLICE DRIVE AGAINST 'ONE EYE' CARS

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 29.—(Special)—Determined to drive vehicles operating without tail lights and "one-eyed" cars from the highways, state highway traffic patrolmen will work from now until December 10th on a special schedule involving extra hours of duty.

Members of the day patrol are working one hour later each day while the night patrolmen start one hour earlier. This provides a double patrol during the "twilight hours" between 5 and 7 p. m., a period when poor lights cause numerous accidents because of half-daylight, half-dark conditions.

Frank G. Snook, chief of the Division of Motor Vehicles, announces that headlight raids during the period will be confined entirely to those cars being operated with no tail light or with only one headlight.

The officers have been instructed by H. R. Youngblood, assistant superintendent of the patrol, to adhere strictly to the order issued some time ago and refuse permission to drivers of cars without tail lights and "one-eyed" cars to proceed until such lights have been repaired.

Of the several thousand cars with such lights rounded up within the last three weeks, Snook stated it was found in 90 per cent of the cases that the trouble could be repaired in less than five minutes.

This, Snook declared, indicates a wanton carelessness on the part of many drivers toward their lights and an utter disregard of the lives of others.

WATCH OUT FOR IGNITION WIRES DURING WINTER

Watch the condition of the ignition wires during the rainy season, is a suggestion made by the emergency road service department of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

With the arrival of the fall rains, thousands of cars are out of commission by worn and chaffed wires becoming wet and causing a short circuit. When this difficulty occurs on the road it may necessitate an inconvenient delay which easily could have been avoided by seeing that the wires were in good shape. Ignition trouble, says the club, is the leading cause of cars becoming stalled on the highways during the winter.

ANNOUNCE NEW LINCOLN CAR IN N. Y. TODAY

A new Lincoln automobile of surpassing appearance, greater power and more alert performance is announced by the Lincoln Motor company. With the superb new bodies and chassis, the new car ushers in a new age in luxurious transportation. An outstanding feature is the new free-wheeling transmission.

The first public showing of the new Lincoln is to be made at the Automobile salon which opens tonight at the Hotel Commodore, New York city. The car will be exhibited by Lincoln dealers throughout the country the latter part of December.

The new Lincoln has a 145-inch wheelbase chassis which hugs the road and has amazing roadability. The extremely roomy bodies are graceful and fleet of line. The new engine is exceptionally responsive and 33 per cent more power than any previous Lincoln.

Seven of the nation's leading custom coach builders are exhibiting 12 bodies upon Lincoln chasses at the salon, having given preference to the Lincoln because of its excellence and also because of the wide latitude it offers for the exercise of creative design.

BROADCAST FOR CHEVROLET ON AIR SATURDAY

From the Boxer Uprising to Vera Cruz, where he acted as a human decoy to draw the fire of Mexican guns, is the range of experiences to be related by Lieut. John McCloy, retired, who is the first navy man to appear in the patriotic series known as the "Chevrolet Chronicles," to be broadcast locally by station KFSD on Thursday, December 4, at 8:00 p. m.

Lieut. McCloy is one of the few men to receive the Medal of Honor, highest of government awards for extraordinary valor in action on the high seas, twice within a lifetime. The details surrounding his two citations will be described by Lieut. McCloy in his time on the air in the half-hour program sponsored by local Chevrolet dealers, and interspersed with musical numbers directed by Frank Black and Gustave Haenschen.

Lieut. McCloy's first citation, dated July 19, 1901, concerns events a year earlier when he, then a coxswain in the U. S. Navy, formed a part of the allied forces sent to China to subdue brigands and bandits in the Boxer rebellion. His story here is one of battles against tremendous odds—at one time only ten men against 3,000 Boxers; again 2,000 standing off an entire Boxer army.

Awarding of the second medal was, the official citation says, "For distinguished conduct in battle and extraordinary heroism in engagement at Vera Cruz, April 22, 1914. Led a flotilla of three picket launches mounting one-pounders along the sea front of Vera Cruz in front of the naval school and customs house. The launches drew the combined fire of the Mexicans in that vicinity and thus enabled the cruisers to shell them out temporarily and save our men on shore. His conduct was eminent and conspicuous and although shot through the thigh during this fire, he remained at his post as beach master for 48 hours until sent to a hospital ship by the brigade surgeon."

Lieut. McCloy also served in the West Indies and the Philippines, and won the Naval Cross with the mine sweeping fleet in the North Sea. In addition, he has been officially cited for his skilful navigation of ships in dangerous waters and for saving life and property.

Widening operations will be encountered on the Generals highway in Sequoia National park between Hospital Rock and Giant Forest, according to a report received by the touring department of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

It is also claimed that the proceedings were abandoned but that their fees are due and unpaid. They seek judgment for $4251.29.

Jacques also is plaintiff in two other complaints for similar services, one in connection with El Prado avenue, for which he claims $2397.95, and the other in connection with Plata avenue, for which he claims $1760.18.

76.18 MILES to the gallon of straight-run Economy Gasoline! Natural driving on travelled highways, observing all traffic regulations. A truthful test in every respect using standard Indian Scout motorcycle, picked at random from the Indian Motorcycle Sales Company's floor. What Economy did in this small motor is an indication of the more-miles-to-the-dollar you can expect if this straight-run gasoline is in your car.

The amazing mileage produced by Economy Gasoline in this demonstration will not be a surprise to those 40,000 motorists who buy Economy Gasoline daily. It is no secret that a straight-run gasoline is far superior in any motor. For straight-run means a concentrated gasoline... the "top layer," the cream gasoline which is run off first in the process of crude oil refining. And with this concentration comes tremendous power, flashing speed, alert starting as well as more-miles-to-the-dollar.

Economize with Economy Gasoline... at the green pump in independent stations. Be assured that Economy is as pure and safe a motor fuel as can be produced. And every dollar you spend for Economy Gasoline stays at home since it is produced by a strictly California refiner and sold by California Independents.

Growers Warned To Watch Moisture In Orchards

DAIRY FACTS PRESENTED IN RADIO SPEECH

BY EDWIN C. VOORHIES
Giannini Foundation of Agricultural Economics

During the past year certain important changes have been taking place in the dairy industry in the endeavor to be modern and up-to-the-minute. "Past year" is used because it was just a year ago this very month that butter prices in the west began to slip.

1. The world situation. Can we not dispose of the world situation in a few sentences? At the present time we are protected by a high tariff wall, virtually possessing the area within these walls as a market for most of our dairy products. We still import considerable quantities of cheese and export sizable quantities of concentrated milk—mainly to the far east. Considering our total production of dairy products our foreign trade is small. But to get back to our question—"What are we going to do about it?" It seems to me that even the most enthusiastic dairyman would not look with an over supply of hope for placing products on the high seas for export to fogeign countries when the present world price of butter is in the neighborhood of 29 cents. Export in butter will undoubtedly continue but as at present it will be the export of a quality product.

Situation in U. S.

2. The situation in the United States. Although the title of this paper is "Recent Trends in the Dairy Industry" it seems to me that the dairymen are more interested in "What are you going to do about it?" In the United States the number of animals used for milk purposes on January 1, 1930, exceeded the number a year previous by over two and one-half per cent. In addition, the number of heifers in the United States was six per cent more numerous on January 1, 1930, than they were a year previously. These are two of the trends I do not like, because it appears that unless dairy herds are closely culled and more of the less desirable heifers are sent to slaughter, there will be a further increase of milk cows. In passing it must be admitted that the steady upward trend in the prices of dairy cattle, which culminated last year, was due in parat to the high beef cattle prices prevailing.

The demand for certain dairy products is evidently not as strong today as it was. For several years, from 1918 through 1926 there was a distinct upward trend in the per capita consumption of all dairy products. This increase in per capita consumption kept ahead of per capita production. For the first time in several years, in 1927 consumption failed to forge ahead. In this instance I am speaking of the total consumption of dairy products. Even though there was a slight falling off, production fell off and the demand continued to be fairly strong though 1928. Then came 1929. Conditions apparently were satisfactory until the last few months of the year. May I call your attention at this point to this fact—which I do not wish you to overlook. Taking the year 1929 as a whole, it was the banner year—at least since 1916—for the per capita consumption of butter, cheese, concentrated milk and ice cream.

Production Up

I have an idea that not all of the dairy agencies were asleep. But during 1929 with the apparent increase in the number of animals came an increase in the total production of milk. This made for larger supplies of butter, cheese, concentrated milk and ice cream, and the public took more, but at the same time supplies began to pile up faster than they were consumed. In passing it may be interesting to note that butter production during 1929 was 4.8 per cent larger than during 1928; cheese 10.6 per cent, concentrated milk 15.0 per cent and ice cream 8.8 per cent. True, people consumed more, but supplies of the semi-perishables began to plie p so that insofar as storage supplies go 1929 was a banner year. It is needless to discuss what happened—everyone in the dairy business knows. May I call your attention to this fact, if I overlook it later on. All classes of commodities dropped. In September 84.2 centsc would purchase what it required 97.5 cents to purchase in September 1929.

Let us get down to the most recent happenings—in 1930. Information at best is rather meager. The best which we possess indicates that insofar as butter, cheese and concentrated milk are concerned there has been a considerable fall in production compared with last year, with a slight falling off in consumption. Storage holdings have again been high this year, but at the present time conditions appear to be slightly more favorable this year than they were last.

No Great Change

What can we say about trends in our own state? Insofar as numbers of cows kept for milk are concerned, there does not seem to have been any great change, even during 1929. There has been a tendency, which has been apparent for many dairymen to keep more heifers. True even now dairymen go outside of the state to obtain replacements of herds. I believe that in spite of present conditions in the price marts of the dairy industry I can safely say that there is going to continue to be a demand for high producing disease free cows.

A word about the production and consumption of dairy products in California. For at least a decade in this state there has been a definite trend in the way in which our butterfat is utilized. Every year sees a larger relative amount of the fat being used in the higher priced dairy products—market milk and cream, ice cream and concentrated milk—and a lesser percentage being used in butter and cheese. So far, so good. With this, however, comes a real danger. Especially with market milk does this danger loom large. At present in the west the production of market milk is confined within of 200 miles or less of the center of comsumption. This advantage at times works at a disadvantage. It can be seen how readily the equilibrium between the production and consumption of market milk can be upset—and as members of this group well know, it has been upset. In spite of what has happened and is happening, if you believe that the population of California will continue to increase, you will believe that the trend in the utilization of milk in this state will continue. Before we leave production—if you agree thus far, you must expect the production of butter and cheese to become relatively less important within the confines of California. There is no harm in this.

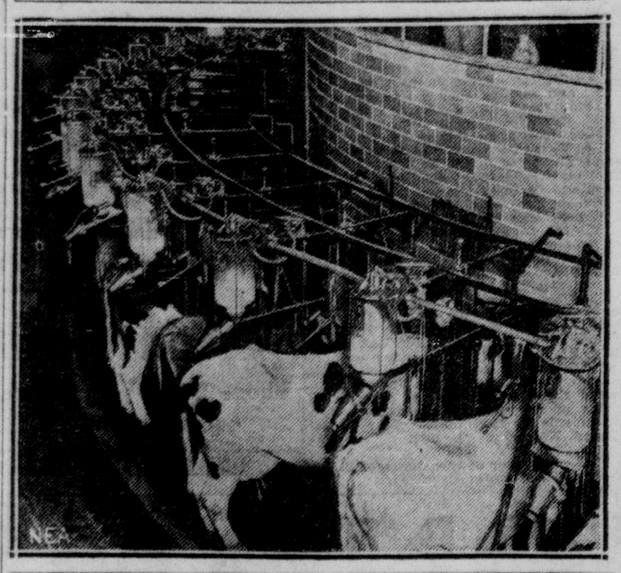

Consumption Gains

A word about consumption might not be amiss in this connection. In this state, as in the nation, per capita consumption was on increase through 1926 and even through 1927. But in 1928 and 1929 a decrease was registered in butter and market milk consumption. There seems to be little doubt in the minds of most of us that the depression of the last year was in a way partially responsible, but that seems to be the popular thing to pin most everything on at the present time. It used to be the war. May I also call your attention to the fact that in this state the per capita consumption of butter substitutes has been increasing at a rapid rate and in this state the per capita consumption is much higher than it is in the nation.

Even if present production keeps up we will have to do one of two things, increase consumption, or decrease production if we desire prices to rise. Yes, we could do both. The question of how can we do it arises. It seems to me that one of the most helpful and decidedly worthwhile methods can be brought into being by the extension of our California idea of calling together representatives of the dairy industry to other sections of the country. The dairy industry can be righted if only the proper influences and information go out. Just like business, the industry will right itself because most men do not milk cows for mere pleasure, but the quicker the righting process comes, the better it will be for all concerned.

MILKS 50 COWS TOGETHER

The pretty milkmaid of days gone by has been given a setback by a machine which milks 50 cows simultaneously. Perfected by H. W. Jeffers, at Plainsboro, N. J., it consists of a 60-foot revolving platform on which the 50 cows are arranged. The animals are first bathed and then automatic milkers go to work. A section of the milking stand is shown here. Note how each cow's production can be measured in the glass receiving measures.

DAIRYMEN TO HOLD SESSION ON DECEMBER 3

Dairymen and friends of the industry are invited to participate in a field day scheduled for December 3, beginning at John Jansma's dairy, one-fourth mile south of Paularino school on Newport road, at 10:30 a. m. Here opportunity will be given to see the highest butterfat producing cow last year in the cow testing association. This herd also won first place in its class in butterfat production. Opportunity will be given here to inspect this modern and up-to-date plant.

Following the noon hour several speakers will appear on the program, including G. E. Gordon, extension dairy specialist of the University of California, and Dr. J. P. Iverson, division of animal industry, state department of agriculture, and others. Cups won in the cow competition classes will be awarded by the chairman of the dairy department, William Segerstrom.

The day's program will conclude with the election of directors for the coming year.

Mexico Wars On Fruit Fly Pest

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 29.—Investigation by the Mexican government to determine the extent of infestation of two of its most serious crop pests were revealed here today by Dr. E. Coppel Rivas, in charge of fruit fly investigation for the southern republic.

Survey to determine spread of the Mexican fruit fly already has been inaugurated and backed by regulations prohibiting transportation of infested fruit into the northwestern states, according to Dr. Rivas, who was in Sacramento for consultation with officials of the state department of agriculture.

Similarly investigation of the extent of pink bollworm of cotton is in progress. Upon results of these surveys will depend decision regarding contral of eradication measures which may be understaken with regard to either pest, Dr. Rivas said.

BEANS

About 20,000,000 bushels of dry beans are produced on 1,900,000 acres in the United States annually. The crop is produced by 14 states, led by Michigan and California. Last year the total crop had a farm value of $73,000,000.

CANADIAN FRUIT

Commercial fruit production in Canada last year had a value of $19,591,240, of which Ontario accounted for $8,656,097; British Columbia, $6,766,550; Nova Scotia, $2,830,088; Quebec $1,145,846 and New Brunswick $192,659.

FIRST CARLOAD OF CALAVOS ON WAY TO TEXAS

The first carload of calavos for the current season of 1930-31 has been shipped to the eastern markets. It was routed via Dallas, Texas, for partial unloading at the Dallas branch of the Calavo Growers of California. It will then be forwarded to the Chicago branch of the exchange and reshipment made from there to the New York office.

The largest crop in the history of the industry is in full swing. Elaborate plans have been made for its marketing by the growers' co-operative marketing exchange. These plans include the opening of two additional branch offices, one at San Francisco, and one at Dallas, Texas. Calavo Growers of California, in addition to the main office at Los Angeles, now has a branch office in New York, Chicago, San Francisco and Dallas. Shipments will be made to these branch offices in carlot quantities during the height of the calavo season. An authorized calavo distributor has been appointed in every city of 50,000 population and over. They in turn will be assisted in their efforts to put over the calavo deal by a corps of dealer service men trained in the general office for the Calavo Growers at Los Angeles.

REPORT SHOWS FARMPRICES AT LOW LEVEL

BY J. F. McLAUGHLIN
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
(Special to The Register)

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 29.—Farm products during the past two months have hit the lowest price level since 1916, according to a statement by the state department of agriculture.

Although prices of all commodities are down, unfortunately the prices of farm products at the farm have fallen faster and farther than the general price level or the prices of many other products, the report said.

"From August, 1929, to August, 1930, the average of prices at the entire country fell 14 per cent, and retail prices of things which farmers have to buy declined but four per cent," the survey found.

"In general, prices of raw materials have declined more than the prices of manufactured products. The prices of some products have broken partly as the result of overproduction and the accumulation of large stocks to be sold in the face of a general depression. This is notably true of coffee, sugar and wheat. The decline in manufacturing demand is particularly important in the case of wool, cotton and silk."

FOREST TRAVEL RESTRICTIONS ARE REMOVED

Vacationists and Sunday excursionists will welcome the news that travel restrictions have been removed from the Cleveland National forest area. Word to this effect was received today at the farm advisor's office from H. R. Valentine, federal forest ranger, in charge of this district.

During the summer and fall months the mountain area must be closed to travel because of the attendant danger of fire. As soon as rains lessen this hazard the forest areas are again opened to travel.

The Santa Ana mountains are an attraction to excursionists all over the south. With the building of motorways for fire protection purposes many new and attractive drives are made available. Those traversing the motorways are cautioned to use care as these roads are narrow and steep in places. They were built at a minimum expense to open up as much country as possible to fire trucks in the event of necessity. Travelers will not find the wide smooth roads that they have been accustomed to here in the south.

State Range Feed Improved By Rain

SACRAMENTO, Nov. 29.—Next year's beefsteaks and lamb chops now "on the hoof" are in good condition, while California range feed was greatly improved by the recent rains, according to a report of the California Crop Reporting service here this week.

The condition of cattle and sheep on western ranges is generally good, the report said. In California, supplemental feeding of stock cattle has started in dry sections. Some seasonal stock cattle inshipments have begun, but will not be heavy until after the general rains. Early lambing is under way, and supplies of dry feeds for winter are adequate where needed.

Over 350 Silent Movies Made By U. S. Office In Washington

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29.—Uncle Sam maintains and directs a modern movie colony here for making films with which to educate American farmers. Silent pictures have been produced by the hundreds in the studios of the U. S. Department of Agriculture and now the office of motion pictures hopes to branch into the talkie field.

The present equipment is the latest word in silent picture apparatus. A small staff is employed to enact roles and do the actual "shooting." Pictures are produced in such a manner that a lesson is conveyed in each. Some 350 have been produced since the deparment opened.

With the advent of talkies, however, the office of motion pictures believes that the idea behind each film release can be more forcibly driven home by appealing to the ear as well as the eye.

"The possibilities of the talking picture in educational work are such that educators are evincing more interest in talkies than they have ever shown in silent pictures," Raymond Evans, chief of the motion picture office, says.

"In a talkie, a scientist or economist who has an important finding to put before the public can, in effect, be put face to face with those to whom the finding is of most interest and in many parts of the country at the same time. Excellent effects can be obtained by the use of a running spoken commentary in connection with animated maps and diagrams, and musical scoring can be used to good advantage to add to the effectiveness of old, silent pictures."

OCEANVIEW

OCEANVIEW, Nov. 29. — The Thanksgiving spirit was exhibited this week at the Oecanview school when in connection with Thanksgiving plans made by the local Parent-Teacher association the children of the school brought thank offerings of food, clothing and other necessities of life that they might be divided among others of the community.

As a result 10 big boxes were received for the purpose on Wednesday. Members of the P.-T. A. acted as bearers of the Thanksgiving cheer provided by the children.

The pupils of the school gave a delightful Thanksgiving program at the school on Wednesday afternoon prior to the closing of the school.

Mrs. Moulton and Mrs. Tracy of the factulty were in charge of program arrangements and each class took part with a special feature. Divided into four parts the program was as follows:

First, demonstration, "Unfriendly Indians," the story by Miss Susan Russell's room; "The Pilgrims Going to Church," given by Miss Rosenbaulm's room. Part two, "Friendly Indians," and showing preparations for the first Thanksgiving feast, by Miss Wilenae Adams' room, and the preparation of the feast and invitation to the Indians, by Mrs. Payne's fourth grade. Part three, "The Feast on the iFrst Thanksgiving Day," by Mrs. Russell Roos, and Miss Shonenberg's primary classes. Part four, the Modern Thanksgiving, Mr. GeBauer and Mrs. Moulton's seventh and sixth grade pupils. The program closed with a song by the entire assemblage.

A meeting of the executive body of the Oceanview P.-T. A. was held at 1 o'clock Wednesday afternoon preceding the school program and several matters of importance were taken up.

Plans for the P.-T. A. study circle were made, it being decided to hold the study on the first Friday of each month, the first to be held December 5 at 2 o'clock at the home of the P.-T. A. president, Mrs. C. E. Gilmore The study will be held at a private home each month. The leader for the circle has not yet been chosen.

Plans for Christmas were talked over and some of the arrangements made for December 18, the closing day of school, for the two weeks holiday.

Mrs. J. T. Holt, benevolence chairman of the local P.-T. A., asked that all who can to come to the school next Wednesday at which time the women will sew for the needy These gatherings are to be held each month. One o'clock is the hour set to meet.

Miss Frn Feaster, whose home is in Eaglerock, left Wednesday evening to spend the time with her family. Miss Rosenbaulm and Mr. Bebauer went to their respective homes in Los Angeles, Miss Schonenberg, whose home is in Santa Ana, is spending her vacation there. Mrs. Tracy and Mr. Tracy left Wednesday evening for San Gabriel canyon, where relatives from El Monte were spending the vacation at their cabin, returning home Thursday evening.

SOIL AUGER IS SUGGESTED BY FARM ADVISOR

By H. E. WAHLBERG
County Farm Advisor

The recent dry desert winds have caused an unusual evaporation and transpiration stress on all vegetation, particularly evergreen trees like the citrus. Not only was transpiration of moisture through the foliage great, but the escape of moisture from the surface soil was considerably increased during the period of the wind. The movement of moisture through plants is accelerated many times during the stress of a windstorm—almost in proportion to the velocity of the wind. Of course, temperature and humidity also are factors in moisture losses. The recent wind was not especially dry or of high humidity. Its force and velocity were the chief factors in causing the damage to orchards and other properties.

A hurried survey through the orchards of the county shows that less twig burning occurred this time than usual, but considerable wind whipping causing bruised fruit was evidenced. The amount of windfall fruit will not be missed in this year's crop. The industry will probably welcome this forced reduction in the crop. If it would have been done without the accompanying wind injury to the fruit left on the trees, the wind would have been considered an economic advantage.

If the orchard has been recently irrigated, the moisture content of the average soil will still be in a satisfactory condition. A number of orchards are showing a tendency towards dryness in the upper root zone. An irrigation is desirable in such groves, the amount of water to be applied depending on the depth of dryness. In a light soil comparatively dry an inch of water will penetrate from 10 to 14 inches; in a medium soil 6 to 10 inches and in a heavy soil 3 to 6 inches. To wet an ordinary loam soil that is dry to a depth of two feet will require about 4 inches of water or the equivalent to 4 inches of rainfall in one storm.

The recent dry hot spells together with the winds of last week have retarded fruit sizing. Orchards that are supplied with good moisture conditions will suffer less from the above conditions than orchards with unfavorable soil moisture.

The growth of fruit will be enhanced by meeting moisture deficiencies in the soil now. Care should be taken not to go to the other extreme, on the other hand, and soak ground that is already wet. The best rule to go by is put water on dry ground only. If the roots have dried the soil down only 16 inches, put enough water on to wet the soil 16 inches deep as near as possible. If the root zone is dry down three feet, then put on a heavier irrigation.

Now is a good time to use the soil auger to ascertain irrigation requirements.

FRENCHMEN SEEK NAME FOR FRUIT

PARIS, Nov. 29.—(INS) — The humble yellow grapefruit came in for a heated discussion under the dome made famous by Napoleon recently. It is not often that the meetings of the serious members of the French Academy for the purpose of revising the dictionary are marked by exciting incidents, but the last one was the exception.

Should it be the American grapefruit or the French "pamplemousse" that would find its way into the big book of words? This was the center of the fight. The forty Immortals weighed both of them heavily and argued their respective merits.

A well known lawyer, Henri-Robert, was decidedly in favor of "Pamplemousse," declaring that it evoked sweet dreams in faraway exotic islands, while grapefruit—"why, grapefruit actually gives me the itch!"

"Pamplemousse! It is a delicious word," said Georges Lecomte, French poet. "It speaks to the spirit, to the imagination and if you are at all sensitive to harmony, you will find it far superior to any other synonym."

Since the majority would not agree to the proposed change, "pamplemousse" remains "pamplemousse' 'and not grapefruit in the dictionary that stands for the highest pudity of the French language.

WESTMINSTER

WESTMINSTER, Nov. 29.—Paul Nearing, son-in-law of Mrs. W. L. Porter, left for the north Tuesday morning and Mrs. Nearing is staying with her mother in his absence. Mr. and Mrs. Nearing recently came here from San Francisco and have been located at San Pedro.

Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Chamberlin motored to Palmdale, spending a day with Mr. Chamberlin's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. McNutt.

DAIRY INDUSTRY PROGRESS IS SEEN

Prosperity for the dairy industry depends upon advancement of a general program of public health, according to speakers at the annual convention of California dairy council, in Oakland, which has just closed.

The wider the knowledge of human nutrition, the greater will be the use of dairy products. Therefore, in outlining a program of activities for the year, it was decided to give every possible assistance to health education programs in the schools and colleges and to co-operate closely with the men, women and organizations that are engaged in nutrition research and extension work, it was declared.

W. J. Higdon of Tulare was elected president, succeeding E. W. Lott of El Centro. The vice president is G. S. Perham, of Burlingame. Sam H. Green, of San Francisco, was re-elected secretary-manager.

Spain Also Becoming Americanized

Skyscrapers, good telephones, subways, Yankee autos and many other modern conveniences make Madrid Europe's most American city, though all the revolutionists seeking to establish a republic seem to have been beaten

By MILTON BRONNER

The new building of the American-managed Spanish telephone company of Madrid . . . carries along some of the Moorish tradition in architecture . . . but in the main it would suggest America far more strongly than the picturesque Castille of the poets.

MADRID.

SPANISH senoritas don't follow the example of Juliet Capulet and meet their lovers on the balcony now. They go to the movies with them instead.

For romance in Spain isn't a troubadour with a nice love song any longer. It's a young man with an automobile. An American automobile at that.

The date to go to the movie is probably made over an American-modeled telephone. If the young man in the case isn't fortunate enough to own an automobile, he takes his lady-love on a subway.

For Spain has gone American on a grand scale. Madrid has earned the name of being the only American city in Europe. There isn't any Castilian peace here. Just New York restlessness. And nobody loiters. People have to work to keep the town growing.

There is the Alcala, an up-to-date business avenue, and a new street, Gran via, the Grand street, which is the finest retail business street in Europe. Most of the buildings range from seven to nine stories, and the luxury trades fill the first story with shops just as they do in the American metropolis. There are three new movie houses, too. There is an 18-story skyscraper and a 15-story building for the Press Club, second only to that in Washington.

Even the traffic is handled in the American manner. You hear the ring of an electric bell and there is the familiar American machinery —green to go ahead, yellow to get set for a change, red to stop.

But if you keep right on going, you will come to a palace with a row of guards in smart green uniforms with black patent leather hats, and incidentally discover that a king lives in the palace, in spite of the Americanized spirit.

For Spain, advanced though she is in other fields, still clings to the modern version of the old divine right of rulership. King Alfonso XIII seems to be sitting fairly safely on his gilded throne, and he's just as interested as his subjects in bringing his country up to the western mark.

AFTER six years of dictatorship by the late General Primo Rivera, the king dismissed him and made General Berenguer premier. Now the men who opposed Rivera and ran to escape prison sentences, or voluntarily exiled themselves, are coming back. The country is still without its Cortes, the national parliament, and the press is still being censored.

There are rumors now and then that Spain is considering a revision of the Spanish constitution in such a way that the monarch will not be permitted to exercise any further dictatorship or personal kingly power. Senor Alba, former Spanish cabinet minister, who has been an exile in Paris since the coup d'etat which made the late Primo de Rivera Spain's dictator, is said to have told Alfonso that Spain needed this change, and added some interesting remarks to the effect that if His Majesty wasn't willing to become "life president of Spain," he might discover that he had no excuse for living in the palace at all.

The exiled minister further explained there was an alternative which concerns a constitution on democratic lines which would leave Alfonso smiling on his throne in the same figurehead fashion that King George holds in the British government.

BUT King Alfonso has plenty of help in holding his crown on his head. Big Business doesn't want it to slip. A disturbance would hinder advancement.

The Spanish Grandees who surround the throne, like the idea of a king in the palace. They receive more favors.

The Roman Catholic Church favors the monarchy. So does the army. And the 25,000 soldiers who wear the green and black in the Civic Guard are picked men.

The large majority of the people are peasant farmers, 50 per cent of whom are illiterate. They don't care who rules so long as their sons don't have to go across the water again to fight in the mountains of Morocco.

This condition makes it rather hard on the politicians, Socialists and students who can't get the idea across that a republic would be a divine sort of millennium.

Just now the increased American tariff is making Spanish officials realize just how much they have been depending on America. Imports are going to be considerably more expensive for the people in the land of the matadors.

Raw cotton, automobiles and automotive accessories, petroleum and its by-products, films, cameras, photograph discs, machinery, and leaf tobacco all bear the American label. In return America receives cork, olive oil and olives, almonds, hides and skins, copper bars, quicksilver, paprika, and peppers.

Before the World War, British and German business were rather firmly entrenched in Spain. Today America has crowded them to one side. American business offices make the tourist forget that he isn't strolling down the Main Street of his favorite city.

The British palate has cultivated a fondness for sherry wine, which makes England strong in sherry-producing districts. France is engaged in some of the luxury trades.

The Germans are still numerically the strongest foreign contingent, due in part to the fact that Spain did not participate in the World War, and therefore has no hymn of hate.

THERE aren't so many Americans in Spain when you count them. But their influence has been at work. Everywhere there are automobile agencies, and three out of every five handle American products. Seventy per cent of the Spanish people are rolling down the avenues and country roads in America's favorite makes.

All in all, Spain is a better customer of the United States than the other way around. The chief reason for this is that Spain is a big consumer of American cotton, which constitutes more than half of her purchases from America.

When it comes to cities Madrid isn't the only one which has acquired much of the American manner, even if it does boast the tallest skyscraper in Europe, one that towers 180 feet high.

Barcelona and Seville are competing for American laurels. Madrid has a modern subway system which assists in moving her 900,000 people, but Barcelona has one equally as fine for her 900,000 residents.

Spain has taken to the subway idea readily. America, for all her progress, only has three such systems—New York, Boston and Philadelphia. England, France and Germany have only one apiece, located in London, Paris and Berlin respectively. But Spain, for all her proverbial slowness, has speeded up and has two.

King Alfonso XIII is one of the big stock owners of the Madrid system. The king is interested in big business. Carefully advised by a couple of Marquises, who are big Madrileno bankers, the royal finger helps to bake a good many pies that are concerned with more than a mere signature on a paper of state.

Unusual picture taken during a fiesta near Seville. . . . But observe the dress of the girl whose figure has been made to stand out. . . . She is typical of the intrusion of Americanism among the old Spanish customs.

Barcelona is the commercial, manufacturing and importing metropolis of Spain. Sometimes it is called the Spanish Chicago.

The Barcelona citizen proudly explains that he is a Catalan and speaks contemptuously of the dandies of Madrid and the idlers of Seville. He tells you that his district pays more taxes than any other part of Spain. For years the province of Catalonia tried to separate from the rest of Spain, or to secure a large measure of local autonomy, so the taxes could be spent at home.

Seven and eight-story business and apartment houses line the brand-new Avenue Alfonso XIII, adding another modern touch.

BARCELONA, which is the great seaport, just as Chicago is the great railway center for America, has another American touch. Just a few years ago Barcelona was terror-stricken by its pistoleros. They were mainly anarchist workmen who had declared warfare on the bosses. They had a disturbing habit of assassinating great industrial leaders or dropping bombs at inconvenient times. The late Dictator Rivera and his lieutenants put the pistoleros out of business.

Barcelona is a great factory city. The cotton textile industry leads. More than 100,000 persons operate 2,000,000 spindles which consume American cotton. Metallurgical pursuits, flour milling, sugar refining, shoe manufacture, leather making and chemical factories give employment to the rest of the working people. The wages run from 75 cents to $1.80 an eight-hour day, which is a higher scale than that prevailing in other sections of Spain.

Most European cities and villages still follow the medieval system of handmade products to a large extent, people sitting in the doors of their homes and making lace and carving wood, but Spain, and especially Barcelona, has got away from this.

Barcelona has done another American stunt on the Chicago order. She has put on the first big exposition that Europe has had since the World War, which followed the order of the one put on in America back in the nineties.

But Barcelona still retains the old, mad love of beauty. A young Catalan engineer devised a system of fountains and waterfalls for the exposition. At night an operator sat at a keyboard and played as though it were an organ. It was so beautiful that the managers of the exposition which is to be opened in Chicago in 1932, have employed the young Catalan to design fountain and illuminations for them.

Barcelona differs from all the world in one respect. It is the only city where taxi men are not allowed to take tips, and actually do refuse them. The drivers receive 20 per cent of what the taximeter registers.

Seville has taken the American pattern, too, but just around the corner she retains her very old yesterdays.

STREET cars, public gardens, traffic cops, factories, the harbor of the Guadalquiver river suddenly give way to chilly, narrow streets, sidewalks where only one can walk, jail-like houses with grated windows. An ambling green grocery goes by in bags and paniers placed on an ox. An orange vendor follows with his fruit shop on the back of an ass.

And the people themselves are different. The men wear black sombrettos and old Spanish cloaks lined with plum or velvet. The women wear mantillas and tortoise-shell combs.

But even here there are no longer serenades beneath the Andalusian moon. Along about midnight a barrel organ comes and plays and makes the thoroughfare throb with the pulsations of the latest popular Spanish songs.

But romance isn't what it used to be even here. Carmen, the beautiful cigaret maker of musical fame, is gone. Machinery makes the cigars and cigarets now, and old women sort the leaves.

The peasants often still plough their land with carts that look like museum pieces of a thousand years ago. But more than 10,000 miles of railroads, privately owned but subsidized by the state, add a touch that is distinctly twentieth century.

THERE is some unemployment in Spain, but it is not so great as in Great Britain and Germany. There are stiff taxes. A depreciated currency has resulted from a considerable war debt, because of the four-year campaign against the rebellious Riffs in Spain's part of Morocco. There is a high cost of living. There is a slump in some industries. Spain even speaks of the serious condition of her agriculture. She has fallen heir to every discomfort of modern days, along with the rest of Europe.

One of the most romantic stories of Spanish-American business relations concerns the telephone. Before Primo Rivera made himself dictator of Spain his country had one of the worst telephone services in Europe. People didn't try to call numbers when there was a chance that they could meet their party face to face. Romance over the wire wasn't thriving.

Six years ago President Behn of the International Telegraph and Telephone Company came over to Madrid with a great idea. He sold it to Rivera and then he sold it to the Spanish business men. He suggested that Spain have a nation-wide telephone service, under one head.

HE suited his thought to action. He promptly bought up every telephone company in Spain except one at San Sebastian, the great Spanish watering place, which still refuses to sell. He formed a Spanish company which issued 200,000,000 pesetas worth of seven per cent preferred stock, all to be held by Spaniards. The Americans took 50,000,000 pesetas of common stock.

Four of the nine directors are Americans, and the rest are Spanish. One vice president, an American, serves as general manager of the concern. Technical advisers are Americans.

A subsidiary company was formed which manufactures telephones in Madrid and telephone wires and cables in Santander. This company has given Spain the finest telephone service in Europe.

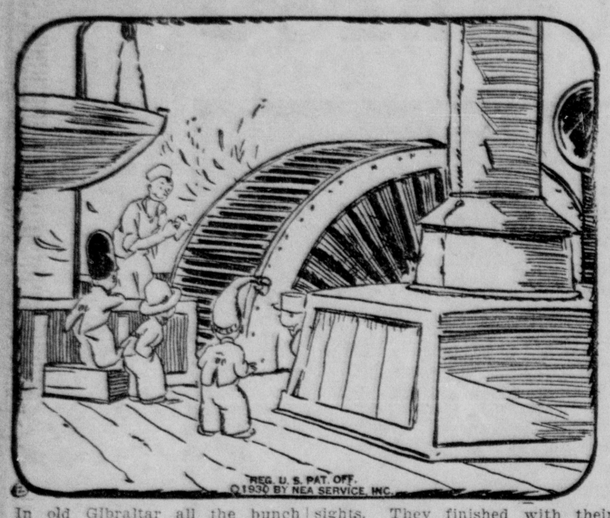

And all of these things in a land of which we are accustomed to think in terms of ox-carts and olives, matadors and Moorish ruins, senoritas and sentimental serenaders.

THE TINYMITES

REG. U. S. PAT. OFF.

In old Gibraltar all the bunch soon found a place to have some lunch. It was a real quaint looking place and just one story high. The Tinies sat up near the front and Scouty said, "It's quite a stunt to sit here in the window, watching people passing by."

Soon Clowny cried, "Look 'cross the street. There are some men I'd like to meet. I guess they all are soldiers from the uniforms they wear. As soon as we have had a bite, I wonder if 'twould be all right to walk right up and talk to them. I do not think they'd care."

"Well, son, that's just what we will do," replied the Travel Man, "and you will find those men are very nice. They're British navy men. A British warship's right near by. To see it we will shortly try. I understand they let folks board their warships, now and then."

Of course this thrilled the Tinymites, all anxious to see thrilling sights. They finished with their lunch real quick and shortly ran outdoors. Wee Clowny reached a sailor who smiled broadly and said, "Howdy do! Come out and visit on our ship." This brought forth merry roars.

The sailor took them all around and my, what wondrous things they found upon the great big battleship. Cried Coppy, "This is grand." The next thing that the Tinies knew, some sailors sang a song or two. The Tinymites did likewise. Then they all went back to land.

The Travel Man brought forth some cheers by saying, "We'll go to Algiers. A worthy tug will take us there and you'll enjoy the ride.' They soon were safely on the tug which started with a chug, chug, chug It was an interesting boat, with paddles on each side.

Missing Letter Links

RULES:

1. In playing golf on the Missing Letter Links the object is to change one word to another in a given number of strokes which is par. For example, to go from TEE to PIN in three strokes sounds hard but isn't: TEE-TIE-PIE-PIN. It's probably more difficult on a real course.
2. Change but one letter at a time and be sure the word you have used is one in good usage.
3. The order of the letters cannot be changed.

BOOT to SPUR—You should be able to gallop right through this letter links hole for a par four.

BOOK REVIEWS

of St. Michel. This book "The Shadow of the Sword," is about the heroism of an humble fisherboy who helped save the island of Mont Saint Michel from the English when they held the smaller island of Tombelaine, nearby. The title of the book is derived from the legend that when the shadow of the sword of St. Michel touches the sands, then that island will fall. The saying was well known to every fisherboy who risked his life around that rocky shore and amid the treacherous tides, who knew his way between the firm land and the quicksand when that great tide was out.

The young fisherboy, through his wit and daring, his loyalty and courage, rose to be a knight, and in those days of knights that was a great feat. At the crisic, when the English were pressing hard upon the defenses of the island, the sword pointed the right way of attack to Edmond, the fisherboy, then become soldier.

Not being at all informed on children's and boys' and girls' stories, the editor's note that this author's stories about English history have popularized several great periods is very interesting. If the others are as intriguing as "The Shadow of the Sword" an adult, having read "The Shadow of the Sword" can well anticipate the opportunity of reading the others. The story is a bit bloody, it could not be otherwise for it was the nature of that period of history. One becomes familiar with every part of the famous island of Mont Saint Michel, the sands, the drawbridge, the fortifications, the abbey, the dwellings of rich and poor, the shops, the long narrow street, the social customs of the period, the semi-serfdom of the people. It would probably just suit boys and girls from 13 to 16, unless at the latter age they too completely decry romance.

That a partial separation of grades be made on East Fourth Street between Poinsettia Street and Santa Fe Street, as said two last named streets exist northerly from Fourth Street, by the construction of an Underpass under the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railway Company's and the Southern Pacific Railroad Company's railroad tracks, respectively, said Underpass to be approximately 745 feet long and being 27 feet between sidewalls, with a minimum clearance of 12 feet, and shall be equipped with all necessary lights, drainage facilities, railroad and street bridging, and all other necessary appurtenances thereto; and the construction of surface pavement, sidewalks, curbs, culverts, driveways, relocation of Ornamental Street Lights, sanitary sewers, storm drains and all other necessary appurtenances thereto, necessary to accomplish said purpose.

Also the improvement of Santa Fe Street between First Street and Fourth Street by the construction of a concrete pipe storm drain thereon, together with all necessary appurtenances thereto, necessary to accomplish said partial separation of grades on East Fourth Street as aforesaid.

GROVE TO EXCHANGE

There's no reason why you shouldn't acquire this seven acre Valencia grove if you have a six room house or even a smaller grove to turn in. The 14-year-old trees that are on most of the acreage will be sufficient to support you and you can be perfectly comfortable in the pretty little modern six room bungalow. Paved roads are on both sides and water stock is owned. What do you think of it at $22,000.00 or should we have inflated the price a bit to entice you? No. 4636.

Orange Groves

TWENTY ACRES—Valencias just swinging into good production with the cream of productivity still ahead. Good crop on trees for 1931 market, first class improvements and interest in irrigation plant. This grove is located in one of the best citrus districts of the Anaheim area and will, we advisedly predict, rate as one of the consistent income producers of the district. A fairly-priced, clear residence will be considered as part of down payment or to buyer qualifying with not less than $15,000 cash, a favorable crop payment plan can be arranged on this excellent property.

TO GROVE BUYERS

With eighteen years of specialization in the selling and appraising of groves in the Anaheim district, and Orange county generally, we have not, at this time, the temerity to freely quote crop estimates on the groves we offer for sale. Our experience makes us certain that no real, satisfactory estimate of the growing citrus crop can be made until the fruit is fully colored and further matured and the element of fruit sizing more fully determined. We therefore decline, at this period of the citrus season, to freely furnish liberal crop estimates as an inducement to purchase. We will state, however, that there is a very good, well-distributed crop throughout the Anaheim district and this set of fruit is characteristic of most groves in this locality. The above advertised grove is but one of many of our grove listings of any of which you may procure, at this office, accurate and reliable information at any time.

SHERLOCK HOLMES—The Reigate Puzzle — A Shocking Incident — By SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE

"Now it was on those stairs," Holmes explained, "that young Mr. Cunningham stood and saw two men struggling just where we are. He saw the fellow get away to the left of that bush, and so did his father, at the window upstairs. They are both sure of it on account of the bush . . ."

As Holmes spoke two men came down the garden path from around the corner of the house—the Cunninghams, father and son. The one was an elderly man, with a strong, lined face and heavy eyes; the other a dashing young fellow. Alec Cunningham's bright, smiling expression and showy dress were in strange contrast with the business which had brought us there.

© 1930 By Sir Arthur Conan Doyle

"Still at it, then?" said Young Cunningham to Holmes. "I thought you Londoners were never at fault. You don't seem to be so very quick, after all."

"You'll want it," the other man returned. "Why, I don't see that we have any clue at all."

"There's only one clue," put in the Inspector. "We thought that if we could only find—Good Heavens, Mr. Holmes, what is the matter!"

Wherefore let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall.

—I CORINTHIANS, 10-12.

REVOLT IN RUSSIA (?)

From time to time rumors come out of Russia that the end of the Soviet rule is near. Just now, a series of articles is appearing in the New York Evening Post describing the terrible conditions that exist in the Soviet Republic. Strife between factions in the high councils of the State, discontent and mutiny among the peasants, dire distress among the workers, assassinations, and general disorder,—these are the reports that are coming out of Russia these days.

We hardly know what to believe amid the confusion of contradictory reports which are emanating from that country. But that things are not so bad as some of these alarmists would have us believe is evident from the latest dispatches to the New York Times by its correspondent in Moscow, Walter Duranty. Mr. Duranty is acknowledged to be the most reliable correspondent in Russia today. Always guarded in his statements, he nevertheless sends out impartial statements of the conditions which prevail in Russia.

In the Sunday edition of the New York Times, Mr. Duranty reports on the conditions which prevail and on the wild rumors of the imminent collapse of the Soviet rule. He points out that there is absolutely no evidence of anything alarming in Russia at the present time, that the rumors being published in the foreign press are wilder than anything that has yet been invented by the propaganda factories of Riga and Berlin. The foreign diplomats are entirely free from censorship. They have the fullest freedom to send coded messages to their governments, and their mail packages are sealed at the embassies. In addition, visas to leave the country are granted without restraint.

In view of all this, it is difficult to see that the government in Russia is destined for immediate fall. That there is hardship and distress cannot be gainsaid. But Russia is by no means the only country where there is distress. Our economic depression has desolated millions right here in this country. Moreover, the Russians know how to tighten their belts better than we, because they are accustomed to hardships. Their lot has never been anything but hard.

Mr. Duranty calls attention to the progress of the Five Year Plan, which he reports is moving on with greater success this year than last. A great grain crop is expected, enough to meet the needs of the country, and a surplus to export. If the Soviet government should fail, we shall certainly hear of it. Hazy and anonymous rumors will not be necessary in that event. Foreign governments will be appraised by their ambassadors, and Mr. Duranty will doubtless be among the first to cable the real facts.

DR. VAN DYKE SPEAKS

It is well known that Dr. Henry Van Dyke sees life through a rose-colored cloud. He is a great exponent of "sweetness and light." His writings are the very antithesis of the reporting-life-as-it-actually-is school which has been in the forefront of literature the last few years.

It was to be expected that Dr. Van Dyke would resent the Nobel award in literature. The other day he spoke before the Business Men's Association of Germantown, Pa. He said among other things that the Lewis novels do not "honestly represent the best in American literature."

In "Main Street," he said there isn't a girl with whom you would fall in love. It would be unfair to Dr. Van Dyke to conclude that a girl with whom one can fall in love is an ear mark of good literature, according to him. It is a characteristic of Dr. Van Dyke that literature without loveableness, and beauty, and idealism, and joy has little excuse for being. Literature according to Dr. Van Dyke's definition doesn't involve the mirroring of life as Sinclair Lewis sees it.

Dr. Van Dyke has written some very beautiful things, and at Christmas time particularly, people turn to him because few others have so well expounded the goodness and beauty and joy and yearnings of the Christmas season. Possibly Dr. Van Dyke writes as he does because he has not been touched with the cynicism and bitterness which characterize the writings of the moderns. The latter have seen life as they portray it, Dr. Van Dyk has seen it as he writes. Anything resembling a social case record does not come under Dr. Van Dyke's definition of literature.

The most reliable definition of literature would include both types of writing.

TOURISTS AND AMBASSADORS

The sizeable group of Santa Ana people leaving this city tonight for a good-will tour of Mexico carry the good reputation of the city in their hands for each one is a personal ambassador. Those who stay at home need have no fear that the city will be judged unfavorably, which would mean to be misjudged, with this group of men and women the representatives. They are among the finest citizens we have and no community could possibly have better representatives than our finest.

We are all glad that they are going and hoping that they will have a good journey. They will be missed in clubs, organizations, neighborhoods, and from the business district while they are away. They will have a warm welcome when they return.

Watching them depart, we are confident they will do their best for Santa Ana and Orange county.

THE POPULATION OF THE UNITED STATES

The census figures are out, and we learn that there were 122,775,046 persons in the United States the week the census was taken a short time ago. Every state but one increased its population. The one state losing was Montana. California made the largest gain, increasing its population from 2,250,390 in 1920 to 5,667,251 at the present time, a gain of 65.7 per cent. The next contender for the largest gain was Florida, with an increase of 51.5 per cent. The percentage of gain for the whole country was 16.1 per cent.

On the whole, the gain has been wholesome. The restriction of immigration during the past decade has been for the general good. It was rapidly becoming evident that we were too liberal in inviting people from other lands to our shores. A self-sufficient immigrant is an asset to the country. But there were too many coming who were destined to be a liability. By the process of selectivity, which is now going on through the consular agents at foreign ports, we are getting the choicest type of immigrant. It is more necessary that we look for quality than quantity in the people who come to share with us the great opportunities of this highly favored country.

PRIDE OF RACE

A Jew, at the point of death, in a London hospital has refused to submit to a blood transfusion which might save his life because the blood which would be injected into his veins would come from a Gentile.

If one of the writing profession had woven a romance around such a situation most of us would discount it as lacking in the essential atmosphere of reality which causes us to be absorbed in reading a story.

There are no people with the pride of race of the Jewish people. This desperately sick man in the London hospital has served to dramatize their pride. Not every Jew would go so far as this man, but at least every Jew can appreciate his feeling.

A Chief Has Been Taking Notes

New York Times

Mr. Chesterton's paradoxes are all the time diverting attention from those flashes of insight at which he has no superior. Such a triumphant thrust at the very heart of truth is his remark about Bernard Shaw's "Walt Whitman kind of nakedness, * * * like a German professor walking about in a German back-to-nature meeting in nothing but a pair of spectacles."

The reference is to Shaw, but the theoretical nakedness would have even greater relevance to the celebrated decade of the 1920s in America, whose arrival was marked, among other signal guns, by Sinclair Lewis, concerning whom Mr. Chesterton has something to say. The revolt against Main Street lost no time in passing into a revolt against Puritanism and toward the free pagan life. The pagan challenges kept the American welkin ringing virtually up to the time of the Wall Street panic last year. But despite the astonishing progress in emancipation and self-expression recorded in the literature and manners of the period, it was always plain that the American people were practicing a theoretical kind of nakedness.

It was a generation gone Walt Whitman in respect to celebrating itself—celebrating so loudly and insistently that any new psychologist would have diagnosed a paganism quite unsure of itself. For nearly ten years the American people practiced taking off its clothes grimly, with teeth clenched, though the effects in nudity were certainly impressive, with a very strong suggestion of "Gosh!" how they dreaded it.

Sure Enough, Clothes Do Affect Receptivity

San Francisco Chronicle

That the attire of an audience affects the receptivity of sound is the substance of a report put out by the Federal Bureau of Standards. If the audience is heavily swathed, the government expert informs us, performers find more force necessary to put their utterances across.

We have long suspected something of this kind and are glad to have our observations confirmed by a high authority. We hope the bureau experts will go further into the matter and clear up certain other of our observations.

For instance, not only does quantity of clothing affect the volume of music in an auditorium but cut and material seem to have a marked influence on the character of the composition.

Prevailing campus styles accord the best receptivity to a Weeks or a Vallee composition and react remarkably on the sax and trombone parts. Lavender and old lace bring out Mendelssohn or Stephen Foster with equal effect. A judicious mixture of black silk and modish evening dress calls for Brahms. An audience gleaming in white shoulders is very likely to produce Debussy's "Pellas and Melisande" or Strauss' "Salome."

While the Bureau of Standards is going into the phenomena of costume and sound receptivity it may as well go deep enough to disclose the entire relationship.

The Rose of Courtesy Is Needed In Senate

San Bernardino Sun

The story is told of J. Hamilton Lewis, senator-elect from Illinois, that when he was in the senate some years ago one of his political opponents took particular delight in "treating him rough." One day when the baiting had been particularly harsh, the dapper gentleman from Illinois rose, smiled, bent in a courtly bow, and said:

"When I draw my blade against my esteemed colleague, I always tip it with a rose."

Much of the senatorial debate in the last session was done with clubs and fists.

Hail, the Optimist

Pasadena Star-News

Many mock at and ridicule the person who is habitually optimistic and cheerful. But there is much more reason to mock at and ridicule the pessimist, the calamity-croaker and the gloom-dispenser. Human life, day by day, has much more that is bright, and encouraging, and cheering in it than things to sadden or discourage. This is true of the average person. There are exceptions, of course. But the person who dispenses discouragement and gloom usually is an able-bodied person, suffering no great misfortune and able—if he applied himself—to make good in life. It is a grand old heritage—this life—and it is a grand old world in which we live. Optimism, and hope, and good cheer are justified.

More Truth Than Poetry

By James J. Montague

BACK TO NATURE

Where sheep and cows could graze—
A place that had the pleasant charm
Of old Colonial days,
With barns that burst with hay and grain,
Which I could view with pride,
And verdant slopes of sky and plain
That stretched on every side,
And I could sit beside the gate
Where flowering vines ran riot,
And purple licacs bloomed, and wait
Till some one came to buy it.

An old-time house I'd like to own
With columns tall and white
And walls of gray and mossy stone—
A grand imposing sight.
I'd like to stand upon the porch,
In cool white garments dressed
And watch the sun, a ruddy torch,
Sink slowly in the west.
I'd make the place a lovely spot,
I'd furnish and restore it,
And then I'd wait until I got
A decent offer for it.

I've always longed for an estate
With curving roads that wound
Beyond a massive iron gate,
Tall stately trees around.
When through the countryside I roam
Upon an autumn day,
I covet every splendid home
I see beside the way,
For old and noble piles that stand
Where fields are bright and sunny,
Although they're sold at second-hand
Will bring a lot of money.

GETTING WABBLY

Law enforcement appears to be in need of re-enforcement.

THEY KNOW

THEIR TURN

Now a special session of Congress for the relief of the stock brokers will probably have to be called.

The Fourth Plain Fact

By WILLIAM TRUFANT FOSTER and WADDILL CATCHINGS

Four plain facts must be taken into account before a cure can be found for this business depression. Three of these plain facts we have stated in the last three days.

The fourth plain fact is this: The United States already has enough production facilities to provide jobs for everybody, and to maintain a standard of living even higher than the highest yet attained.

Many men, it is true, insist that the chief problem of the country is how to increase our savings. But from the national standpoint that is no problem at all. Already we have piled up more savings in the form of capital equipment than we have found out how to use.

HOW TO MAKE USE OF OUR SAVINGS IS THE REAL PROBLEM.

In many cases the unsued productive capacity is notorious—textiles, coal, iron, cotton, wheat, leather, automobiles, shoes, lumber, cement, to go no further.

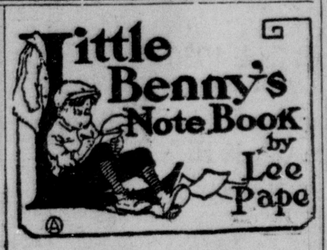

Some wastes of capital cannot, of course, be prevented. Some of our machinery is too costly to use because it is obsolete. Some is unused, at times, because it is needed only to carry peak loads, or is designed to take care of growth. Still other capital suddenly becomes useless because fashions change, or because some industry—like the textile industry today—becomes RELATIVELY over-equipped.

But all industries cannot be RELATIVELY over-equipped at the same time. It is fact that at the present time nearly all industries—not merely exceptional ones, but nearly all—are equipped to produce the very goods which people want, in larger amounts than people can buy.

In short, we have saved with prodigality. We are WASTING our savings; but it is only in so far as we USE our savings that we make progress.

Little Benny's Note Book by Lee Pape

WALL PAPER

If somebody asked you what kind of wall paper youve got in the diffrent rooms in your house you would proberly haff to stop and think a long while and then run in and look.

This proves the more you see things the less you notice them, making you miss a lot in case your house is full of pritty things such as gilt chairs and cut glass bowls but being lucky for you in case you happen to be a fellow with about 9 funny looking sisters.

Ladies are more sensitive about wall paper than what men are, and if your mother and father suddenly woke up in the morning and their room had a diffrent kind of wall paper your mother would proberly be the ony one that noticed it.

This proves why your father always looks more serprised than glad when your mother tells him any part of the house needs papering.

One way to keep up your intrist in wall paper would be to have about 4 diffrent kinds in one room for variety or elts to have jokes and funny pictures all over it.

Most fellows have a ambition to paper their own room with covers off of magazines, proberly being a good thing for them they are generelly not encouraged to do it because they would proberly get tired when it was ony part ways done and haff to spend the rest of their life making up excuses for not finishing it.

Paper hangers leed a happy life splashing paint all over themselfs and not caring. When they get up neer the ceeling they have to use a board between 2 ladders. For this reason it mite be easy for titerope wawkers to paper their own houses.

In the Long Ago

From The Register Files 14 Years Ago Today

NOVEMBER 29, 1916

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Duggan and daughter Dorothy and Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Hewitt and little Elizabeth of Los Angeles spent yesterday in Redlands.

A burglar who broke into the Santa Ana high school building Saturday night stole about $26 in money and got away with a number of keys to rooms and lockers.

Last night .15 inches of rain fell, bringing the season's total to 3.40, according to S. Hill and Son's records.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. McNeil and family, 322 East Chestnut avenue, entertained last Friday evening in honor of Glen E. Sturdevant who returned recently from the border with Company L.

City Superintendent J. A. Cranston has returned from a trip to San Diego where he attended a school fair at the exposition, which was held Thursday, Friday and Saturday of last week.

Mrs. J. B. Roberts read an interesting paper at the meeting Saturday of the Santa Ana chapter, D. A. R., held in the home of Mrs. J. N. Bartholomew, 640 North Broadway.

Thoughts On Modern Life

By GLENN FRANK

THE CONQUEST OF STRAIN

It is a truism that it is not work but worry that kills.

As I write, I mentally call the roll of men I know who go to their work with an air of nervous and physical exhaustion, and not one of them is carrying an unusual load either of responsibility or of work.

Virtually all of the men I know who are carrying unusually heavy responsibilities and doing an enormous amount of work have a look of health and a lightness of heart that make them welcome visitors in any circle.

James Gordon Gilkey, in his Solving Life's Everyday Problems, suggests four ways to conquer the sense of strain that kills a hundred men for every one that overwork breaks down viz:

First, we must stop pitying ourselves.

If we convince ourselves that our job is impossible, that our schedule of duties is beyond our power of execution, that the breaks are all going against us, we fall into a habit of self-pity that renders us impotent.

Second, we must arrange our tasks intelligently.

If we should list in advance every duty and every deed we have to face and do in a month, we could easily convince ourselves that no human being could carry such a load. But granted an intelligent organization of our time and work we should discover at the end of the month that we had probably done twice as many things as we had listed. It is when we fail to attack crisply and in organized fashion our work that our work rides us instead of our riding our work, and a sense of overstrain appears.

Third, we must overlook trivial annoyances.

Nine times out of ten when we feel strain and worry at the end of the day, it is due not to a major problem but to a minor annoyance.

Fourth, we must decline to assume responsibility for situations we cannot control, for we but squander precious energy in worrying over situations that are beyond our control anyway.

Here, again, I submit are four counsels that the nation would do well to take to heart as it faces the current economic situation. Let's stop pitying ourselves. With our resources and our genius for organization, our heads should be up. Let's stop moaning about depression in general, and attack crisply and in organized fashion a few elementary issues such as higher wages, shorter hours, and lower prices that will lift the buying power of the American masses and before long we shall wonder why we suffered depression in the midst of plenty. Let's stop worrying about minor dark spots in our business statistics, reserving our energies for the few major problems which we can and must solve. Let's not waste our energy on wory about situations beyond our control, but center our energies on the few basic economic situations we can correct if we will.

OUR CHILDREN

By ANGELO PATRI

THE DOG EARED BOOK

"We have given the children a good library. Aren't they beautiful books?"

They certainly were. There was an encyclopedia for children, a fine set of reference books if ever there was one, all shining in a row. There was a set of stories, beautifully written, carefully edited, masterfully illustrated, all sitting in immaculate gray-blue binding. And there was a school dictionary, one of those that make you long to look at words and more words, so clearly are they printed, so easy are they to look at. And poetry for children, and magic maps. A lovely library. And so shiny, and so well protected from dust—and use.

"We teach them to take great care of them. Of course they never touch them unless we are about to see that they use them properly. They are such lovely books. It would be a shame to destroy them."

Isn't there a land between use and destruction? What use is the closed book? What use is the library that shines behind glass doors? It may give the adults pleasure to see the neat rows but it won't give the children any joy or any help or any love of books.

A few books that the child uses best. There should be an old Bible, perfectly enormous, with colored pictures and maps, that the child drags down on the floor and lies there, flat on his front, for hours, studying the pictures and reading the stories that explained them.

There should be an unabridged dictionary that is a mine of pictured wisdom, one the child pulls down to his level on the floor and plays all sorts of games with. It is surprising how many animals with horns you can find in that book, and how many men with things in their hands, and birds, and buildings. You can find the answer to a lot of questions if you have the run of an old dictionary and an inquiring mind.

The Devine Comedy was my delight. It belonged to my father and he was fond of it. But that did not prevent my dragging it down to my childish level of the floor and wearing its pages thin. And today, all through my work and my play and my idleness there runs the memory chain that was forged of that old book.

I have that one still what is left of it—yellow, dog-eared in places, battered and marked with the struggle that brought it to my level. I would let you have any other book I possess rather than a leaf of it. In it, through it, about it lies the growth of the child that was I.

If you give a child a book, give it to him. If he uses it, you will know it is his book. If he leaves it shut behind a glass door you will know that it is no relation to him. A child's book is generally worn out. Isn't that what he has it for?

ON THE SIDELINES

Which may or may not be in accord with the views of The Register

By Horace McPhee

ARIZONA MOURNS.—It's all off with Arizona now. Zane Grey, who seems to have gotten the idea that he is personally responsible for the Grand Canyon being where it is, has shaken the dust of Arizona from his feet and vowed that "live or die," "survive or perish," the state must in future get along without him.

And all this because he was not permitted a hunting license at certain periods of the year when the law forbade their issuance. From a cursory view one would judge that Mr. Zane Grey has been spoiled by adulation. Just why he should think that the game laws of Arizona should be abrogated if and when they interfere with his plans is not quite clear.

But, in any event, Arizona will have to get along some way without Zane Grey for he is going over to New Mexico, there to make his home.

"IN SELF DEFENSE."—Many of us are able to recall the time when the railways of this country, without exception, had an iron clad rule which set forth that an employe who drank any intoxicating liquor whilst on duty thereby earned his dismissal.

Later the rule was changed and no one who used intoxicants was employed. And now the railways of Europe have embarked upon a program which is stated to be one to dry up Europe so far, at least, as the railways are concerned. The campaign with this end in view started in Paris, France, with a monster meeting of men dependent upon railways for a livelihood.

Sixty thousand railroad men belonging to 15 nations, grouped as the International Federation of Anti-Alcoholic societies, are sponsoring the movement primarily as a "safety first" measure.

Each member has pledged himself to be a total abstainer, except in France and Germany, where wine and beer are permitted "if consumed in extreme moderation."

The countries represented are France, Germany, Great Britain, Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Poland, Jugoslavia, Finland, Belgium, Austria and Czecho-Slovakia.

"TWAS INDEED TERRIBLE.—It goes without saying that any man who is willing to work should be given a job. We can, and we should, all do a little to that end, for it is saddening beyond words to see a man who had no other idea than that of honestly earning a living debarred from so doing because he can get no work. Let us hope that we have very few such persons as Bill, who figures in the following little story which comes from the Central Illinois magazine:

"Hello, Bill, I haven't seen you for weeks! But what's wrong? You're lookin' seedy. Been ill?"

"No. I ain't been ill, it's work what's doin' the harm—work from eight in the mornin' till six at night, and only one hour off. Think of it!"

"Awful! And how long have you been there?"

"I ain't been there yet. I begin tomorrow."
